THOMAS B. HIDDEN, who owns 14, 16, 20 and 22 East 45th st, has purchased the intervening parcel, 18, from Rose B. Scognanmillo. Mr. Hidden now controls a plot 102x100.5, improved with five 4-sty dwellings. Mr. Hidden is also the owner of the six abutting houses at 15 and 23 to 31 East 44th st at the northwest corner of Madison av. A 16-ft. dwelling at 21, owned by Samuel P. Colt, separates the six houses. The abutting dwelling at 350 Madison av also belongs to Mr. Hidden. The combined parcels form one of the largest properties under one ownership in the immediate vicinity, and may be improved in the near future with a tall structure.

FILING OF DEEDS on Monday made known further details regarding the $1,300,000 purchase of B. N. Duke, reported last week. In part payment for the 12-sty apartment house at the southwest corner of 7th av and 58th st, he gave Dr. Charles V. Paterno, the two apartment house known as the "Marc Antony" and the "Prince Humbert" at 214-220 Cathedral Parkway, on plot 200x70, between Broadway and Amsterdam av. These structures were built by Dr. Paterno and were sold to Mr. Duke through A. C. & L. A. Marks, in May, 1913. In that deal Dr. Paterno took in exchange property at 5th av and 86th st, which he subsequently resold to V. Everit Macy and Carl D. Jackson.

JOSEPH P. DAY under the direction of William R. Willcox, as trustee, and Peter B. Olney, a referee in bankruptcy, sold on Thursday, in the Vesey Street Salesroom, 157 acres at Flushing, L. I., owned by the Interborough Realty Company. Hilton, for the Rickert-Finlay Realty Co., for $500 above a mortgage of $104,443; the Bowne tract, of about 55 acres, running Bayside av to Mitchell av from 16th to 24th sts, for $600 above a mortgage of $75,000 to L. J. Phillips & Co., for a client, and the Carrahar tract, of about 7 acres, on Bayside av, from Murray lane to the center of proposed Boerum av, for $2,000 above a mortgage of $24,718 to Harry Goldolsky. The bids aggregated $3,100 above the mortgage encumbrances of $204,252.34.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Buying in the Manhattan and the Bronx sales-rooms was confined in the main to plaintiffs and other parties in interest, who obtained 34 of the 45 offerings. Five sales were withdrawn or adjourned, and six properties went to outside buyers. The Republic of Panama, under the title of the Fifty Central Park West Corporation, as plaintiff in foreclosure proceedings, became the owner of the 12-story apartment house at the south corner of Central Park West and 65th street, known as the Prasada. The sale came as the result of an action brought against the Apartment Holding Co. and others, to recover a judgment of $729,907.90 and back taxes of $23,885. Bidding started at $635,000, and the property was finally struck down for $711,000 by Henry Brady. Among the outside buyers at the voluntary sales held by Bryan L. Kennelly were William Lustgarten, who paid $17,750 for the dwelling at 130 East 118th street; S. A. Jones, who bought 418 West 145th street, a four-story dwelling, for $11,000, and Mary Wehnen, who obtained 409 East 169th street on a bid of $13,400.

For the coming week, a number of valuable properties will be offered, including a miscellaneous assortment of holdings in nearly all sections of the city. Joseph P. Day will sell among other properties the Longacre Theatre in West 48th street, and loft buildings in West 22d street and East 41st street. Bryan L. Kennelly will offer an eight-story mercantile structure in West 4th street besides a number of Bronx lots.

The other auctioneers will sell the usual variety of holdings being foreclosed, with dwellings and tenements comprising the bulk of the offerings.

THE PANIC OF 1907

Dullness of business since—

The delay in the adoption of the Rapid Transit System and in the completion of the N. Y., Westchester and Boston R.R., prevented the buyers of the Pearsall Estate from carrying out their intention of developing and building on the property.

SINCE THAT TIME

Ten of them have died—

Their heirs, executors and trustees insist on the sale of the property at once.

THAT IS WHY IT HAS GOT TO BE SOLD

DECORATION DAY

NEEDS IN LOWER BROADWAY LOFT SECTION

By AARON RABINOWITZ, President of Spear & Co.

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager For The American Real Estate Co.

IF the wholesale section is to realize its possibilities, the old structures must be replaced by thoroughly modern new buildings of large area. The requirements of the new building, factory and labor laws are such that only large buildings can meet the new demands satisfactorily and justify the large initial cost.

The changes and reforms that the new Tenement House Laws have brought about in the construction of tenements and modern apartment houses have their parallel in buildings intended for manufacturing purposes. The construction of such buildings is needed for a complete rehabilitation of the district, and should be the means of steadily enhancing values.

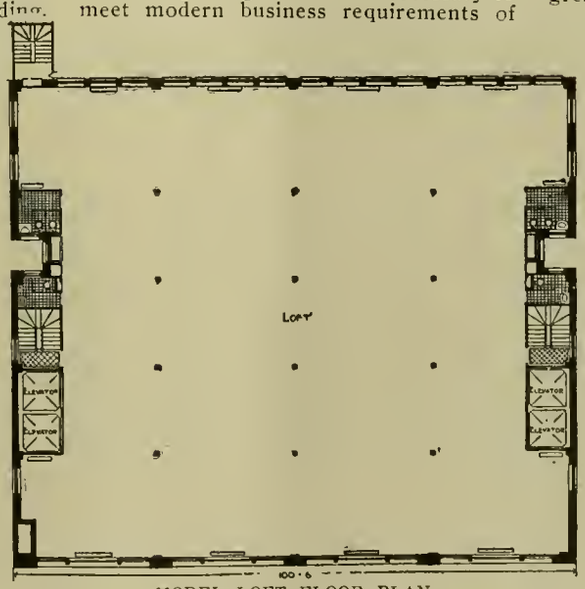
Precedents are not lacking on the main line of travel, of prosperous growth, depression, and a renewal of activity. As far back as 1863 upon the site of the St. Paul Building at the corner of Broadway and Ann streets, stood Barnum's Museum. It was then the center of a great retail trade. This trade moved to Canal street and as a consequence Barnum applied for a reduction of the assessment of $250,000. The land alone is at present assessed at $950,000—almost four times the amount of the old assessment. It is not intended to predict a like soaring of values, but it is not unreasonable to expect the old law of readjustment to assert itself.

The district calls for the erection of buildings for manufacturing purposes. It must remain distinctly a mercantile district. The shipping and transportation facilities, the accessibility to labor, and other elements are the decisive factors in fixing its character.

The model loft building is as much in demand as the model tenement. Its essentials can be best provided in large buildings. It is a matter of common knowledge that the larger the building, the lower the proportionate cost of operation. The large building makes possible small and large units and lends itself to the meeting of the expanding needs of tenants. It attracts the large tenant, and such as are financially responsible. Modern scientific business management demands thorough supervision. Labor and commodities must be kept under such close observation as can be assured only by single large areas.

Loft Building Requirements.

The essentials of the model loft building are: (1) light and air, (2) heavy construction (3) large single areas that can be easily adjusted to the needs of smaller tenants, (4) elimination of columns, (5) ample utilities such as elevators, etc., properly arranged, (6) fire protection, (7) adequate coal bunkers, (8) proper placing of boilers and machinery, (9) roof space available for employees.



Light and air are the factors surpassing all others in importance. Where there is sufficient light there will be ample air. Natural light is important not only from the standpoint of economy but also because it commands the higher grade of employees. It reduces the problem of renting to a minimum. It is not necessary to sacrifice either architectural beauty or space; but where this is done, it may be considered fully justified. A contrast is afforded by the old Post Office building in New York and the Packard Building in Long Island City. In the one case the numerous pillars intended to give architectural beauty only serve to cut off light and air, and to make the building hideous within and without. In the other case, as much of the façade as possible is given up to windows, kept flush with the building wall. Only tradition limits large windows to the studio building.

AARON RABINOWITZ.

The heavy construction would be designed to meet the varying needs of the tenants, it would make the building suitable for the housing of heavy machines and would prevent vibration and incidental damage to the property. The carrying capacity of floors per square foot should be increased from the usual 120 lbs. to 250 lbs. per square foot. The greater initial cost is offset by the economy in the upkeep of the building as well as the increased possibilities in the matter of renting.

The large single areas are necessary to meet modern business requirements of substantial firms. Economy in time and in supervision are thus obtained by the tenant. Tenants will not occupy two or more floors when it is possible to obtain the requisite space on a single floor. These large floor spaces are adapted to the use of smaller tenants wherever necessary and greatly simplify the renting problem.

MODEL LOFT FLOOR PLAN.

Elimination of Columns.

The advantages of large single areas can only be fully availed of by the elimination of columns, or by such an arrangement of columns as will enable the owner to meet the changing requirements of tenancy through suitable and easily adjusted subdivision of lofts. A suitable and easily adjusted subdivision of lofts will also require that the utilities, that is to say the elevators, stairways, halls and toilets, be so arranged that access to them will not be cut off by subdivision.

The problem of arrangement of columns and elevators has been met in a building of one hundred foot front in the following manner: Two complete sets of utilities, including passenger and freight elevators, are ranged on either side of the building. Twelve columns are placed in three rows of four columns each, the centre row running through the center line of columns where the loft division of the loft the fireproof partition required by law can be placed along the centre line of columns where the loft is subdivided, the sprinkler system and sprinkler heads can be so arranged as not in any way to be interfered with by such partition. In effect, we have two buildings, distinct units, complete, as nearly perfect as possible. For the purposes of illustration we submit a floor plan of a building in our charge that is always kept fully rented. Such a plan makes every square part of space available.

The new building should have installed a sprinkler system of the most approved type, acceptable to the New York Fire Insurance Exchange and for which they will allow a reduction of one-half of the insurance rates. Every tenant shares in the saving accruing from this large reduction of insurance rates. This arrangement should include the fire alarm which automatically and promptly notifies the central station of the opening of a sprinkler head. This reduces damage by water as well as by fire to a minimum. The lessening of the danger to human life as well as property is as great as it is obvious.

A conscientious compliance with the requirements of the building and labor laws in the proper provision for means of egress, use of fireproof material in construction, etc., does not add materially to the cost of construction and yet in some cases are distinct factors in the saving of cost of maintenance.

Coal Supply.

There are few buildings in New York with coal bunkers that will hold more than one week's supply of coal. The lesson of recent experience is plain. There were numerous instances where the heavy snowfall delayed the delivery of coal, crippling plants, and forcing them to shut down. It should be a comparatively simple matter to provide bunkers that will hold at least a month's supply of coal.

The boiler room and machinery formerly as a rule placed, as a matter of course, in the rear, should be placed in the front of the building.

As in the case of the model tenement, the space on the roof should be utilized. The disastrous experiences of lower Fifth avenue can be avoided by an attempt to meet the social requirements of the employees and thus relieve as far as possible the noon-day crowding on the business thoroughfares.

In our opinion there can be no intelligent planning without the advice and assistance of the building manager. The day has passed when the owner and architect can exclude him from their councils. His advice is needed in matters affecting the arrangement of floors, columns and elevator plant.

World's Largest Statuary Here.

THERE is being completed at the plant of William Bradley & Son, in Long Island City, the last figures of a group of statuary that is said to outclass in size any piece of stone carving of its kind ever done in any part of the world in modern times. Some of these pieces of statuary are illustrated herewith by courtesy of "Stone," but a description of the colossal pieces is necessary in order that the reader may obtain a proper perspective of the scope of this piece of stone carving.

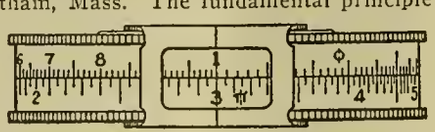
This group is being carved out of rough Indiana limestone and ultimately will form the adornment of the huge clock that will find its place in the 42d street facade of the great Grand Central terminal, opposite Park avenue. This clock is expected to surpass in size that of any other in the city, with the exception of the one in the Metropolitan tower. It will measure 13 feet across its face. The Metropolitan clock measures 15 feet. This clock will rest upon an elaborate floral decoration, and will be surmounted and surrounded by three symbolic figures, all of which were modeled by Jules Coutan, of Paris. The models, though huge themselves, will only be one-third the size of the finished group which is indicated by the comparatively diminutive model just seen in the background of the cut depicting the figure "Industry."

The center figure in the group will be Mercury, the ancient god of Travel, and behind him will tower an enormous eagle whose outstretched wings form the background of the entire group. Opposite "Industry" on the right of the clock will be a heroic statue of a woman in a thoughtful attitude, symbolizing intelligence. Near her are compasses, a globe, book and pencil.

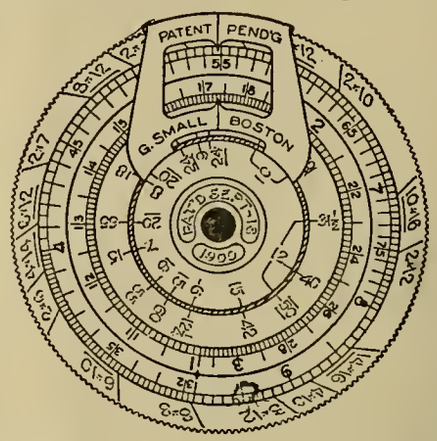
Looked at close at hand in the Bradley shops the figures tower what seems to be like stories above the head of the vistor. The blocks of stone and the ladder in the background give some comparative size of the figure "Industry." As a matter of fact, the extreme length and height of the group are 66 by 48 feet. The height of the central standing figure of Mercury is 27 feet 6 inches, while the length of his right arm is 11 feet. The wings of the eagle measure from tip to tip 34 feet 4 inches, and the weight of the entire group is 1,500 tons, which is the equivalent of more than 20,000 feet of stone.



No marble is employed in the figure at any part. It is all Indiana limestone of exceptionally fine quality, which is the same material that the entire exterior of this terminal is laid up with. On the authority of the Bradley company the largest block of stone used in executing this remarkable piece of statuary was 12 feet 4 inches by 4 feet by 12 feet 4 inches. The stone came from the quarries of the Indiana Quarries Company at Bedford, Ind. The final carving is being done by Donnelley & Ricci under a sub-contract.

Hollow Building Block Patent.

THE Patent Office at Washington has awarded to Ferinand Buchartz, 17 Battery place, a patent on a new hollow building block and method of making it. The patent has been assigned to the Building Improvement Co., a corporation of this city. The patent rights cover the method of making hollow building blocks of plastic material which consists in extruding plastic material through a die to form a tube of polygonal or circular cross section, cutting said tube into desired lengths and then cutting away a portion from each end of the severed lengths to form integral extensions of the polygonal or circular body portion, and then, while the material is still plastic, bending said extensions over the open ends of said body portion, then baking or firing the block.



A Convenient Calculator.

ARCHITECTS and others having calculations to make of a complicated mathematical character will find convenient a small calculator being introduced by Small, Small & Co., of Waltham, Mass. The fundamental principle in its design is that for a slide rule or a logarithmic graduation of the scales. This arrangement and shape are shown in the circular illustration.

The letters indicate the different scales, which are as follows: S, 6-in. scale for distances on plans, obtained by rolling the instrument along the line. The scale is graduated in eighths of an inch, while the milling on the edge is in thirty-seconds of an inch; A, sines of angles greater than 5 deg. 44 min.; B, reciprocals of numbers on C-scale, used for polyphase short-cuts; C and D, ordinary scales for multiplication and division, similar to those on straight slide rules; E, square roots of numbers on D-scale having even numbers of digits; F, square roots of numbers on D-scale having odd numbers of digits; G, rectangular wooden beams. When the right-hand edge runner coincides with the slant line on the beam-scale the cross hair is on the corresponding section modulus on the D-scale, and vice versa. H and I are standard steel I-beam scales, H, giving the depth in inches and I the weight in pounds per linear foot. Read section modulus in the same manner as for wooden beams.

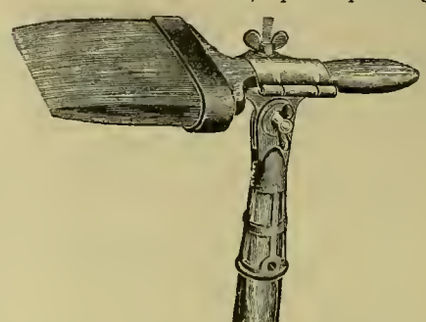
Ventilating Through Furniture.



THERE are always waste surfaces in living-rooms that might be put to beneficial use, and it has remained for the Wooden Ventilator Company, of East Palestine, Ohio, to commercialize it. This company's specialty is the manufacture of wooden ventilators, as its name implies, but instead of putting the ventilator in the wall, where it constantly advertises its presence by its conspicuousness, the vent is cleverly placed in a corner seat, in the ornamentation of a sideboard, a china closet, a music-rack, bookcase or in a grill over or under the bathroom window. The illustration shows how a corner window-seat in a living-room has been made to serve two purposes, a snuggle-nook and a source of fresh air.

An Extension Paint Brush.

WHEN renovating work has to be executed in a space of time so short that it does not permit of the erection of a scaffold, quick painting work can be done in inaccessible places without the use of horses, ladders or platforms by the use of an extension brush holder that is being introduced by Samuel Nelson, 1748 Grace street, Chicago.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

MODEL OFFICE AND LOFT STRUCTURES

Improvement of Old Victoria Hotel Site a Notable Addition to Fifth Avenue Colony—Building in 31st Street Embodies all Latest Devices.

SOME remarkable calculations have been devised by Frank Goodwillie, of Wallis & Goodwillie, architects, 56 West 45th street, for the twelve-story mercantile building to be erected at 31-37 East 31st street, by the 31 East 31st Street Realty Company, Inc., George Backer, president. The plot has ground dimensions of 85.8 x 98.9 feet, and will occupy the entire area less a 14.9 foot court in the rear. The façade is of Gothic design, with limestone up to the third story, light colored face brick and limestone trimmings above.

Mr. Goodwillie believes that the factory regulations, affecting the construction, which are included in the recent State Labor Law, are proper and useful; that factory and light manufacturing buildings can be designed to meet these requirements without entailing extra cost or loss of rental area. That the development of the fire tower or fire-escape in any form at the rear of the building is extravagant, as it necessitates a waste of space on the first floor for a fire passage to the street, and loss of daylight in each loft where it is most required.

In planning loft buildings machinery can be placed with the aisles opening at right angles to the light (in the rear) so that operators may have proper light. The boiler room should be in front of the cellar as this is the least desirable space for the tenant, owing to insufficient light and ventilation from bulkhead windows. Light generally coming from the rear of the building is very much more useful for the tenant. Boiler and coal storage being in the front is more economical in the use of space and reduces the necessity for handling. The congestion on the streets at noon, which has in some localities become unbearable, would be reduced if the owners of loft buildings would provide a proper lunch and rest room on the roof of buildings for the occupants and provide for open-air recreation.

By a slight enlargement in the size of the stair landings, utilizing otherwise useless space, Mr. Goodwillie adds to the number of operatives allowed by law for each floor. The owner is benefited by this new law, provided he takes the necessary precautions, and provided further that his architect uses his best efforts to solve the problem, recognizing the bread and butter necessities of good return on investment, the safety necessity of protecting the working people, and adding to the pride or credit of the tenant in occupying a good building. A tenant occupying a building so designed is relieved from the constant annoyances of making incessant changes due to frequent demands of the departments hitherto having jurisdiction.

The fire tower is so planned that those wishing to leave the building pass into an outside vestibule, which is open to the outside air; from this vestibule to the fire-tower platform descending to the exit on the first floor, which is outside the main entrance doors of the building. There is no objection to making these buildings fireproof, as the additional cost of fireproof material over the old method of wood floors and trim is so slight that the difference in cost is soon absorbed in the cost of maintenance, the entire fireproof building being cheaper to maintain. This plan allows under the law an occupancy to 176 persons per floor, which is within two persons of the total number that might be employed under any circumstances for the total given floor area of the loft, allowing 32 square feet for each person as required by the law. Provision is made on the roof of over one-half the area of the building for a rest and lunch room with kitchen attached, also a room for exercising, with necessary toilets. Elevators and staircases are carried to the roof and the balance of the roof is open to the air, and tiled for open-air recreation. The cost is placed at $300,000.

is the 230 Fifth Avenue Corporation (Johnson-Kahn Company), which last year built a similar structure on the site of the old Martin Restaurant one block below.

The building under construction was designed by Schwartz & Gross, architects, 347 Fifth avenue, and occupies practically the entire plot with an area of about 20,000 square feet. This plot has a frontage of 62 feet on Fifth avenue, 254 feet in 27th street and 106 feet on Broadway. Manufacturing of any kind will not be permitted in the building.

The structure has been designed with a minimum of columns. On the Fifth avenue front there is a clear floor space of 40 by 40 feet, with a similar arrangement on the Broadway side. The structural steel for the building was designed by Laurence A. Ball, consulting engineer, who estimates the amount of steel necessary to be in the neighborhood of about five thousand tons. The foundations of the building, consisting of reinforced concrete piles, were installed in a most unusual manner, while the old building was being demolished.

In design the building is Gothic, and the fronts will have a base of Quincy granite and the stories above will be of matt glazed terra cotta and glazed brick. Eleven high-speed electric elevators will be installed and the car doors, and all hatchways will be provided with the latest safety devices for the control of elevator cars and the prevention of accidents. In the 27th street front a driveway sixty feet in width is being provided, so as to allow for the speedy and economical handling of freight, and also to reduce as far as practical sidewalk obstruction. Four additional elevators will connect this driveway with the cellar. In addition to these, the latest designed package chutes and freight-handling devices will be installed.

The driveway and shipping-room in the cellar, directly beneath, will be enclosed on all sides with enamel brick. The first floor will be arranged for stores. Upon this floor there will be an entrance and arcade, extending from Broadway, through to Fifth avenue, which will be nineteen feet in width. The entrance hall will be finished in rich marbles and mosaics and the elevator doors and enclosures will be of bronze. The building will have five stairways, four of which will be entirely enclosed and arranged in smokeproof towers, and one outside stairway reached from two different points of the building. A sprinkler system with one hundred per cent. efficiency will be installed, and all doors and window frames and sash will be of steel or copper. Floors throughout the building are to be of cement and will be coated with approved dust-proofing compound.

Low Bid For Tri-Borough Subway.

The Public Service Commission, 154 Nassau street, opened bids this week for section 2, route 20, of the Tri-Borough Subway route. The New York Central will run a special train from Chicago on the evening of June 17, which will carry large delegations from the South and pick up large contingents en route. There will be the usual representative attendance from the hardwood producing sections of the Southwest and Nashville lumbermen, who are on a "boost" trip, will include the Buffalo convention in their itinerary.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

MANUFACTURERS ANTICIPATE RUSH OF BUYING MOVEMENT IF INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION GRANTS FREIGHT INCREASE

Crude Petroleum Makes Decided Drop in Prices — Brick Firmer

ADVICES from manufacturing centers indicate an impending improvement in building material purchases in the metropolitan district in particular and elsewhere in general. The intimation given out about ten days ago that the Interstate Commerce Commission might be expected to hand down its decision in the asked-for five per cent. increase in freight rates seems to have filled distributors of material with a keen desire to anticipate the rush that they think is sure to come if the railroads' petition is granted.

But coupled with the inquiry is a feeler on credits. Dealers are particularly interested in this state of the market. Should the decision be favorable and yet the date of effectiveness of the order be deferred three or six months, it would mean tying up large sums the interest on which plus carrying charges would more than eat up the saving made by coming into the market under the existing freight rates. As a matter of fact, in some lines, especially lumber, cement, common brick and some building supplies, the mill reserve stocks are large.

With a weak buying market it has been hard to move these stocks fast enough to keep factories going more than 60 per cent. of capacity and in some cases organizations have had to be sacrificed temporarily. In some lines, lumber and common brick particularly, decided sacrifices have had to be made to move this stock at all, and so there was general rejoicing all along the line when an improvement in inquiry was noted. The disposition of the mill men seems to be to meet the prospective wholesale buyer half way, and if this attitude is maintained the dealer will find it easy to come in and replenish his supplies.

In the meantime the consumer, who ultimately pays the freight, will be more inclined to consider going ahead with his plans if he sees a chance to bring his materials to his job and save the extra freight charge or, at least, avoid the delay in shipments that seems sure to follow the receipt of an affirmative answer to the railroads' plea for higher rates.

It was pointed out at the Building Material Exchange this week that should the rate be granted and the date of its effectiveness be even as late as January 1, crops would be moved in the interim, resulting in the usual shortage of cars. If, during that time, all the building material dealers in the country crowded the mills for supplies, delays in shipments would be sure to follow, with the result that fall building operations would be seriously interfered with.

Coincidentally, lumber is moving easier in Queens and Brooklyn, while East New Jersey is taking a larger quantity of Portland cement than formerly. The American Steel & Wire Co. reports receipt of specifications on a larger average daily rate than in April. Inquiries in the pipe department are also reported to be heavier. Common brick is also moving out quicker, but Hudson river manufacturers are slow about starting up their yards for the 1914 season. Paving brick manufacturers are reporting a big improvement in business with prices held firmly in all parts of the country owning to the fact that public improvements are going ahead on a larger scale, because municipalities have been able to sell their bonds on more favorable bases.

This has made gravel, crushed stone and sand fairly strong factors in the material market, while other commodities have been weak. Prices in these three departments are stiff and probably will continue to be so. In the supply department the steady decline in the price of crude petroleum foreshadows a possible decline in refined products which will benefit the paint and dressing markets. The drop in the last month of crude petroleum has been from $2.50 to $1.90 at wells when it was weak. The effect of the possible further destruction of wells at Tampico may check this decline, however. Lime is stiffening somewhat in a slowly recovering market, but prices are $1.55 on the 300-lb. now standard barrels, N. Y.

The general tenor of the building material and supply market is such as to indicate a stronger movement of materials, with fairly stationary prices. Manipulation of prices seems to have given way to steadier inquiry in the basic commodities so that prospective builders may be assured that whatever change does occur, prices will not drop to lower levels except possibly on petroleum products.

STRUCTURAL STEEL.

May Orders More Brisk—Big Iron Orders Firmer.

REPORTS from the leading steel interests, supplying this market, indicate that there is a firmer tone in this department of the building material market. Prices, however, continue low.

It was announced that the steel contract for the Astor loft building will run up to about 2,500 tons. Contracts probably will be placed early in June. The 1,800 tons of steel required for the construction of the addition to the Metropolitan Museum of Art is expected to be placed next week. Minor changes in the interior structure of the Equitable Building have called for an additional order of 200 tons of structural shapes to be furnished by the American Bridge Company. Another 4,000 tons of structural steel was figured this week on Section 6A of Route 4-38 of the Seventh avenue subway and another 5,000 tons was figured at the close of the week. The orders placed last week in structural contracts totaled about 30,000 tons.

This volume is considered light for this time of the year. Steel building work continues to be light. The Hinckle Iron Works has been awarded the contract for 300 tons of fabricated structural steel for a three-story factory on Eleventh avenue.

The American Steel & Wire Company is receiving specifications at a larger average daily rate than in April, and there has also been some little improvement in new orders this month.

The American Bridge Company took orders for about 25,000 tons in the Eastern division during April, and about 60,000 tons went into independent fabricators, or a total tonnage for the Eastern part of the country of 95,000 tons. The eastern plant of the American Bridge Company are now producing about 19,000 tons a month within a total capacity of 25,000 tons. The Bridge Builders' & Structural Association reports total contracts for fabricated structural steel in April at eighty-eight per cent. of the total capacity of the country, which is estimated to mean sales of about 151,000 tons. This inquiry, however, includes some business reported in March. The total shipments of fabricated structural steel in April were about seventy-three per cent. of total capacity, equivalent to about 125,000 tons.

CRUDE PETROLEUM.

Sharp Decline In Price This Week—Foreshadows Change in Refined Products.

PENNSYLVANIA crude oil was reduced ten cents a barrel early this week, making the price $1.90 at mill. There were no developments in the refined oil market. Prices generally have been steady.

COMMON BRICK.

Manufacturers Starting 1914 Season at Heavy Capacity—Prices Firmer.

COMMON brick manufacturers have been complaining of the low prices their product has been bringing in this market. They have been sending down a better grade of brick and have restricted shipments so as to keep the market firm in the hope that quotations would stiffen, but the state of the market has been such that, except in the case of extra good brick, prices have held practically at unchanged levels although the demand is steadier and increasing slowly in volume.

Practically one-third of the manufacturers up the Hudson have started operations for the season. They are using nearly their full capacity, which is interpreted as an indication that this department, at least, is confident of the future building movement.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, May 14, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow.

WINDOW GLASS.

Demand Light—Prices Have Little Bearing on Buying Movement.

THERE is only a moderate market for window glass and competition is extremely keen. Proces, no matter how deeply shaded, seem to have little effect upon stimulation of business. For that reason the tendency is not to lower quotations any farther. Factories in some instances have temporarily gone out of blast in order to make repairs, but some of them close down at this time of the year anyway. The only difference that, instead of waiting until the last of May, they are halting operations in the middle of the month. Quotations on this commodity are nominal at 90-20 per cent. discount on single thick and 90-25 on double thick, from jobbers' lists.

MARKET GENERALLY STRONGER.

Crushed Stone Plants Operating at Two-Thirds Capacity.

A SURVEY of the building material market in its entirety shows a generally strengthening tone. Crushed stone plants are operating at present at about two-thirds of capacity, and the outlook favors larger production in the near future. Prices are still nominal, however, at 90 cents to $1 for 1½ inch and 95 cents to $1.10 for ¾ inch sizes, for full cargo lots alongside dock.

Gravel is the strongest factor in the concrete ingredient market, but prices show no indicatinn of change. Sand is steady in an increasing demand. Paints, oils and varnishes are reported to be in an active market reflecting the general activity reported in the five boroughs in alteration work. The sharp drop in the price of crude petroleum is expected to benefit the paint, varnish and dressing manufacturing trade.

Second-hand brick is a strong commodity at present. The wholesale razing of something like three hundred buildings in Greenwich village has thrown a great quantity of used brick on the market which, in turn, has weakened the regular brick market, thus keeping prices for new brick down to low levels. Prices for second-hand brick range from $2.75 per m. to $3.50.

Linseed oil quotations have remained firm during the first quarter. This has been due to light supply, it is said, rather than to active demand. Wire products are strengthening in demand.

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

NEW YORK, MAY 23, 1914

PUBLIC REVOLT AGAINST OVER-REGULATION

Borough President Marks' Arraignment of the Lawmakers at Albany For Unreasonable and Needless Building Laws and the Multiplicity of Inspections.

BOROUGH PRESIDENT MARKS and a number of other informed and representative men gave testimony on Monday before the State Factory Investigating Committee concerning the over-regulation of buildings that did not seem to be pleasing to Lieutenant-Governor Wagner and Samuel Gompers, members of the commission, or to Abram I. Elkus, counsel. Mr. Elkus, especially, seemed reluctant to hear all the facts which the witnesses desired to relate, and endeavored at the outset to confine the testimony to precise instances of duplication of factory orders with names, places and dates. The members of the committee were not, to say the least, sympathetic hearers.

But after the Borough President, City Chamberlain Bruere, Fire Commissioner Adamson and other heads of departments had spoken, there was a better appreciation on the part of the committee of what property owners in this city have had to contend with for several years from regiments of inspectors, and there was a willingness to concede that there has been an unwarranted number of official visitations and a multiplicity of violation orders, if not an actual conflict of authority.

It seemed to be the opinion of the committeemen that through some system of conferences between heads of departments, with an interchange and co-ordination of violation orders, much of the annoyance from which owners suffer would be prevented. The oft-repeated suggestion that New York City be permitted to supervise the erection and maintenance of the buildings within her own boundaries was not well received; and Borough President Marks's pertinent ejaculation at one stage of the proceedings that there are "too many laws," evoked no reply. The statement from an early witness that there are no less than thirteen public departments and bureaus sending inspectors to visit buildings, obviously convicted the authorities of over-regulation, and also created a very strong implication of a duplication of work, although Counselor Elkus fought strenuously to defend the State Factory Bureau against the latter charge.

The Facts Concisely Stated.

So clearly and concisely stated are the real facts of the question as they appeared to the real estate owners that no better picture of the situation could be presented than the remarks of the Borough President, which are given here in full, as they have not so appeared elsewhere:

"The duplication of inspections and the conflict of orders issued by the State, city and borough authorities, in connection with the buildings of New York, have reached such a state that both owners and tenants are in despair.

"The most important consideration in government is to foster respect for the law.

"Recent developments in the activities of conflicting powers have tended to weaken this respect for the law. When the law demands that you swing your doors outward, and another law demands that you change this arrangement on account of intereference with passers-by on the sidewalk, it is pretty hard to be patient with the law. When a city department orders the owner to erect a fire-escape from the roof to the sidewalk, and he complies with the law, and a borough department issues an order for the removal of the fire-escape from the sidewalk, on the ground that it is an encumbrance, the citizen becomes demoralized and loses some of his respect for the law. When one department gives permission to connect two buildings, so that one fire-escape may answer for both, and another department orders fireproof doors to be erected in the openings which have been permitted, there is a wail of despair.

"I find that in New York City at least seven departments can send inspectors to a citizen's house or building. These are: (1) the Bureau of Buildings, (2) the Fire Prevention Bureau, (3) the Fire Department, (4) the Health Department, (5) the Tenement House Department, (6) the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, and (7) the License Bureau. Add to this the State Labor inspection and we have a total of eight legal inspections which can be made. In addition to this, each one of these inspectors has the right to lay down rules and instructions as to what shall or must be done to comply with the law, as his department sees it.

Must Call a Halt.

"No one can deny that these duplications and conflicts come to such a point that we are bound to call a halt.

"There are some who feel that New York is not a manufacturing city. They are not posted as to the facts. New York is one of the greatest manufacturing centers in the world, and to drive factories out of New York drives out homes also, because, unless there is an opportunity to earn wages, or to make profits in a factory, there is an equal lack of opportunity to be able to afford a home in the city. Drive out the factories and you drive out the homes and make it impossible for working people to live decently in our city.

"The ill effects will be felt by all classes of the community. Worst of all, this conflict of orders from various departments brings about a lack of respect for the law.

"I have been advised that it is quite likely that the situation will be further complicated by the addition of another authority which is entering the field. The conflict between borough, city and State authority will be increased if the Industrial Relations Committee, which is now dealing with manufacturing problems, should decide upon measures which will again conflict. I hope that this will not happen.

A Board of Inspections Suggested.

"There are two things to do in handling the present situation: The first is to bring about the greatest possible cooperation between the heads of the various bureaus under the present laws.

"The plan which I have suggested is the establishment of a Board of Inspections, and this I have recommended strongly in a letter to the Mayor. This board should be empowered to carry out the orders of all State and city departments, co-ordinating these orders, and calling attention to conflicts that may arise among them. Thus we would have a clearing house for inspections and orders, and instead of eight inspectors visiting the same building, two at the most would answer all purposes provided they were clothed with the proper authority and supplied with the necessary information.

"This would have a beneficial effect in two directions: By means of it the conflict will be reduced almost automatically to a minimum. Also, there would follow a betterment in the efficiency of the inspection itself. The men representing several departments would develop greater ability and become entitled to larger salaries in proportion to the grade of work they did.

Legislative Relief Needed.

"We cannot, however, eliminate the duplication, because the laws must be carried out. Therefore, comes the second method for relief, namely, legislation. There must be either a combination between more departments under one head, or the establishment of a Joint Board of Inspection. If all departments should place their orders into the hands of such a Joint Board, the officials of which will be authorized to harmonize differences, it would be a great saving to the State and city, as well as the elimination of conflict, which would be greatly appreciated by the citizens. Instead of eight inspectors going into a building and covering a large territory, two inspections would serve the purpose of all the departments, and each inspector would have a small territory to cover. The same kind of ability that serves for one department will serve for several others and, in cases of special difficulty, consultants, who have exceptional ability, could be called into conference.

"Our department has been doing this by personal conferences between the president of the borough and various commisssioners, as well as similar conferences between engineers and other officials of the various bureaus. We are minimizing the conflict by such friendly co-operation.

"During the last few weeks I have received a volume of letters from business men, house owners and taxpayers in general, expressing hostility to the methods at present in use, and a strong desire to see the system rectified. The Real Estate Board of New York, at a meeting of its Board of Governors, held on May 12, 1914, adopted resolutions with this object in view. It is my sincere hope that some plan of relief will be quickly decided upon. Something must be done at once. There is hardly another feature of our city government that requires more immediate attention."

Another important presentation of the case was made by a representative of the Merchants' Association, Alfred R. Kirkus. He said the Merchants' Association had adopted resolutions declaring that the laws and ordinances relating to fire-prevention contain provisions that are unreasonable and unnecessary for the protection of life and needlessly burdensome to property and business interests, by reason of which real estate investments are in many instances rendered profitless, manufacturers are driven from the State, and business interests subjected to heavy expense. The Merchants' Association has also appointed a committee to report prior to the next meeting of the Legislature what amendments should be made to the existing laws.

Unreasonable and Unnecessary Laws.

Mr. Kirkus, speaking for the association, further said, that if a Department of Labor is necessary for New York City it should have laws and rules especially applicable here and not included in general laws for the State.

"We believe, however, that the existing departments and laws applicable to the City of New cover all matters taken care of in the labor laws.

"Establish an 'Examining and Enforcing Bureau' for the City of New York, in which the various city or other departments shall concentrate their usual or special inspection reports covering all buildings. This could be built up from selected employes of the various departments interested. These reports should be examined, tabulated and recorded, to see that there is no duplication or conflict. When a violation appear the bureau should differentiate between what should apply to the owner and what should apply to the occupant. The one order when issued should be specific and should include all the legal requirements in that case of each and every department. No order should be sent to an owner of the building that should apply to the tenant and vice versa, and in drafting laws this distinction should always be carefully considered. The usual procedure is to send an order to the owner of a building and force him to straighten out any difficulty or any illegality caused by no matter whom."

CHANGES IN BUILDING LAWS PENDING

Owners of Existing Buildings Will be Saved from Heavy Expense for Dumbwaiter Alterations—New Regulations for Partition Fences and Walls.

ALTHOUGH the Record and Guide in its issue of May 9 printed the fire limits for the different boroughs that have been suggested by the Fire Commissioner and the Building Superintendents, no criticism of the proposed extensions have been received by Superintendent Miller or Chairman Hamilton of the Building Committee of the Board of Aldermen. There seems to be a disposition on the part of the public to leave it to them.

Mr. Miller is now plotting on maps of the different boroughs the present fire limits and those proposed, and would be pleased to have criticisms or suggestions from parties interested as to the justification for the extensions recommended by the Fire Commissioner. He would be pleased to make appointments with anyone wishing to discuss the subject with him.

Superintendent Miller has received a copy of a resolution adopted by the Real Estate Board expressing agreement with his recommendation, heretofore made, that the fire limits be made the subject of a separate ordinance and not a part of the Building Code. The Real Estate Board has also adopted a resolution expressing satisfaction that Mr. Miller is editing the new revision and also authorizing the president to appoint a committee of five to give Mr. Miller such assistance and counsel as he may desire.

Dumbwaiter Amendments Reported.

The ordinance amending section 97 of the code, relating to dumbwaiter shafts, was reported favorably in the Board of Aldermen by the Building Committee, through Chairman Hamilton, this week and will come up for passage next week. It changes the law so as to make it apply, only to buildings hereafter erected, except that in existing buildings where the shafts extend to the cellar or basement they shall in that story be built fireproof. The amendments are designed for the relief of property owners who would be subjected to great expense should the existing law be enforced in its present form as recently interpreted by the highest court.

The New Billboard Ordinance.

In the Board of Aldermen this week the Building Committee also reported favorably the new billboard ordinance. At the public hearing held on the previous day only commendations were received for the new spirit in which the problem is being approached. By common consent, acting through a commission to be appointed, it is expected that there will be a system of regulation far more effective and satisfactory than could have been enforced by legal coercion. As Alderman Curran says, "Common consent is the greatest human force in the world."

Partition Fences and Retaining Walls.

The Board of Aldermen has under consideration an ordinance providing for the erection of partition fences and retaining walls in the city of New York. The substance of this ordinance is not really new, the object of the ordinance being to make the provisions applicable to the entire city. At present three sets of ordinances covering the subject matter are on the statute books as part of the Code of Ordinances, namely: Chapter 3, part 2, sections, 43 to 55, inclusive, applying to the Borough of Manhattan; Chapter 3, part 3, sections 30 to 43, inclusive, applying to the Borough of Brooklyn; and Chapter 2, part 4, sections 28 to 39, inclusive, applying to the section of the city formerly known as Long Island City.

Maintenance Cost Divided.

There is very little change in the requirements from those already applying to the parts of the city indicated. The ordinance provides, in the first place, for the maintenance of partition fences in the City of New York by the owners of the land on each side of such fences. It further provides for such cases where in improving a piece of property it is necessary either to cut down the original level of the ground or to raise the grade. The expense of the necessary retaining wall to preserve the artificial difference in level is to be shared by the adjoining property owners.

In case of any dispute as to the necessity for such a retaining wall, or the division of the cost, the matter is to be settled by the Borough President having jurisdiction, or his authorized representative. This function was, under the old ordinances, delegated to the Alderman of the district in which the partition fence or wall under question was situated. Where there is any claim as to improper charges for the work when undertaken by either party because the other fails to do something, the matter is then to be settled by any court having jurisdiction. Failure to comply with the provisions regarding retaining walls involves a penalty of not less than $10 nor more than $50 for each offense, and in addition $1 for each day that such offense shall continue after due notice has been given.

Many Sections Antiquated.

In preparing this ordinance to apply to the entire city, such sections which provided for the enclosing of properties by outside and boundary fences along public roads and highways have been omitted, as these provisions at this time are no longer necessary. The ordinances, so far as these provisions are concerned, are a dead letter. The purpose of these sections apparently was to prevent the encroachments of cattle, sheep, hogs and other animals. But this is now provided for in Sections 70 to 75 of the Sanitary Code, and also in Sections 553 to 559 of Part I of the Code of Ordinances.

It is to be noted that the provisions regarding retaining walls and the division of the expense between the adjoining owners apply only to such cases where the difference of level is made to bring the grade in conformity with the street grade; in other words, where the land is to be regulated as provided in the ordinance. Where an excavation is made below the surface for building purposes the provisions of Section 22 of the present Building Code will apply.

A Case in Point.

A case coming under the provisions of the old ordinances and Section 22 of the Building Code was decided by Mr. Justice Davis in the Supreme Court some time in 1906, reported in the New York Law Journal on April 28, 1906. It was made clear that whatever retaining wall was necessary because of an excavation below the street grade was to be provided at the expense, under Section 22 of the Building Code, of the parties causing the excavation to be made, and that the expense of such additional retaining wall as was necessary to maintain the natural ground level above the street grade was to be met equally by the adjoining property owners. The case is known as Ansorge vs. Egan.

BRIDGES A GREAT AID TO CITY'S GROWTH

Interesting Statistics Furnished by F. J. H. Kracke, Bridge Commissioner, Showing Trend of Population—Advocates Erection of New Structure.

NEARLY 743,000 people pass daily over the four great East River bridges which link Manhattan with Brooklyn and Long Island City. The Brooklyn Bridge which in 1912 bore fifty-two per cent. of the total traffic has taken second place to the Williamsburgh Bridge, which in 1913 carried 42.2 per cent of the traffic, as compared to 41.3 per cent. carried by the older structure. The other two bridges, Queensboro and Manhattan, disposed of 10.6 per cent. and 5.9 per cent. respectively A report of the Bridge Department on the comparison of traffic for one day in 1912 as against another in 1913 shows to a remarkable degree the growth and trend of the population of New York City.

In 1912 344,000 people crossed the Brooklyn Bridge in one day as compared to 306,845 for a similar period last year. Decrease in bridge traffic was noticeable, however, only over this structure, since the figures for the Williamsburgh Bridge indicate 313,000 for 1913 as compared to 240,000 for the previous year; the Manhattan Bridge carrying 43,000 in 1913, as compared to 14,000 for 1912, and the Queensboro Bridge 78,000 for 1913, as compared to 59,000 for the coresponding day in the preceding year. Other statistics compiled by the department supply evidence not only of an unusual increase in vehicular traffic, but also in railroad and pedestrian traffic.

Each year thousands of residents of Manhattan are following along the line of proposed transit improvement and are establishing homes outside of that borough. Brooklyn and Long Island, peculiarly favored with transportation facilities, are attracting a great number of these residents. No greater evidence of the extent of this general exodus can be learned than by an examination of these statistics.

Demand for New Bridge.

The Hon. F. J. H. Kracke, Bridge Commissioner, said this week: "There is a present demand for another bridge over the East River. More immediately this demand can be met by rebuilding the old Brooklyn Bridge. The rapid transit trains which would be brought to this structure by the rebuilt elevated railway lines will be limited in number and length to the capacity of the two tracks now doing full duty unless more roadway is provided. Crossing the East River are thirty-four tracks, comprising sixteen rapid transit, fourteen surface and four through railway of the Pennsylvania. system. These are carried on four bridges and in eight tubes, the former structures handling twenty-six, of which twelve are rapid transit and fourteen surface railway, while the tubes bear eight, of which four are rapid transit and four through railway courses of the Pennsylvania lines.

"On the bridges four rapid transit tracks are now in use and eight are idle, twelve of the surface railway are in use and two are idle. Altogether sixteen are now being operated and ten are not. In the tube two rapid transit roads at the present time are being employed and two are unemployed. There are, therefore, twenty-two tracks now in use and twelve unused; of the idle tracks six are located on the Manhattan Bridge, four on the Queensboro Bridge and two in the Steinway tubes.

MR. F. J. H. KRACKE.
Commissioner of Bridges.

"Recently the city undertook the construction of six more rapid transit roads and tunnels under the East River and to place in operation the two underground and eight rapid transit tracks on the bridges. As a result thirty-eight of the forty which will cross over or under the East River, exclusive of those on the Hell Gate Bridge of the New York connecting railroad, will soon be in use. The remaining two are situated on the Queensboro Bridge.

Caring for Traffic.

"No plan has been presented which disposes of vehicular traffic as expeditiously as a bridge. I do not assert that such traffic may not be cared for in any other manner, but I believe there will be an increase in demand for roadways, for this particular class of travel. The present or proposed tunnels cannot, of course, meet the future demands of increased vehicular transportation because they are rapid transit tunnels. I have shown about what has been provided for railway travel. It will be seen that railroad facilities have been furnished to cover increases for some time to come, whereas no provision has been made for greater vehicular traffic."

Whether the bridges have been to any extent responsible for the shifting of the great portions of population with the resultant beneficial influences on property values in the vicinity of the approaches is, of course, problematical. While there is little doubt but that transit improvement has been the prime factor in the redistribution of the city population, the bridges have unquestionably contributed toward the same result. Bridge construction has made better transit possible through the elimination of the underwater problems which are so vexing and troublesome to engineers. In the neighborhoods of approaches and plazas land values have generally risen as a result of large increases in interboro traffic. The Long Island City end of the Queensboro Bridge is becoming one of the largest industrial colonies in the country and the beginning of its growth has been coincident with the opening of that bridge to traffic.

Engineering Marvels.

From the structural viewpoint the New York bridges take the highest rank. Thomas Hastings, in a magazine article several years ago, wrote: "They are more interesting from the engineering point of view than from the artistic." Brooklyn Bridge long stood as a marvel of engineering skill and the Queensboro stands today as the greatest cantilever in the United States. The others with these are fitting monuments to the growth and power of the great metropolis of New York City.

The total cost of these four structures was $90,000,000, and collectively consumed thirty-six years of building activity. The experience gained from the construction of the Brooklyn Bridge, which was commenced in 1870 and finished in 1883, was noticed in the erection of the Williamsburg Bridge, which was built in about eight years.

Prior to about three years ago, when Mayor Gaynor abolished the tolls system in force on the bridges, the income derived from the various sources may be said to have balanced the cost of maintenance, and even to have left a slight surplus. The bulk of this income, however, came from the tolls, and when these were discontinued the remaining funds accruing from rents, etc., were insufficient. to meet the needs of the department. At present the income of the four East River structures from the various sources does not meet the cost of maintenance. Exact figures showing this comparison could not be obtained, since part of the rent received from the bridge property goes direct to the Department of Finance, and it is difficult to ascertain what the approximate income is.

SUB-SURFACE STRUCTURES IN NEW YORK

Assessed Values For Franchise Purposes Aggregate About $500,000,000 —About 3,800 Miles of Conduits and Mains in Manhattan Alone*

By CHARLES N. GREEN, Engineer, Sub-surface Structures, Public Service Commission

PART II.

ANOTHER class of pipes, of which there are few in New York at present, are those of the refrigeration companies. They are usually small, but must be insulated in much the same way as are steam mains.

The wires underground may be divided into two classes—those used for signaling, or low tension, and those used for power, or high tension. To the former class belong the telephone, telegraph, police fire alarm and the various electric protective companies, while to the latter belong the light and power wires of the Edison Companies, the surface and elevated railways, and in some localities those used to operate the subways. Formerly these wires were strung on poles, but about 1884 the Legislature forced the City of New York, as it then existed, to order them underground. On this side of the river the duct lines are owned by the operating companies, but on the other side separate, but controlled, companies own the duct lines and rent space to the different owners of wires.

All the low-tension wires are grouped in ducts belonging to the Empire City Subway Co., and the high-tension wires in those owned by the Consolidated Telegraph & Electrical Subway Co.

The drawing-in system, as the system in use today is called, for laying of electric cables is high in cost of installation, but exceedingly low in maintenance, and I have it on the authority of one of the foremost electrical engineers in this country that this system probably represents the acme of the art of electrical distribution, and yet the companies using this system now had to be forced (about 30 years ago) to put their wires underground by all the powers of the Legislature and the City of New York combined.

Tube System First Used.

The original Edison lines laid in the ground were the tube system which is still in existence, but is being superseded by cable drawn in ducts. This system, sometimes known as bug lines, consists of articulated tubes with the copper or wires inside and the tube filled with a black bituminous cement. The bugs occur at the splices and are filled with the same cement. They may be straight or at almost any angle, so that we have a system which, if plotted, would resemble a spider web. Junction boxes connect the divisions of this system with the feeder cables. These are:

In Manhattan the telephone company and all other low-tension wires occupy ducts belonging to the E. C. S. Co. In the other boroughs, where the telephone companies own their own ducts, they may or may not rent space to the other owners of low-tension wires. In New York City the cables vary in size, dependent on whether the service carried by the cable is local or trunk line, from 100 pairs of wires to 800 pairs, and recently experiments have been made with single cables, carrying 1,000 pairs of wires; whether or not any of these are in use, I do not know. The later developments in telephonic long distance work use the Pupin system. This system requires relays to reinforce, as it were, the pulsations in the telephone circuit, so that at the present time it is possible to reach all points this side of the Rocky Mountains from the Seaboard. These relays are installed in auxiliary manholes at approximately fixed distances along the duct line, and consist of an iron pot set on the floor of the manhole; each cable runs into a single pot in this manhole, and thence back to the regular manhole in the duct line. The wires are continuous, and in the pot are wound in a particular way around the central core. This method is used to sharpen the electric pulsations traveling along the wire, which have a tendency to lag, even overlap.

*Lecture delivered at meeting of American Society Engineers, Architects and Constructors, in United Engineering Building, May 12.

THE RECORD AND GUIDE prints today the second and final installment of the article by Charles N. Green, on Sub-Surface Structures in New York City. The history of the placing of the wires underground is dwelt upon and a valuable and interesting account of how these lines are divided and utilized is given. Residents in a large city take public utilities for granted and rarely give consideration to these improvements until some break-down occurs when the service is interrupted. One of the difficulties which the large companies have to meet is in the new improvements which are continually being made. In some instances these innovations destroy the value of existing plants and mean that the operating companies must expend large sums of money to keep up to date.

There is a menace to all metallic structures in the ground which occurs in congested territory, and which is receiving more attention today than formerly and that is the question of electrolysis. Stray currents leaving the elevated roads, subways and overhead trolley lines must in some way return to the power station. These stray currents will follow a pipe for a considerable distance, until the path of least resistance requires a jump from one pipe to another or to some other structure, and it is when the current leaves such pipe that it does the damage.

Pipe Galleries.

The advisability of building pipe galleries has been discussed for a number of years. This discussion reached its climax in 1910, when pipe galleries were built for the subway in Delancey street. The opposition to placing pipes in these galleries was so strong that it became necessary to modify the original designs to such an extent that they are practically useless and no pipes have ever been placed in them.

So closely connected are the structures occupying space beneath the street surface with the street pavement that in many cities, including our own, the owners of such structures are not allowed to dig up the pavement for repairs, except for emergency purposes, within a period varying from five years in Philadelphia to three in Cincinnati and, I believe, two in New York City.

The water supply for Manhattan and the Bronx and a portion of Brooklyn and Richmond either does, or will in the near future, enter the city from the north, making the distribution along north and south lines. In order to accommodate structures sufficiently large to give an adequate supply, and at the same time not occupy space which may be needed later for subway construction, it became necessary to build a deep tunnel, which has been built so deep that it will probably never interfere with any other structures.

This plan has been considered by the telephone interests, but the results do not seem to warrant the outlay, owing to difficulties in handling and racking cables. The congestion in the streets makes prohibitive the laying of any large mains without some radical measures being adopted. The Board of Water Supply solved the problem by going so deep that probably no structure will ever reach them.

Telephone Distribution.

The telephone distribution for the whole Metropolitan district is centered in the lower end of Manhattan. The Cortlandt Exchange, which is the largest in the world, is this central point, and from it radiate the distribution systems in Manhattan, running approximately parallel with the subway systems, but it became necessary to cross Manhattan Island in many cases, and with large structures in order to connect up the various exchanges.

The gas companies, with their works on both the East and North rivers, must necessarily have large distribution mains crossing the subway lines, and the transfer of their works from Manhattan to Long Island will not change this distributing system.

The Edison plants are located similarly to those of the gas companies, and thus the problem of being able to serve the people, and that continuously throughout the future, is the big general problem which faces the companies themselves, the owners of the underground structures.

The Sewer Question.

The sewer problem is still more serious, on account of the nature of the sewer system and the fact that the discharge is to the rivers on the east and west of Manhattan Island, and to cross the lines of subways large siphons must be built underneath the subways, in order that the drainage system may be complete. This question of sewers has been and is being considered by a special commission which has already been studying them for some years. The solution of this problem doubtless means almost an entire reconstruction of the Manhattan sewer system.

Few cities have made maps or have any record of the locations of structures beneath the street surface. About 1884 Philadelphia began to map the structures in her streets, and while the work is not completed, sufficient has been done to make it of great value not only to the city, but to the Public Service Corporations themselves. Your own borough, Brooklyn, has, I think, improved on the work of Philadelphia, and for the time in which this work has been in progress has done more than perhaps any other city which has undertaken this work. Proper maps of the subsurface conditions in New York would have saved the city, both directly and through their contractors, immense amounts of money—the city in looking up, through the offices of the various owners, the locations of their structures, and the contractors in having accurate information of the locations. Such information would also save the Water Department and the Department of Sewers considerable amounts of money each year, for at the present time the only way to get a location for a new structure in the streets is to dig test pits, and in that way determine what is in the streets.

WHEN TO USE WOOD.

An Opportunity for Architects and Owners to Study Decorative Effects.

Within the confines of the Grand Central Palace have been placed the rich decorative treasures of many of the forests in the country, so that eastern architects and prospective building owners may see between now and Decoration Day some of the possibilities of this ancient building commodity that modern invention and up-to-date forestry have been able to produce.

Unlike most expositions, this one is not a selling proposition. It is strictly an educational exhibition designed to show factory owners, for instance, what is the best wearing wood they can use on the floors. The home owner, present or prospective, can see at a glance, instead of having to depend upon colored pictures or diminutive samples, just what decorative effects he can expect from different woods used for trim, or how different woods serve as flooring material. Furthermore, these woods are shown in their actual building application. In other words, the plan of the great Forest Products Exhibition, shown here for the first time, is to permit specifiers to see at a glance just what woods will best serve the purpose the architect or owner has in mind.

Besides, the U. S. Government has a $10,000 forestry exhibit there which is an education in itself. This exhibit shows graphically the story of wood production and conservation. As one enters the great exposition hall, the whirr of the band and buzz saw, the rich fragrance of the forest, and the shout of the lumberjack transport the visitor from the heart of the city to the great Northwest. The whole atmosphere is one so entirely unfamiliar to the work-a-day New Yorker that he is entranced with the novelty first, and then astounded to find that he knew so little about wood and its uses.

For instance, in one of the exhibits a demonstration is made of the structural values of different grades of lumber. He is shown why some woods will take a high polish and keep it. Others will take a high polish that will enrich itself with age, while others will take no polish at all, but in their natural form lend a decorative virtue scarcely dreamed of except by those who, through years of training in tree culture and wood treatment, have developed these beautiful shadings of grain and texture.

The show has been designed to interest business men in general, factory owners, architects, contractors, builders, carpenters, engineers and railway buyers, as well as lumber dealers who are striving to meet the requirements of those who call for the newest things in home and public building adornment.

There is also a speculative side to the show, including the giving away of a bungalow, a log-sawing contest by lumberjacks, and moving pictures showing the dangers of logging operations in the country's great forests.

Thomas W. Fry, secretary of the Charles F. Luehmann Hardwood Lumber Co., of St. Louis, Mo., in speaking of the exposition said yesterday: "We have an interesting exhibit which embraces a small cottage, in Colonial style of architecture, the interior being arranged as a library. The interior dimensions are 13x25 feet and all the material used, both inside and out, is red gum. The room is panelled to the ceiling. On one side is a fireplace with a large figured panel, whil on either side are bookcases. On the other side of the room are two windows and panels.

"There is nothing unusual in the finish of the room or nothing that could not easily be replaced. In fact the exhibit is a typical one and can be duplicated for about $750. The panel over the mantel is plain sawed gum, while the other panels are quarter-sawed gum. The modern tendency is to panel rooms of this character to the ceiling as the initial cost is about all the other has to meet. There will be no wallpaper or friezes to replace and the effect is always the same."

REAL ESTATE ASKS PROTECTION

Prevailing Opinion Strongly Favors Building Restriction and Districting.

A clear preponderance of opinion was made evident, at the public hearing before the Board of Estimate on Tuesday, in favor of the appointment of a commission in accordance with the new heights of buildings law. The duty of the commission will be to report regarding the localities where regulations controlling building height and percentage of lot covered should be imposed, and also the nature of the regulations for each locality. A continuation of the hearing was held on Friday.

At the first meeting Ernest Flagg read a paper to the effect that the limitations proposed by the Heights of Buildings Commission were much too liberal, and that the front walls of new buildings in every part of the city should not exceed the width of the street, instead of twice the width of the street. Other speakers against the proposed resolution were confessedly owners of specific parcels who thought that their intended buildings might be hampered. Roswell D. Tompkins represented the labor interests in the building trades, which want no limits set. Colonel Wm. D. Washington said we have too much regulation, and he opposed any more interference with real estate, on general principles.

Undue Apprehensions.

Dr. Henry Berg, representing the United Real Estate Associations, spoke in favor of the principle of regulation of building height as a measure plainly necessary, but he was opposed to the districting principle as he understood it. He said:

"I warn every one listening to me that if any such principle as this becomes a part of our laws, that it will work great injury from the commercial and from the civic aspects of our government. Is it not possible that if a law is passed to say in what part of the city there shall be buildings of certain heights, eventually the attempt may be made to state that in one section only Episcopalians shall live, in another only Jews, and in another only Catholics?"

On the other hand, those favoring the resolution made it clear that the regulations complained against were those that interfered with the interior uses of buildings and various requirements that cause owners of existing buildings constant expense; that something should be done to protect owners of buildings, and that the proposed regulations were in the line of protection, and not harassment. The opponents consumed about half of the time allotted to them, and then asked for an adjournment, as their other speakers were not present.

For Protection, Not Harassment.

Those favoring the resolution presented two and three minute talks, but were unable to have more than half of their speakers heard before their time had expired. The speakers in favor of the resolution were: Edward M. Bassett, chairman of the late Heights of Buildings Commission; Joel S. De Selding, of the Real Estate Board; Lawson Purdy; Walter Stabler, controller of the Metropolitan Life; Edward R. Hardy, of the Fire Insurance Exchange; Alfred E. Marling, of the Chamber of Commerce; Otto M. Eidlitz, Electus D. Litchfield D. Everett Waid, vice-president New York Chapter of Architects; Frank D. Veiller; Walter Lindner, representing the Title Guarantee and Trust Co.; Henry Moscowitz, of the Joint Board of Sanitary Control. Some who could not speak were: Reginald P. Bolton, Rev. Ernest M. Stires, Alfred T. White, Howard C. Smith.

285 SEA SHORE LOTS TO HIGHEST BIDDER

VIEW OF NEPONSIT BEACH; THE CLUB HOUSE IN THE BACKGROUND.

ANOTHER opportunity will be given home seekers to purchase seashore lots on the Rockaway peninsula. On Decoration Day the Jere Johnson, Jr., Company will offer on the premises, rain or shine. 285 lots and three cottages, at Neponsit Beach, West Rockaway, located between Jamaica Bay, Newport avenue, the clubhouse and Belle Harbor. Fifty-nine of the lots are situated directly on the bay. The property is improved with sewers, macadamized streets, cement sidewalks, curbs, electric lights, water and gas mains. Only one family dwellings, including bungalows, are permitted to be erected on the property, but no business structure of any kind. On the major portion of the property dwellings may be erected on forty feet, and on most of the lots garages are allowed. The property is accessible from either the Pennsylvania station, at Seventh avenue and 33d street, or Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, to Rockaway Park, thence by trolley to Neponsit, the western terminus of the line being near the clubhouse Special trains will be run on Decoration Day at 12.30 from the Pennsylvania station and at 12.15 from Flatbush avenue station, returning after the sale. The auctioneer announces that the lots are sold free and clear of any mortgage or similar incumbrance. Each purchaser is given by deed access to and the perpetual right to use the ocean beach, Decoration Day will have at least the usual number of suburban lot auctions.

Easy money and bumper crops will, if nothing else, stimulate general business activity before long.

The public uprising against over-regulation of premises has at least served to hush cries from certain departmental heads for more inspectors.

The manufacturers who came from all parts of the country to attend the national convention at the Waldorf brought tidings of good cheer, as it was the prevailing opinion among them that the end of the period of business adjustment is near.

Said a city officer: "The trouble with our State and city inspectors of all descriptions is that they think they are not earning their salaries when they report no violations. The lawmakers at Albany fancy they must be diligent in passing new laws. Fortunately, at Albany we have a Governor to veto unnecessary bills. But here, alas we have nobody to put the veto on violation orders." The remedy is plain. Consolidate a number of the departments.

Once the title of "building inspector" applied only to the men who are sent out by the Superintendents of Buildings. Now there are inspectors of buildings from no less than a dozen city, State and national departments and bureaus, not counting certain private agencies. Virtually all are "building inspectors," and their work is represented by thousands upon thousands of violation orders to owners and tenants annually. Many persons competent to speak believe that the government should get back to first principles and leave the inspection of buildings entirely to the rightful "building inspectors," namely, those from the long-established building bureaus.

The Westchester Railroad Mystery.

The disclosures about the Westchester road which have been made before the Interstate Commerce Commission during the past week are sufficiently illuminating, but they by no means tell the whole story. The real question is, On what theory did the directors of the New Haven authorize the expenditure of such an enormous sum of money—an expenditure which any traffic expert knew would prove to be unremunerative for an indefinitely prolonged period? No such expenditure would have been necessary for the purpose of shutting off competition, because no one else could have afforded to compete. The real explanation lies in a totally different direction. The Westchester road is extremely unprofitable at the present time, largely because it does not carry its passengers to any point which enables them to get quickly to the lower part of Manhattan. Its situation will be enormously improved as soon as the new subway system is in operation, because its patrons will then be able to reach possible places of employment farther south in a comparatively short time.

There can be no doubt that the management of the New Haven road was fully alive to the necessity of providing an outlet to the south for the suburban systems which they were constructing north of the Harlem. There are many indications that the New Haven management at one time had practically decided to bid upon an East Side subway which would not merely be connected with their suburban system, but which would be operated as a part thereof. Several times in the course of a public hearing Mr. Mellen announced his intention of so doing, and the Public Service Commission in planning the so-called Triborough route expected that the New Haven company would compete for the privilege of operating it. The plans called for a subway of larger capacity than the old subway—one which could be used by the ordinary railroad passenger car. The Public Service Commission anticipated that in this way they could introduce a new and a strong power into the New York transit situation which would compete with the Interborough Company, and from whose competition the city would benefit.

It must have had some informal assurances that the New Haven road would bid upon the Triborough route, for no company but one already operating a steam railroad could have hoped to make it pay. Yet when the time came the New Haven company refused to bid, and to this day the reasons for its change of plan have not been divulged. What they were we can only guess. Perhaps the credit of the company was already being strained by the policy of expansion adopted by the management, and when the time came it could not stand the further burdens which would have been imposed upon it by the operation of the Triborough route. For the Triborough route itself would never have been a profitable enterprise. The New Haven company might have made it profitable by operating it as a southern outlet to its suburban system, and by increasing in this way the value of its Bronx and Westchester lines, but the subway itself was not laid out so as to develop the greatest possible amount of traffic, and its larger bore made its construction excessively expensive.

These facts should, however, be carried in mind in considering the reasons for the enormous sums of money which the New Haven Railroad sunk in its Westchester properties. A grave mistake in business judgment was undoubtedly committed, but the mistake was not so flagrant as it now appears to be. On the contrary, if the New Haven road had been able to build and operate the Triborough route it would have appeared rather as a public benefactor than as a malefactor. Its policy of developing its Westchester territory was similar to that of the Pennsylvania Railroad in making its enormous investments on Long Island. In both instances wealthy corporations spent huge sums of money, with the expectation of obtaining the advantage of its expenditures in the future. The difference is that the New Haven company exhausted its credit in carrying out its plan, while the Pennsylvania company did not.

Benefits From Building Restrictions.

A very large part of the property owners of New York hope and expect that the hearing of the Board of Estimate upon the limitation of the heights of buildings, which was held during the past week, will constitute the first step to decisive action. The matter has now been discussed for a sufficient length of time, all sides have been heard, a substantial consensus of public opinion has been declared in favor of limitation, and the actual plan of regulation now being considered will help rather than hurt the value of real estate. In times past property owners have as a rule opposed limitation, on the ground that it would injure the value of their property. They are now beginning to see that, with the exception of rare instances, its effects will be beneficial rather than the reverse.

The limitation of the height of buildings will give comparative stability to real estate prices, and that will be an enormous benefit to the large majority of property owners. Lack of restriction enables a few favorably situated owners to get higher prices for their land, but at the expense of less favorably situated owners. It stimulates the construction of modern buildings to a constantly higher level, and this increased volume of construction diminishes quickly the value of many existing buildings, particularly of those which were the skyscrapers of a few years back. The depressed condition of so much real estate in the mercantile district is the result of the excessively rapid construction of modern lofts further north—which were better situated and better equipped than the old buildings. In this way many million dollars' worth of mercantile construction has become superannuated before its time, and the owners of this property have suffered severe losses.

If the height of buildings had been restricted as it is now proposed to restrict it, such a condition would never have come about. Then it would have no longer been possible to erect sixteen-story lofts on streets sixty feet wide. The area on which skyscrapers could be located would have been very much diminished, and existing buildings would not have had to meet the fierce and relentless competition of such a large amount of new and perhaps better planned floor space. Thus restriction will serve to alleviate the severe fluctuations which are taking place in the real estate and building market, and it will tend to equalize as well as to stabilize real estate values. Business, instead of being concentrated in a few spots which are considered to be exceptionally favorable, will be distributed over a larger area. A larger number of property owners will benefit from the growth of the city, and the business of the city will be conducted under more sanitary and pleasant conditions. In this respect the interest of the great majority of property owners as individuals is coincident with the interest of the whole city.

Consolidation of Departments.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Your article, "Our Chaotic Building Regulations," was indeed of interest, and there is a great deal to be said for and against the causes which have created present conditions. I am in favor of consolidation, provided that specialization is maintained. No property owner is compelled to do business with all the departments at one time. It is only when the owner tries to become an architect and engineer that he finds the various department cumbersome and numerous. If violations exist in a building, it matters not whether one department will issue twenty items, or five departments each issue four items. When a property owner wishes to comply and is represented by a proper architect, the architect studies the violations and after consultation with the various departments he is able to report to his client in very accurate form just what is to be done.

In many cases, however, owners are reluctant to comply with violation orders because the orders represent an outlay of money for which no return can be seen. From a real estate owner's standpoint, I do not see any necessity for consolidation or centralization of bureaus.

From an architect's standpoint, my opinion is that while it would be beneficial to do business with one department to be known, perhaps, as the "Department of Buildings," it would not greatly facilitate the work of the architect, for it would still be necessary to have separate and distinct divisions. A steel engineer is not properly equipped to examine tenement plans as to the law, nor is a tenement examiner qualified to pass on plumbing, etc. At present, when one files a plan for plumbing work in a building, it is not necessary for him to make out tenement or construction blanks, but if all the departments were consolidated there would be many blanks to file, one in each separate division. Instead of the work being reduced, it would be multiplied.

From a financial standpoint and under certain conditions I would favor a special consolidated bureau with special divisions. The head of this bureau to be the Borough President, and the heads of the divisions to be known as "chiefs" instead of commissioners; the blanks accompanying plans to be simplified and in loose-leaf form, so that one general question page may be used for the general information describing the building location, owner, etc., and the pages to follow to be specification pages pertaining to each division and describing the particular kind of work to be done and examined by the particular division so that the same piece of work shall not be examined by more than one division. If this should be done, it would (1) reduce printing bills, (2) reduce labor for the architect, (3) reduce unnecessary examinations.

The next item of expense and a source of annoyance is the inspection department. A tenement house should not be inspected as to construction until completed. This may sound interesting if not astounding. Why? you ask. My answer is that it is not necessary. All that a tenement house inspector should look for in a tenement house that is being erected under the proposed consolidated department plan would be to see that the stories are the proper height, that the rooms are as shown on plans as to size and shape, that the windows are as marked on plans as to size, that the courts, yards, etc., are as marked on plans, that the stairs are of the proper width and a few other items of similar nature.

Plans and specifications as approved by the tenement division call for certain definite figures and it should be up to the owner to see that these figures are carried out. If the builder is not competent to follow the plans, he should employ a competent superintendent or the architect, or a surveyor to layout his work, and not depend on the inspector to point out the mistakes. For this work a high grade special inspector shall be employed, who upon making examination, will issue violations which will not be petty or technical, but real violations; and when these have been issued the work of such special inspector shall cease and the following up as to compliance of the violations shall be done by a corps of less efficient inspectors, who do not inspect to find violations, but only to see that the violation issued by the special inspector have been complied with.

The getting of the proper grade of men should not be a matter of great concern, because under the new plan the city will be able to save hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, even though it may be required to pay more for the better grade of help.

If there be any doubt that men thoroughly familiar with building construction can be obtained to inspect and report intelligently with speed and precision, let him ask a dozen architects to act as volunteer inspectors of certain buildings in definite sections apportioning a number of houses a day, and I am sure that the result would be gratifying to the city and its Borough President. I for one am ready to do my share. Efficiency is the keynote of all business today, why not in the greatest city in the country.

Skyscrapers Depress Values.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

I have read the arguments advanced by Messrs. Robert E. Dowling and Jefferson DeMont Thompson against height restrictions, zones and districts, and consider their contentions wrong. Notwithstanding their assertions to the contrary, the fact remains that excessively tall buildings affect detrimentally light and air about them, produce congestion of traffic, and depress values in small real estate properties adjacent to them, besides which they have contributed to the disfigurement of the city generally.

Instead of progressing by the continued erection of the so-called "skyscraper," we are actually retrogressing in permitting an already intolerable condition to become worse. By adopting reasonable restrictions respecting height limits for buildings, and by the establishment of zones and districts, the city will eventually become a more desirable place in which to work and live.

Brooklyn and Queens Should Help Pay.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

The Civic Center plan now purposes creating a diagonal parkway ending at Williamsburgh Bridge plaza. In the discussion on this matter at City Hall on Tuesday it developed that the charge for this would be levied on a separate area of assessment, as it is not included in the proceedings for the Court House site. Now, it behooves one to ask why should not Brooklyn and Queens pay the major portion of the cost of this diagonal parkway, as it is certainly intended to facilitate travel between the bridges to Brooklyn, rather than to be of any direct value to people residing in New York proper.

Will the Courts Uphold the Heights of Buildings Plan?

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

It would seem futile to add anything to that which the weighty supporters of the plan of "building districts and restrictions" said at Tuesday's meeting at City Hall. It all was good, and should certainly meet the approval of every one who has the welfare of the city at heart and takes pride not only in its appearance, but also in the general well-being and prosperity of its inhabitants, property owners and business people. But, while heartily in favor of this and any forward movement, it strikes me as of doubtful practicability, in view of the loose attitude taken by our courts on the subject of restrictions. Granting, for the sake of argument, that restrictions imposed by or under the guidance of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment are feasible and legal, the question presents itself as to how long the courts would uphold them.

All covenant restrictions have the full power, authority and solemnity of contractual obligations, and any imposed by the city could not possibly be more binding; yet what have the courts done with them here among us? The courts deliberately destroy, despite restrictions delightful private house neighborhoods by allowing apartment houses to be built on West 72d street and West 145th street. They call an apartment house a "family residence" in West 78th street They deny that an undertaking establishment is an objectionable neighbor to a high-class private residence on Madison avenue. They permit a loft building in a restricted part of West 26th street, and do not allow a business building on the south side of 40th street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues.

Will these same courts have any regard for these contemplated new restrictions, or will they in a longer or shorter time invent and use some change in the character of the neighborhood, or other argument which in their exalted opinion will make it inequitable to enforce such restrictions?

If so, what is the use? Shall we have our restriction troubles all over again and then, again, will the banks, trust companies and title companies refuse otherwise good loans because no one will be able to say what the restriction's effect may be? The courts, thanks to their weak and strangely inconsistent attitude, have caused enough havoc with values now. Do let us be extremely careful of giving them any new opportunities to do more damage.

Heights of Buildings Not a New Theme.

For a generation off and on New York City has been talking about limiting the heights of buildings. The discussion antedated the era of steel construction for buildings and was directed at first against such great piles of solid masonry as the Tribune building and the Western Union building. Until 1879 these two stood alone as examples of modern tall buildings, not because of financial ill success, but because of hard times. In that year under more prosperous conditions, the era of high buildings commenced in earnest. The Morse building, at the northeast corner of Nassau and Beekman, the London, Liverpool and Globe, the Smith building in Cortlandt street, the Mills building in Broad street, the United Bank building at Broadway and Wall, Temple Court on the site once occupied by Clinton Hall, at Beekman and Nassau, were among the first of a large number of tall buildings whose construction preceded the introduction of steel framed buildings. They shut out the light and drained tenants from less attractive neighbors for a time, arousing many protests, among which there appeared the following in the Record and Guide of January 20, 1883, thirty-four years ago, from Messrs. James C. and Robert Lynd:

> "We think the time has come when some legal limit should be fixed upon the height to which buildings may be erected in the city of New York. In the first place, the rapidity with which ten-story structures are thrown up is appalling, the cost of the ground on which they are erected being so great that no time is wasted in getting them in condition for tenants.
> "Then, again, we consider it next to impossible to construct buildings of this character so as to render them absolutely fireproof. In the bill drawn up by Mr. Esterbrook, in relation to the erection of buildings in this city and which will come before the Legislature now in session for action, there is no limit fixed to the height to which anyone may build."

A generation of experience with skyscrapers has finally convinced the city authorities that "some legal limit" should indeed be fixed. The modern reasons therefore are succinctly set forth in the report of the Heights of Buildings Commission.

—The weekly payrolls of industries in New York State are on the increase according to the report of the secretary of the Manufacturers' Association of New York State. This healthful sign is to be shown in every other State soon, in the belief of Colonel George Pope, president of the national association.

Real Estate Board Golf Tournament.

Local real estate men will be afforded an opportunity to abandon, at least for one day, all thoughts of the heights of buildings, the over-regulation of buildings and other interesting phases of the real estate situation, by attending the spring golf tournament of the Real Estate Board of New York, on Tuesday, June 2, on the grounds of the Baltusrol Golf Club, Short Hills, N. J. All members of the board, including their office force, and non-resident and associate members, as individuals, are eligible to compete for prizes in the morning and afternoon events, for a fee of $3, which covers incidental expenses, including luncheon.

These arrangements have been completed by the Golf and Tennis Committee of which Albert B. Ashforth is chairman. The other members of the committee are: Joel S. de Selding, Alfred V. Amy, John P. Kirwan, Leroy Coventry, Harry Parker, Walter Stabler, H. H. Hazleton and W. J. Van Pelt.

In the all-day event, 36 holes, two prizes have been arranged for class "A" —best gross and best net; two prizes for class "B"—best gross and best net, for the best selected individual 18 holes of the day. Handicaps in class A are from 0 to 15; class B from 16 upwards. One-half of the individual's handicap is to be allowed on selected score for the day. In the afternoon players will have a chance to compete for two prizes in class A and two in class B. For the afternoon play, 18 holes medal, full handicaps count. No player, however, may win more than one prize.

Last November the Real Estate Board held its first annual fall tournament at the Oakland Golf Club, this being the first attempt of the board to vary the monotony of its business routine by introducing out-door sports, and the event was unusually successful. Arrangements are not yet complete for the tennis tournament. Arrangements for the second annual fall golf tournament will also be announced later.

The Court House Hearing.

The Bench and Bar through their representatives made a formidable demonstration on Tuesday before the City Plan Committee of the Board of Estimate in favor of the committee's recommendation for a shifting of the Court House site. The speakers from the legal fraternity were supported by representatives from art and architectural societies. From only one source did direct opposition come. St. Andrew's Church, which is situated within the limits of the new site, naturally wishes to continue its work in the neighborhood, and Chairman McAneny said he would confer with the church authorities.

In view of the large expenditure of public funds involved in the improvement, aggregating probably twenty million dollars, the greater part of which must be raised by the taxation of real estate, it was proper that the Real Estate Board should voice its opinion on the project. President McGuire's remarks were in the nature of caution rather than of general criticism. He said the board was not against the extension of the site in principle, but desired to know if the committee was certain as to the sufficiency of the sub-soil for a good foundation in this instance. He advised that the nature of the ground be examined before it should be acquired. Mr. McGuire also asked about the committee's intention in regard to the local assessments to defray the expense of acquiring right-of-way and constructing the new diagonal parkway, and learned that it was to be a matter for separate proceedings.

Borough President Marks expressed himself as in favor of not condemning any more land until trial borings had been made, and Hon. Cyrus C. Miller, from the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests also supported Mr. McGuire's attitude of caution.

President McAneny, on the other hand, was confident of the sufficiency of the foundations; and as for the assessments for the new streets, that would be matter for the Board of Estimate and not for the City Plan Committee.

LAW DEPARTMENT

Heating Adjoining Houses—Covenant by Tenant.

The owner of two adjoining houses, heated by a single boiler, the cost being shared equally by the tenants, leased the house with the boiler to a tenant who fully understood the situation and recognized an easement by implied reservation requiring him to do nothing to the disadvantage of the adjoining property. He thereafter disconnected the heating pipes leading to that property because his lease was silent as to heating it. In a suit by the owner it was held that, as he had no adequate remedy at law, equity would furnish a remedy by injunction to restrain the defendant from preventing the owner from maintaining a fire in the boiler. The tenant was required by his lease to surrender the premises at the end of his term in as good condition as reasonable use and wear would permit, damages by the elements excepted. It was held that he had no right to disconnect and plug up the heating pipes, rendering them useless for the purpose for which they were intended.—Smith vs. Taranto, 140 N. Y. Supp. 794.

Eminent Domain—Railroad—Right to Excavated Material.

So far as it is possible to state a rule applicable to all kinds of material found upon a railroad right of way, it seems to be settled that a railroad company is entitled to remove any material when the safety or convenience of the road requires such removal, and also of the road to appropriate so much of the material to its own use as is reasonably necessary for the construction and maintenance of its road, at least for use on that part of the road; but it has no right to sell or give away such material to another person.

The condemnation of a right of way for railway purposes is held in the Indiana case of Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Hadley, 45 L.R.A. (N.S.) 796, to include the right to use elsewhere so much of the earth, rock, and gravel as is necessary or convenient to remove in constructing or repairing the roadbed.

Guaranty for Supplies by Corporation—Validity.

A private corporation engaged in the construction of a hotel building made a contract with B, whereby B agreed to furnish the labor and materials for the installation of a heating plant, etc. The corporation transmitted to a company to whom B had applied for supplies a letter, signed by the hotel company's president and secretary informing the company to which B had applied of his being awarded the contract, that he had placed his order for material with that company on terms that he was to pay 60% of the bills on delivery and balance in 60 days, and stating that the writers were prepared to meet such terms with B, so that the company would be perfectly safe in shipping material to him. The company furnished the material on the strength of the letter, and B failed to make the payment as agreed. In the action against the hotel company it was held that that company having received the benefit of the material furnished by the plaintiff on the faith of the guaranty that the price would be paid by B, and being in a position to protect itself by withholding from B sufficient to pay the plaintiff's demand, it was estopped, when sued on the guaranty, to claim that it was ultra vires.—Kellogg-Mackay Co. v. Havre Hotel Co., C. C. A., 199 Fed. 727.

Trinity Tenements.

Twenty-seven of the dwellings taken by the widening of Varick street belonged to Trinity Corporation, and 18 dwellings belonging to other owners stood on Trinity land held on ground leases. Fifty-nine apartments belonging to Trinity were vacated. As opportunity offered, houses or apartments have been reserved for old tenants in undisturbed neighborhoods.

The rents in the houses owned by Trinity have not been raised, in spite of the increased demand for accommodations. The average rate is still very low, that is, about $1 a week, or between $4 and $5 a month per room. The limits of the rents paid remain the same. One tenant renting the whole of a very small house pays only $12 a month. At the other end of the scale, one two-family house pays a monthly rental of $100. The apartment rents in three-family houses range from $7 a month for three rooms to $26 for five rooms.

The average number of families to a house in the dwellings now belonging to Trinity is 2.5. Of the total number of residence buildings, 107, or 31 per cent., are occupied by one family each; 128, or 37 per cent., are two-family houses, and 111, or 32 per cent., have accommodations for as many as three families each. Contrary to what seems to have been the popular impression, the majority—over two-thirds, in fact—of the residence properties are thus private dwellings for one or two families, and less than one-third would come under the legal definition of tenements—that is, houses for three or more families.

Only one house is occupied by a large number of tenants. This is a building erected years ago as a model tenement, containing 21 apartments—82 rooms. The next largest number of families in a house is 13, and the next is 10.

The number of ordinary dwelling houses now owned by Trinity is 346. There are accommodations for 850 families, or between 3,000 and 4,000 persons.

When Owner Is Entitled to Possession.

Contractors believe that the owner should not be entitled to possession of the building until the entire contract price has been paid. The Uniform Contract does not so prescribe. The contractor should be allowed possession of the premises until full payment of the sum agreed upon is made. An owner may bring up all kinds of work and trouble after he has taken possession of the premises, even though the work is satisfactory and in accordance with plans and specifications in every respect. He then withholds the money and tells the contractor to sue him. Just because a window does not slide as it ought two or three weeks after a house has been occupied is no reason why the owner should hold up the last payment, but this is often done in cases where the owner takes possession of the property before final payment is made. The contractor has action, but no class of business men hate litigation worse than contractors.

There should also be provisions in the Uniform Contract, warranting that the owners of a building proposed, are the owners in fee simple of the property upon which the building is to be erected, or if the owners are not, it should be stated under what conditions the ground is controlled. In other words the contractor should be assured of the ability of the owner to pay for the building. Not long ago in Columbus we had a case of a man who took bids and let the contract for a $60,000 structure, and after the contractors had put $10,000 into labor and materials on the job, it was found that the owner not only did not own the land upon which he was building, but he did not have the money with which to proceed with the work. This is pretty serious business to a contractor, whether he be operating in a large or a small way.

The writer is inclined to the opinion that differences may be remedied by concerted action in bringing the matter to the attention of the American Institute of Architects which promulgates the Uniform Contract and the General Conditions of specifications.—From "The Building Age."

Westchester Road Will Lessen Deficit Yearly.

Leverett S. Miller, president of the New York, Westchester & Boston Railway, presented some interesting facts in his testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission in the New Haven inquiry.

He said: "The Westchester has now started to earn its operating expenses Its deficit after charges, which amounted to $1,400,000 in 1913, will lessen year by year, but cannot be entirely overcome before 1919 or 1920.

"It will require between four and a half and five times the present gross earnings of the Westchester to take care of the operating expenses, taxes and fixed charges.

"The New York, Westchester & Boston Railway will be a valuable investment for the New Haven Company when there is completed the line between New Rochelle and Port Chester, the line between White Plains and Brewster and between White Plains and Danbury, the Lexington avenue subway, the connection between the Lenox avenue subway and the Westchester at 180th street. The last named will be the first to get finished, and the contractors should complete the work within twelve months."

For a New West Side Subway.

A mass meeting in the Riverside Theatre Building, Broadway and 96th street on Monday night appointed a committee of fifteen to appear before the Public Service Commission in advocacy of a subway up Central Park West from Columbus Circle to connect with the present Lenox avenue line at 104th street. Among the speakers at the meeting were Henry Bloch, president of the United Real Estate Owners' Association; David Robinson, secretary of the Broadway Association, who also represented the Harlem Board of Commerce; Harry Goodstein of the Upper Manhattan Protective Association, Assemblyman Mark Eisner, Mrs. A. E. Ellison and Ira J. Ettinger. Joseph Caccavajo estimated the cost at $3,500,000, but said he would prefer to see the Brooklyn Rapid Transit's Broadway line extended up Central Park West and ultimately to Washington Heights.

Experts to Address Owners.

Tax Commissioner George V. Mullan, Cyrus C. Miller, Lawrence M. D. McGuire and Allan Robinson will address the members of the United Real Estate Owners' Associations, on Tuesday evening, May 26 at Tuxedo Hall, Madison avenue and 50th street. The associations at the recent State Factory Commission Hearing advocated the establishment of a central bureau of inspection for all municipal departments and have appointed a committee to make a study of this problem for the purpose of presenting before the Mayor a comprehensive plan for its solution.

large sales, the principal one involving the Hotel Belle Claire, at Broadway and 77th street, which was acquired by Herbert Du Puy, of Pittsburg, president of the Crucible Steel Company, already a large property owner in the section. It is estimated that Mr. Du Puy's holdings in upper Broadway aggregate upwards of $15,000,000. Other transactions of interest were the acquisition of an apartment house site in East 74th street and the obtaining of an option to purchase the Gravesend race track property, in Brooklyn. Several multi-family structures in the Washington Heights section changed hands and in the suburban zones, dwelling leases were a feature.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week as 19, as against 26 last week and 26 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 4, as compared with 11 last week and 7 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 15, as compared with 15 last week and 19 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 185, as against 169 last week, 20 having stated considerations totaling $614.125. Mortgages recorded this week number 103, involving $2,101,033, as against 101 last week, aggregating $2,620,366.

From the Bronx 13 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 17 last week and 16 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $1,198,297, compared with $1,443,991 last week, making a total since January 1 of $18,342,060. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $1,483,580, and the total from January 1, 1913, to May 24, 1913, was $23,832,971.

Herbert Du Puy Buys Hotel.

One of the largest realty transactions of the year has just been consummated, a well-known hotel in the upper Broadway section having been sold to a Pittsburgh investor, who gave in exchange a hostelry in that city. Herbert Du Puy, president of the Crucible Steel Company, has added to his already large holdings in Broadway by the purchase, through L. J. Phillips & Company, from Albert Saxe, of the Hotel Belle Claire, a ten-story structure, at the southwest corner of Broadway and 77th street, having a frontage of 105.5 feet in Broadway, 119.10 feet in 77th street, the other frontages measuring 102.2 and 146 feet, respectively. Mr. Saxe built the hotel several years ago as an investment. The property was held at $1.300,000.

In part payment Mr. Du Puy gave the Hotel Antler, at the corner of Smithfield and Wood streets, Pittsburgh, Pa., measuring 30x240 feet. Mr. Du Puy several years ago foresaw the possibilities of increment on upper Broadway, from 59th street north, and the great increase in values along this thoroughfare is a confirmation of his good judgment. Title to the Belle Claire will be taken by the Morewood Realty Holding Company, 71 Broadway, which with the Lansing Realty Holding Company are the two corporations holding title to all of Mr. Du Puy's real estate in this city. James C. Ewing is the managing director of these companies.

Aside from the Astors, Mr. Du Puy is ranked among the largest individual property holders in Manhattan. His holdings in the upper Broadway section are valued at about $15,000,000 and include the National Building, northeast corner of Broadway and 12th street, the Hotel Empire, Broadway, Columbus avenue and 63d street, the Van Dyck and Severn apartment houses on Broadway and Amsterdam avenue, between 72d and 73d streets, the Lansing Building, occupying the block front on the west side of Broadway, between 82d and 83d streets, the Adamston & Evanston apartments, which include almost the entire block bounded by Broadway, West End avenue, 89th and 90th streets, the Marseilles Hotel, Broadway and 103d street, Forrest Chambers, in the block front on the west side of Broadway, between 113th and 114th streets and the block front in the north side of 211th street, between Broadway and Amsterdam avenue.

New Brooklyn Department Store.

Oppenheim, Collins & Co. have purchased 481-485 Fulton street, Brooklyn, 396-402 Bridge street and 147-151 Lawrence street, adjoining their present quarters, as a site for a new store. The transaction, involving approximately $300,000, will be followed by the erection of a modern store building, to cost about $250,000. It is the intention of the firm to occupy the building early in the autumn of 1915. The plot fronts 60 feet in Fulton street, 100 feet in Bridge street, and about 63 feet in Lawrence street. The building to be erected will conform in nearly every respect to the establishment of the same firm in 34th street, Manhattan.

Lawyer Buys in East 61st Street.

John T. Pratt, a lawyer who resides at 11 East 61st street, has purchased the two adjoining 4-story dwellings, each 25 x 100, at 7 and 9 from Edward Tuck and Samuel Rosenthal, respectively. This newly acquired plot will be improved with a high-class residence. Adjoining on the west is the residence of Mrs. Pembroke Jones and at the Fifth avenue corner is the Bostwick property. Directly across the street, at 2 and 4 East 61st street, Mrs. E. W. Bliss is erecting a fine home. Both the Tuck and Rosenthal houses have not changed hands for many years. The former has been under one ownership since 1876 and the latter since 1872.

East Side Landmark to Go.

Edward N. Crosby & Co. have sold for the trustees of the Society for Promoting the Gospel among the Seamen in the Port of New York, the southwest corner of Madison and Catharine streets, known as the Mariners' Church on plot 70.3 x 65. This building has been for 98 consecutive years a house of worship among seamen, and is one of the old landmarks of the East Side. On account of neighborhood changes, the society has decided to carry on its work in the Chelsea district. The new owner, B. F. Golden, will tear down the present structure and erect on the site a 6-story tenement with stores.

Assemble Choice Plot.

Coudert Brothers have purchased from Thomas Hastings, through Pease & Elliman, the 5-story dwelling at 11 East 41st street, on lot 22x98.9, adjoining a similar building at No. 9, which they recently purchased at auction for $131,864. The buyers now control a 44 foot frontage in one of the most desirable side-street locations in the Fifth avenue section. It adjoins the Rogers-Peet Building, now in course of construction.

Gravesend Track Under Option.

A syndicate is reported to have obtained an option, which expires on July 1, on the old Gravesend Rack Track, comprising about 400 acres on Ocean avenue, Neck road and Jerome lane. More Heat for Less Money!!

A Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler makes more heat for less money than any other hand fired, low pressure boiler in existence.

Various tests prove its efficiency averages 22% higher than other boilers. By that we mean it takes from coal, and uses for heat making purposes, on an average, 22% more of the heat than can be secured from coal by the ordinary boiler.

Here is another fact:

KEWANEE
Smokeless Firebox Boilers

Open Stair Tenements, 502-522 East 77th Street. Four Kewanee Boilers and Two Kewanee Water Heating Garbage Burners.

are smokeless. Even when burning the cheaper grades of soft coal they will not make enough smoke to conflict with any smoke ordinance no matter how stringent.

In many of the best buildings in New York City and elsewhere cheap soft coal is being burned smokelessly in Kewanee Smokeless Boilers.

That means that instead of paying high prices for Anthracite the cheaper grades of soft coal can be used. An additional saving above the 22% mentioned above.

We can prove the truth of these statements. Will you let us?

Money Well Spent

Every day in Brooklyn some already-built apartment house is made modern and convenient by the installation of electric light.

The owners of these buildings realize that the public is educated to the many advantages of electric service. They are quick to grasp not only the fact that vacant apartments rent quicker when electrically equipped, but also that tenants are willing to pay more for an electric-lighted apartment than for any other.

The money spent, then, to make the necessary installation is really not an expense, but an investment that pays large returns.

THE LAW AS IT AFFECTS MANUFACTURING LOFTS

By WILLIAM M. SHACKFORD, of Daniel Birdsall & Co.

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager For The American Real Estate Co.

TO the casual observer it would seem that most of the municipal and State authorities were devoting the major portion of their time and energy endeavoring to find some changes which can be made in the existing laws. While some of these changes are necessary and just, still others work a direct hardship to the property owner, without giving the desired relief. The basis for many of the changes in the laws was the disastrous Triangle fire, which caused large loss of life. Public sentiment was aroused to a high pitch, but the result of the enactment of the new laws has been the creation of a large number of new departments having jurisdiction over various sections of the laws, and it has been found that many of these departments conflict to a serious degree. An example of this might be cited in a recent order of the Labor Department.

About a year and a half ago the Fire Prevention Bureau ordered on a building a drop ladder reaching from the lowest fire escape platform to the street level. This order was promptly complied with to the satisfaction of the bureau. The recent rulings of the first mentioned department now condemn this style and require another kind of ladder. Such a system could go on indefinitely.

These many new laws have necessitated a radical change in the construction of twelve-story buildings; the cost of construction has been increased and the available rental space reduced. The result is that the net return to the property owner is less than in former times.

Many Laws Just.

Many of the laws are proper and just. For example, the provision that all exit doors must open outward is excellent and will undoubtedly be the means of saving many lives. Another beneficial law is the requirement that sprinkler systems be installed in twelve-story buildings. This latter measure is of advantage to both owner and tenant, as it tends to reduce overhead charges through a reduction in the insurance rate; and it raises the character of the tenants, for undesirables, from an incendiary point of view, frequently shun a sprinklered structure.

I am inclined to believe that the law requiring red lights at all exit doors is a good one. Such a light attracts attention and impresses on the mind whether one wishes it or not the fact that the light means something besides illumination. No matter how dull a person is the constant sight of the red light causes the thought of its purpose to percolate into his brain. And it must be admitted that the workers in these factories have as a whole a very low order of intellect.

In former times fire towers were not installed in a twelve-story building, stairways and fire-escapes (outside) being all that were required; and in the case of a building having frontages in two thoroughfares, one fire-escape on the factory end was all that was necessary to comply with the law. Today the same structure requires in addition the installation of at least one and possibly two smoke towers. Another thing that takes floor space is the extraordinary number of toilet facilities and the arrangement of partitions and hallways by which they are reached. Each year the demands of the department controlling that part of the building have called for more of these facilities, so that now the number is out of all proportion to what could be comfortably gotten along with.

WILLIAM M. SHACKFORD.

Today the trim of a twelve-story building must be fireproofed and that again raises the question of the increased cost of construction. Why it should be fireproofed I do not see, for it is difficult to set fire to the smooth side of any board, while in the very floor where all this fireproofing is built one will find piles of packing cases, wooden partitions, not reaching the ceiling, also desks, tables and other articles which go to make up obstructions on a factory floor.

I have in mind a twenty-story building, now in the course of construction, measuring about 75x250 feet, where one set of inside and one set of outside stairways are called for, and in addition two, and probably three, fire towers will be required. While it is always advisable to have plenty of outside stairways, there might be a tendency for providing more than are really necessary, in view of the fact that these buildings are of fireproof construction. In the first place these stairways and towers remove a large amount of what would be rentable space, and in the second place the department has ruled that one of the towers must be in a certain portion of the floor, which, by its very location, destroys about twenty or twenty-two feet of the most valuable light that any floor would be fortunate in having, namely, the north light.

All these requirements increase the cost of construction and do not, except in the case of the sprinkler, aid materially in obtaining rentals commensurate with the increased initial cost. The rental space is reduced by the requirements of the law.

Fears Ungrounded.

What is the cause of these requirements? Simply the fear that another catastrophe may visit one of these buildings. As a matter of fact, such a recurrence is very improbable, and would be more so if the owners of factories would be more strict with their employes, prohibiting smoking in the workrooms, keeping the premises clean and clear of waste materials and rags. Another very important thing is to train employes in fire drill and show them just what must be done to avoid panic and leave the building without loss of life or injury.

In the case of a building not located on a corner it is now necessary to construct a fireproofed hallway from the fire-escape in the rear to the front of the building. This either takes space from the store floor or, if the hallway runs on a balcony to the side of the building, it reduces the height of the wall space in the store. This has a decided effect upon the rental value of the store.

THE VALUE OF ENGINEERS.

For many years the value of the engineering force in large structures has been more or less minimized and the true importance of its work overlooked. During the last few years there has been a change in conditions, for it has been repeatedly demonstrated that an inefficient engineering force will ruin absolutely the owner's chances of obtaining an adequate return upon his money invested. G. J. Miller in speaking of this subject said last week:

"Occasionally some representative of building management attempts to minimize engineering talent and boost the building managers, thereby advertising mutual short comings and accomplishing nothing.

"The first and paramount position in management of buildings, naturally comes to the man that has made real estate and its financing a study. He must be one versed in every art pertaining to his business. His judgment must be excellent and place his services where they bring the maximum results with a minimum friction; this he can best do by pleasing his tenants through the agency of a well-equipped personnel; he cannot shirk the responsibilities that make his calling one of importance.

"The actual operation of a building rightfully belongs to a man who is a master mechanic and steam engineer, one who has a practical and theoretical training, gleaned by experience of many years; who knows the people he supervises, their habits and customs and is respected by them for his abilities; for it is a fact that the actual operation of a modern building is four-fifths mechanical and constructional. The day of the educated head-porter-superintendent has passed, and with it has vanished the individual owner-manager, Misapplied Efforts.

"When we see a building manager wasting his time on cheese cloth or buying oil by test, we cannot refrain from stating that the engineering department, can, by leaky boiler setting or valves, waste more money in two weeks than the entire cost of janitor's supplies for one year. When we realize that the janitor's supplies against engineer's supplies (construction, alterations, maintenance, etc.) are as one is to twenty; and that the wages of the engineering department are one-third the entire payroll, notwithstanding the fact that only 20 per cent. of the entire personnel of buildings are in that department, we will understand its relative importance.

"Let the building managers unite and demand better conditions and establish their power by mitigating the present evils that almost amount to confiscation of property by municipal and state departments that have sprung up over night, that place violations on buildings and have not even a code to guide their recommendations, which recommendations sometimes conflict.

"The only men who are competent to rightfully judge these matters are those who have been trained in managing and operating buildings; for, financially, a building can stand only a certain expenditure a year."

AUTOMATIC SPRINKLERS.

They Have Made a Remarkable Record and Their Use Is Spreading.

The automatic sprinkler, as a means for protecting buildings from fire, developed from the perforated pipe or open head system which came into use in this country about 1850. In the perforated pipe system the buildings were fitted with networks of piping throughout. When fire occurred a gate valve placed at a point outside the building was opened and the water admitted, which found its way through the many perforations and extinguished the fire. With such a method it was, of course, necessary to discover the fire and the time lost in opening the valve controlling the flow of water, together with the large damage done by the excess of water, caused the automatic sprinkler heads to be developed. With their use the fire becomes localized and the amount of water used to extinguish it is very much reduced. The automatic heads came into use about 1860.

Mr. Grinnell's Invention.

Mr. Frederick Grinnell, who has been called the father of the automatic sprinkler, did not perfect the modern device until about 1882. This device consists essentially of an orifice held closed by various combinations of metallic levers, soldered in place with a fusible solder. This solder has various melting points, depending upon the position in which the head is placed. The lowest melting point is 150 degrees Fahrenheit and the highest 300 degrees Fahrenheit. It is necessary to put the high melting degree heads in places that are already subjected to some degree of heat such as skylights or engine rooms. The heads have also what are called distributors, so designed to throw the water about evenly in all directions. In general, the sprinkler system as applied to the modern loft building will consist of a network of pipes carrying at intervals the fusible heads. Two sources of water storage or supply are used, usually a pressure tank upon the roof and an open gravity tank, a water pump for filling the tanks and an air compressor for raising the pressure in the pressure tanks, thereby increasing the efficiency of distribution; in certain cases special valves are used to prevent the water from entering the pipes until the heads are fused; this is due to the fact that in some buildings heat is absent, and if the pipes were filled with water this water might freeze and the pipes burst.

There is now under consideration by the authorities in New York State the question of allowing the high-pressure water distributed in the Catskill aqueduct to be used as an additional source of supply in sprinkler systems in New York City by means of suitable reducing valves.

A Sprinkler in Action.

When a fire occurs one or more sprinkler heads fuse and open and water rushes through the system, and from these heads the air pressure supplied by the compressor in the pressure tank and the gravity tank increases the area covered by the water, at the same time electrical connections are made with the central station of the District Telegraph Co. apprising them of the fact that water has started from the heads. This is done to limit as much as possible damage due to water by defective heads and accidental opening of same.

As an additional safeguard the Underwriters demand the installation of watchmen with recording devices placed throughout the building registering their daily trips of inspection. The record of automatic sprinklers as compiled by the National Fire Protection Association for the past twelve years is remarkable. Out of 6,064 fires, 67 per cent. were entirely extinguished by sprinklers, 27 per cent. held in check so that the fires were easily controlled by hose streams, and 6 per cent. were not controlled chiefly on account of defective water supply and partial equipment of sprinklers. The records also show that 30 per cent. of these fires were extinguished by the opening of one sprinkler head, 45 per cent. by two sprinkler heads, 65 per cent. by five sprinkler heads, 17 per cent. by ten sprinkler heads and 90 per cent. by thirty sprinkler heads.

When it is taken into consideration that a sprinkler head means a ½-inch opening, this is an extremely fine record and shows the vital importance of controlling the fires at their inception. The reduction in insurance rates effected by sprinkler systems is very large and is such that the cost of installation is paid for in a few years.

Sprinkler systems have been installed successfully in storage warehouses, car barns, loft buildings and vessels, and their use has spread greatly in the last few years.

THE VALUE OF WASTE.

Millions of Dollars Saved Annually in Material Once Thrown Away.

NO longer is it a secret that a considerable part of the income derived by clever managers for their buildings is from the marketing of waste products that come out of offices. Managers frequently marvel at the liberal size of the bids made in the fierce competition existing between scavangers seeking the privilege of carting off the trash from business buildings, hotels, apartment houses and even tenements, but the answer to the problem was forthcoming at the meeting of the National Association of Waste Material Dealers.

A member stated that an annual business of $700,000,000 is done in salvaging stuff of all kinds that the country throws out as useless.

One concern pays the management of the McAlpin Hotel a large sum each year for the metal tops that come off beer bottles. The cork inside is used in making cheap life-preservers and insulating material for floors. The tin from these tops is chopped up and has a part in the manufacture of silk and for making metalized roofing material. There are gleaners of these metal tops in every hotel, restaurant and saloon in New York.

The bits of soap left by guests in the hotel rooms are used in making marble wash and for scouring tile floors if they are not remelted into larger sized soap cakes for the service department of the hotel. The oily waste that the engineer uses to clean up his engines with is bought and the oil is pressed out, refined and sold for cheap lubricants. Garbage is sent to Barren Island where it comes forth as the body of cheap perfumes, that is, that part of the vegetable oils that remains after the more valuable parts have been extracted from them for greases of one kind or another.

Waste Paper.

The waste paper is baled and sorted. Some of the linen bond is used for making a slightly inferior writing paper. Other kinds, according to their value in texture find their way into packing rooms of department stores, the newspaper is pulverized and finds its way into commercial cardboard after other ingredients have been used. Waste hemp rope produces mops, string and mats, composition floorings, wall lining, roofing and is also used as a substitute for bonding material in making lime mortar. Old carpet is transformed into writing paper and rugs. Cigarette butts and cigar stubs are garnered for fertilizer.

For the calendar years 1913 cotton rags were exported to the value of over $500,000, paper stock other than cotton rags to the value of over $800,000, woolen rags to the value of $1,000,000. scrap iron to the value of $1,200,000, old and reclaimed rubber to the value of $1,600,000, and scrap brass to the value of over $2,000,000. The figures of the imports of waste materials from foreign countries are even more striking. In the year 1913 scrap iron was imported to the value of $500,000, old copper to the value of $1,000,000, silk waste to the value of $3,000,000, old rubber to the value of more than $3,000,000, cotton rags to the value of $3,000,000, and other paper stock which was neither cotton rags nor wood pulp to the value of nearly $5,000,000.

CINDER CONCRETE FLOORS.

An Excellent Material in Need of Rational Code Regulation.

For such purposes as floors for buildings, cinders are used in concrete to a considerable extent, on account of their light weight. Cinder concrete weighs only from two-thirds to three-fourths as much as broken stone or gravel concrete. The strength, however, is correspondingly less, and whether for a given strength a floor may be made lighter by the use of cinders will depend upon the conditions of use and the character of the reinforcement.

Cinders for concrete construction are understood to mean either hard or soft coal ashes coming from boiler plants. Coal ashes from a stove or a small house boiler are generally too finely burned to be of use in this kind of concrete. Cinders from either hard or soft coal, and having sharp particles greatly in excess of the smooth ashes, make a concrete of considerable strength and of good fire-resisting qualities.

Cinder concrete floor construction will receive considerable attention by the framers of the new building code, and therefore the paper presented recently to the American Society of Civil Engineers by Guy B. Waite on this subject should be of interest to the building trade. In this paper Mr. Waite calls special attention to the arbitrary manner of using cinder concrete for floor construction and the insistence of continuing this arbitrary use by New York City, as indicated by the latest building codes.

Lack of Uniform Methods.

Although cinder concrete has acquired a large place in the field of concrete construction, the lack of uniform methods and the absence of specified unit stresses has brought it into disrepute in many circles, and unless some definite means are found to overcome these objections the revised code may prohibit their use entirely.

Mr. Waite calls attention to the fact that floor slabs of stone and gravel concrete, reinforced with steel, of the same general form as cinder concrete, have been systematized by engineers so that they are being used on a rational basis, but cinder concrete has been allowed to straggle along, without much attention from engineers in general, and is being used in a varied manner. The cities of Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago require cinder concrete for floor slabs to be designed, in thickness and in quantity of reinforcement, with certain values of unit stresses as a limit. But in New York City unit stresses are not considered in the use of such concrete.

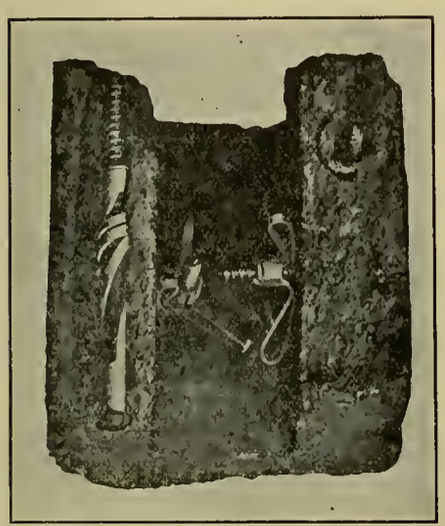
Mr. Waite thinks the excuse that cinder concrete is so extremely variable as not to permit of the assignment of unit stresses, is not well founded. The fact that cinder concrete is being used extensively in engineering construction is sufficient reason for assigning for safety some unit stresses, in order to insure uniformity. The present manner of making arbitrary approvals has led to confusion. Various forms of reinforcement obtaining approvals in which the spans, thickness of concrete, quantities of reinforcement and floor loads vary beyond description. In New York City alone there have been 200 approvals for reinforced floor slabs of varying spans, thicknesses of concrete and quantities of reinforcement.

Mr. Waite gives the tabulated results of a large number of experiments performed on cinder concrete floor slabs, and explains fully how these experiments were performed and the conditions surrounding each experiment. He condemns most emphatically the practice of testing cinder concrete under the most favorable conditions, and then recommending the results of these tests to be used under the most unfavorable conditions.

It is estimated that more than 50 per cent. of the large fireproof constructions of New York City have reinforced cinder concrete floor slabs. This proportion would probably be increased if cinder concrete floor construction were removed from the realm of mystification and misrepresentation to the field of civil engineering.

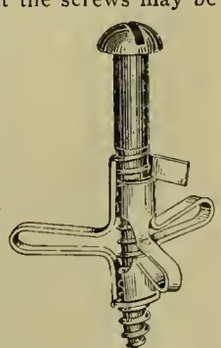
USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.



A Novel Expansion Bolt.

COMBINING the principles of the toggle expansion and anchor bolts, a device that is being introduced to the trade and described in the current Sweet's Catalogue (Architects' Edition) seems to have an appeal to contractors, building managers, plumbers, steam fitters and electricians. In many cases, according to the manufacturer, it forms a practical means of fastening articles quickly and securely to concrete walls, hollow tile, lath and plaster, expanded metal lath, metal window sashes, frames and kalamein.



AUKYRA EXPANSION. BOLT CLOSED.

The large cut shows the operation of the device illustrated in the two small cuts in a concrete block indicating the action of the toggle in a hollow back surface and also the principle of the expansion bolt on a screw driven into concrete. The advantage claimed by the manufacturers, which have offices at 149 Berkley street, Philadelphia, are that the screws may be removed and replaced at will. Another important application of this bolt is that it permits the hanging of radiators on walls and partitions. They are also successfully used in hanging of window shade fixtures, because it is said that no amount of jarring or strain will loosen the bolt or screw once it has been set with this device.

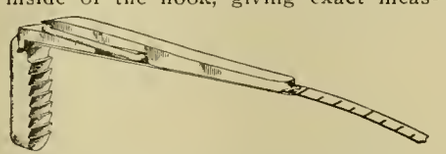
AUKYRA EXPANSION BOLT OPEN.

Another important virtue possessed by this bolt is that no matter what character the back of the wall may possess the expansion bolt invariably takes a firm hold and adjusts itself to surface conditions, holding tightly under steady or intermittent pulls. The spring feature of the toggle takes up slack and positively holds it, according to the manufacturers, so that once it is placed in position it cannot jar loose.



Makes One Light Look Like Fifty.

A NOVELTY that is said to have the advantage of cutting down the lighting charges for advertising illumination and signs is being introduced under the "Williams patents" at 181 Christopher street. It consists of a regulation enclosed electric sign, the letters of which are cut through the metal encasement. It differs, however, from the ordinary sign of this kind in that instead of having a dozen or more incandescent globes to form the outline of the letters, one or two suffice for the entire placque.

This is accomplished by a series of reflectors affixed to the interior of the sign case in such a way that the rays from the ordinary powered lamp or lamps within are concentrated into these reflectors and they give the lighting efficiency of fifty lights whereas only one or two are actually consuming power.

One-Man Measuring.

THIS is a device being introduced by the Lufkin Rule Company, of 106 Lafayette street. Its value lies in the fact that it enables one person to take long measurements. The arrangement is such that the zero point falls exactly inside of the hook, giving exact measurement. The hook is nickle plated and can instantly be attached to the loose end of a ¼ inch or ⅜ inch steel tape. Being serrated the hook grips firmly the end or a projection of the object to be measured.

Fights Fire with Steam.

LIVE steam as a fire fighting medium is employed in the new system of fire fighting being introduced by the Aero Fire Alarm Co., of 6 Church street.

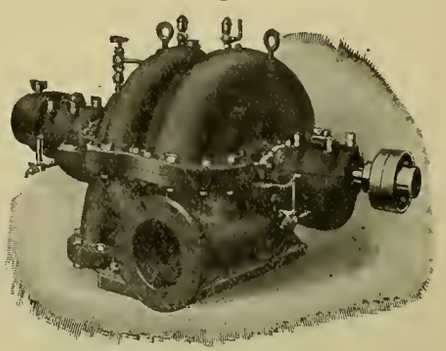
The system consists of pipe disposed upon or near the ceiling of the place to be protected and fitted at short intervals with outlets normally closed by ordinary sprinkler heads, if water is to be the fire extinguishing agent, or with small unobstructed openings, if fire is to be fought with steam or gases. In the latter system the water or steam is kept out of the pipes by an electric main stop-valve, opening only when a fire starts.

The main stop-valve is of the quick-opening balanced variety, normally closed. It is fitted with an equal-ended lever and two unequal weights for opening and closing the valve. The lighter weight hangs directly on one end of the lever and keeps the valve shut; whereas, the heavier weight at the other end of the lever does not hang directly upon it, but is supported by an electrically-operated catch, engaging a hook on a slotted link sliding over the end of the lever.

When the catch is released electrically, the descent of the heavier weight overbalances the lighter weight, instantaneously pulling the valve wide open and allowing the steam or water to enter the sprinkler pipes and escape into the building through an open sprinkler head, or the unobstructed openings when a steam system is used. In either case the fire will be quickly extinguished by the steam or water issuing from the openings in the pipes.

The electrical release of the catch on the valve is operated by a contact closed by the Aero Fire Alarm detector.

The fire alarm or thermostatic portion of the system is the regular Aero tubing, placed on the ceiling of the room to be protected according to the usual practice, and it will not only give an audible or visual signal in case of fire, but will open the main supply of the live steam or sprinkler system and extinguish the fire.

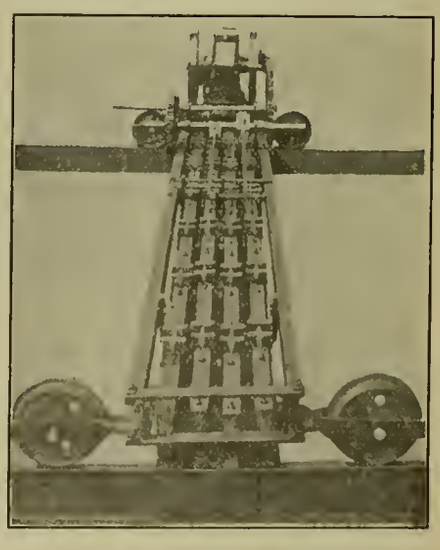


Fire Resistive Finishing Board.

THE latest thing in finishing boards for walls and ceilings is a combined cement and asbestos sheet that is said to have the virtue of not only being fire-resistive, but is capable of taking a fine decorative finish. The sheets are made in convenient sizes. The idea in putting this improved board on the market, apparently, is to put within the reach of every householder or every owner considering making alterations to the interior of buildings the means whereby he may practically cut his fire risk in half without heavy additional expense.

So the board has been made particularly applicable to kitchens, bathrooms, finished laundries and basements, also to attics and dumbwaiter shafts, or, in fact, to any other place where, under strong draught, a fire is likely to spread rapidly. It is capable of taking a coat of paint, yet its composition is so arranged that the decorative dressing will not crack or blister under varying temperatures as in bathrooms or kitchens or laundries. For office remodelling it is said to be particularly applicable, especially if pannelled effects are desired, because it is possible to wash down the painted surfaces if they become soiled.

New Centrifugal Fire Pumps.



A NEW fire pump that has rather remarkable capacity is being introduced by the Goulds Manufacturing Company of Seneca Falls, New York. These pumps can be used to discharge direct into hose lines or for service with automatic sprinkler systems. In the latter service fifteen to twenty sprinklers are considered the equivalent of one and one-eighth inch fire stream in the amount of water required. The capacity of this pump is large considering the floor space required and the weight is not great. The construction is simple and there is nothing to get out of order and cause delay when the pump is needed. It is adapted for direct connection with electric motors or steam turbines and it maintains a steady pressure at the discharge. The pump is built in conformity with the requirements of the Underwriters Laboratory.

Concrete Finishing Machine.

THE device illustrated is designed for the purpose of mechanically doing the work of shaping and finishing the surface of a concrete road or walk, a process which heretofore has required intelligent and pains-taking labor. The machine consists of a framework which spans the work to be done. There are four moving members which strike off the surface to a true grade and give it an even surface. The machine is operated by a gasolene engine which moves the contrivance forward in striking. In floating the concrete the four barrel members are placed alternately, but move concurrently, thereby insuring a perfect surface.

ELECTRIC CURRENTS INJURE CONCRETE

United States Bureau of Standards Gives Results of Investigation on Electrolysis

IT is usually difficult to determine the direct cause of failure of reinforced concrete structures and it will therefore be of interest to those engaged in this class of work to know that the United States Bureau of Standards has made an elaborate series of experiments to determine the effect of electrolysis on reinforced concrete. There has been considerable discussion as to the means employed to prevent damage by stray electric currents to underground cables and pipes, and while experts have long known to a limited extent that this damage also extends to reinforced concrete work, no definite information was available on this very important question. The results of experiments conducted by the United States Bureau of Standards have been published as Technologic Paper No. 18, "Electrolysis in Concrete." These experiments, which were started in 1910, proposed first to determine the nature and cause of the phenomena produced by the passage of electric currents; second, to investigate the probable extent of danger from electrolysis in practice and the conditions under which trouble is likely to occur, and third, to find means of mitigating the trouble due to electrolysis, leading to specific recommendations.

In the following abstract of this bulletin we have omitted the tabular data and that part of the discussion which is too technical to be of interest to our readers and given the results of the experiments that apply to practice.

EFFECT OF ELECTROLYSIS ON CONCRETE.

Of the numerous theories that have been advanced for the cracking of reinforced concrete due to electric currents, that one which attributes it to oxidation of the iron following electrolytic corrosion, has been fully established. The oxides formed occupy 2.2 times as great a volume as the original iron, and the pressure resulting from this increase of volume causes the concrete to crack.

Amount of Pressure.

The mechanical pressure developed at the surface of the iron has been measured in a number of cases, and has been found to reach values as high as 4,700 pounds per square inch, a value more than sufficient to account for the cracking of the concrete. Corrosion of iron even in wet concrete, is very slight when the voltage of the stray current does not exceed 15 volts, but the corrosion becomes rapid when the voltage exceeds 50 volts. Therefore, in order to insure safety of reinforced concrete from electrolysis the investigation shows that the voltage of stray currents must be kept low and this is especially true wherever the concrete is exposed to the action of salt water.

The voltage of stray currents may be kept below the danger point by observing the following precautions:

In wiring a concrete building with direct current circuits it is of the greatest importance that the construction be such as to preclude the possibility of either side of the circuit coming in contact with the concrete. The insulation should be of the best grade and the wires should be inclosed in continuous metal conduit. When practicable periodic tests should be made on the insulation and any defect remedied. All pipes entering the concrete building should be provided with insulating joints where the pipes enter the building. Lead covered cables coming into buildings should be insulated from the concrete structure by supporting them on wood or other similar insulating material . . . . In the case of new structures of reinforced concrete salt should be omitted altogether if there is the slightest probability that they may ever be subjected to the action of electric currents. Calcium chloride is quite as bad as sodium chloride, it being the chloride that does the harm. A good deal can be accomplished also by the proper construction of the basement, foundations, and footings of the building. If beneath the foundations and outside the basement walls, a layer of insulating material be placed, it will prevent the access of electric current through the building foundations.

Impractical Suggestions.

Suggestions of some engineers that copper-clad steel or aluminum be used as reinforcing material has been shown to be impracticable, since copper coating is readily destroyed and the aluminum is attacked by the alkali in the concrete. Painting or otherwise coating iron with an alkali resisting metal preservative before embedding it in concrete, may serve to minimize the dangers of electrolysis, but no such coating has been found that does not prevent the proper formation of the bond between the concrete and iron when the concrete sets. Attempts to increase the resistance of concrete by the addition of so-called waterproofing compounds to the cement before mixing have uniformly failed to give satisfactory results. A method frequently proposed to protect reinforced concrete by making the reinforcing material continuous throughout the building and connecting it to the negative terminal of a low-voltage generator is referred to, but only to point out the dangers of it.

When the time comes that all electric currents can be kept where they belong in wires provided for their especial use, when the street railway company provides negative returns for their systems which will prevent stray electric current from running wild over the city, then, and only then, will reinforced concrete building be absolutely safe.

EASTERN PARKWAY SUBWAY.

Brooklyn Will Celebrate Beginning of Construction—Other Progress Notes.

The Public Service Commission executed a contract with the Cranford Company for the construction of a part of the Eastern Parkway subway in Brooklyn. The Eastern Parkway subway will be operated by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company as an extension of the existing subway. The route begins at the present subway terminus, at Atlantic and Flatbush avenues, Brooklyn, and runs through Flatbush avenue and Eastern Parkway to Buffalo avenue, whence there will be an elevated extension through East 98th street and Livonia avenue to New Lots avenue.

There will also be a two-track branch subway from Eastern Parkway down Nostrand avenue to Flatbush avenue. For part of the distance in Flatbush avenue the subway will be a six-track structure, four tracks to be used by the Interborough Company and two by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation as a connection between the Fourth avenue subway and the Brighton Beach Railroad. The section covered by the Cranford contract lies in Flatbush avenue between St. Marks avenue and Prospect Park Plaza and will be mostly six-track construction. The contract price is $2,225,519.25, and the contractor must complete the work within thirty months. Work on this section will begin today, May 23, when the citizens of Brooklyn will celebrate the occasion by holding appropriate ceremonies.

Fourth Avenue Subway Progress.

The work of track laying in the Fourth avenue subway in Brooklyn probably will begin early in the coming summer, as the Public Service Commission has advertised for bids, to be opened May 21, for this work. The City of New York will furnish rails, ties, ballast and other material necessary to install the tracks, and the contractor will simply perform the work of putting them in place.

The contract calls for the laying of tracks from the Manhattan Bridge through Flatbush Avenue Extension, Fulton street, Ashland place and Fourth avenue to 86th street. From the Manhattan Bridge to 65th street the subway will be mainly a four-track line, although there will be parts of the road with as many as eight tracks. From 65th street to 86th street it will be a two-track railroad. Under this contract, however, no electrical or signal apparatus will be installed, as that is part of the equipment and will be placed by the operating company. The work must be finished within five months from the delivery of the contract. This will make it possible to finish the work of track-laying before the end of the year.

Edward H. Litchfield, B. B. Ward and George D. Ward have filed a petition with the Public Service Commission asking that a new station be built in the Fourth avenue subway in Brooklyn at Third street, which is about midway between the existing stations at Union street and Ninth street. A station at Third street, it is alleged, would be a convenience to the teachers and pupils attending the Manual Training High School, at Fourth street and Seventh avenue, as well as the patrons of the Washington Park baseball grounds. The matter has been referred to the chief engineer of the commission to report an estimate of the cost of building such a station.

The Public Service Commission has approved the form of contract submitted by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation for the construction of the third track on the Fulton street elevated railroad in Brooklyn for that portion of the road between Nostrand avenue and East New York. The company can now submit the contract to bidders.

Classon Avenue Sewer.

E. W. Voorhies, Commissioner of Public Works of the Borough of Brooklyn, says the work of building Classon avenue relief sewer is progressing rapidly and will be expedited as much as possible by the borough authorities. The completion of this sewer will permit the removal of a temporary sewer, which now occupies the space for the easterly track in the Fourth avenue subway between Butler street and Hanson place. The borough authorities expect to complete that part of the new sewer system needed to relieve the Fourth avenue subway before the end of the year. If this is done the temporary sewer can be removed from the subway in time for the beginning of operation.

Change of Route.

At the request of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company the Public Service Commission has modified the certificate granted that company on March 19, 1913, for the construction and operation of the Eighth avenue and 162d street connection, designed to connect the West Side elevated system with the new subway in Jerome avenue. The effect of the modification is to straighten the line and permit of its extension across Jerome avenue and through private property to River avenue, where it will connect with the new Jerome avenue line. As originally planned, the line turned south at the Jerome avenue crossing and then ran east through 162d street to River avenue. When the change is accepted by the company and its mortgage trustee, the modified certificate will go to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for approval.

Storage of Gasolene.

The Court of Appeals holds, in the McIntosh vs. Fire Commissioner, that the ordinance of the City of New York storage of volatile inflammable oil shall be issued for any building, shed or inclosure situated within 50 feet of the nearest wall of a building occupied as a school is a constitutional regulation and a fair, reasonable and appropriate exercise of the police power. It is enforcible as against a building which was used as a garage prior to the enactment of the statute pursuant to which the regulation was adopted (Code Ordinances, sec. 370).

Contract for H. H. Rogers' Residence.

George Mertz's Sons, Portchester, have received the general contract to build a country residence at Southampton, L. I., for H. H. Rogers. The plans for the building were prepared by Walker & Gillette, architects, 128 East 37th street, and call for a building of hollow tile and stucco, semi-fireproof, approximately 50x180 feet, 2½ stories in height. The foundations for this building were awarded under a separate contract, and are well under way, and it is proposed to commence work on the superstructure in a few days.

Preliminary Plans for St. Bartholomew's

Bertram G. Goodhue, architect, 2 West 47th street, has been invited by the building committee of St. Bartholomew' Protestant Episcopal Church, Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, rector, to prepare preliminary sketches for the new church group to be erected on the property recently purchased from the F. & M. Schaefer Brewing Co., on the east side of Park Avenue, between 50th and 51st streets. The building will be of brick and stone, thoroughly fireproof. The sketches will probably be submitted to the building committee about June 1, and if approved will then be referred to the vestry.

The "Tombs" to Be Improved.

Franklin B. Ware, 1170 Broadway, has made preliminary plans for extensive changes to the "Tombs" prison building in Centre street. One of the proposals is to provide new quarters for visitors, necessary hospital accommodations and the erection of a new building in the yard. The matter is now before the Board of Estimate for consideration, and just what will actually be done cannot be announced at this time.

Business to Replace Bronx Church.

Albert E. Davis, 258 East 138th street, has been retained as architect for an important building operation in the Bronx which involves the removal from Third avenue into 146th street of the old stone Mott Haven Reformed Church, one of the landmarks of the south Bronx, and which has stood on its present site for 61 years. The church and grounds were the gift of Jordan L. Mott, whose foundry was the beginning of Mott Haven, and whose handsome residence with grounds, foundations and statuary adorned Third avenue near the present site of the North Side Board of Trade Building. Upon the Third avenue front of the church property, a business structure will be erected, 80 x 90 feet, containing five stores on the ground floor with offices and lofts above.

S. M. Bixby & Co. to Enlarge Plant.

S. M. Bixby & Company, blacking manufacturers, of Second avenue and 46th street, Brooklyn, contemplate the construction of a large addition, about 100 x 100 feet in size, adjoining its present factory in 46th street, Brooklyn. The type of construction has not been decided yet, and no architect has been retained.

Another Apartment for Bronxville.

Joseph Petruzzi, tailor, of 463 Fifth avenue, contemplates the erection of an apartment house at the corner of Pondfield road and Gard avenue, Bronxville. Ogden, Pryor and Day, 1170 Broadway, Manhattan, will probably be the architects.

—Let the business sections spread out and give every section an equal chance to develop.

Lafayette, Franklin and White Streets. William E. Austin, Architect.

THE HALLENBECK-HUNGERFORD BUILDING.

CHARLES F. NOYES COMPANY and M. & L. Hess, the exclusive renting agents of the new Hallenbeck-Hungerford Building, now in course of construction, in Lafayette street, from Franklin to White streets, report many inquiries for space in the building. U. T. Hungerford Brass & Copper Company will occupy the ground floor, basement and second floor. The Wynkoop, Hallenbeck, Crawford Company will occupy about four floors. Several leases will probably be signed with other tenants within the next few days, as the demand is heavy for space from lithographers, printers, publishers and the diamond trades.

The Hallenbeck-Hungerford Building is sixteen stories high and covers a plot of 20,000 feet, is costing about $2,000,000 to construct, is from plans of William E. Austin, and is being constructed by the George A. Fuller Company. It is the most modern building in all its appointments downtown, and is particularly adapted for tenants using heavy machinery, where strength is necessary.

The site is not only central, but is in an improving locality, as the property is located right in the heart of the new Civic Center, close to the proposed new County Court House, near the subways, and only one block east of Broadway.

PLATE GLASS SITUATION.

Outlook More Promising for Avoidance of Rate War—Several Meetings Held.

The New York Underwriting Association held a meeting last Tuesday, and the situation in the general liability and plate glass insurance was discussed. Five outside companies were elected on a tentative basis. For several weeks there has been a crisis in the plate glass insurance situation, and even at the present time all danger of a rate war has not been eliminated, though the outlook is more cheerful than for some time past.

It was proposed that each company have three agents in Manhattan, without territorial restrictions, whose commission be 30 per cent., as against 20 per cent. for brokers. This resolution was voted down, only two companies of the twenty-three present supporting the change. At the present time agents receive 35 per cent., and brokers 25 per cent., and the outcome of the discussion was that in future agents will receive 30 per cent., and brokers 25 per cent., only one company dissenting. The reason that agents get a larger percentage is on account of the volume of business transacted, though all business goes through the home office.

The annual meeting of the Plate Glass Service and Information Bureau, which is the National Board, covering a number of states, held a meeting on May 14 and elected the following officers: Nelson D. Sterling, of the Fidelity & Casualty Company, chairman; H. D. Clarke, of the Great Eastern Casualty Company, vice-chairman; A. B. Thistle, of the Globe Indemnity Company, treasurer, and E. M. Gridley, secretary and bureau manager.

The Southwestern Surety Company has discontinued writing plate glass insurance in Greater New York until the rate situation has cleared. There is only one company, with its home office in Newark, N. J., which has not accepted the proposed rates.

Action of Seawater on Concrete.

Tests made by the Aberthaw Construction Company of Boston, beginning in 1909, to study chemical action and frost action on reinforced concrete in sea water seem to indicate that with a proper mix and proper care, piers and other structures can be made to withstand such disintegrating influences. Twenty-four piers, 16 feet long by 16 inches square, built by the Aberthaw Construction Co. in the Charlestown Navy Yard, have been subjected to tidal rise and fall in that yard for five years. They were placed with 18 inches out of water at high tide and 4½ feet under water at low tide, the mean tide being ten feet.

In general, the richer the specimen in cement, the better does it stand the test. The one pier of the whole twenty-four which was eaten all the way through was one of the leanest specimens tested, consisting of one part cement, three of sand and six of stone, cast quite dry. This specimen was eaten entirely through at about 3½ feet above low-water. About one foot in the length of the specimen was entirely gone, but the reinforcing bars held the pieces together. The back side was eaten away on a slant, for a distance of nearly 10 feet, but the specimen was only very slightly affected below the low-water line. At the eaten section the material was dead and particles could be picked off the surface with the finger nail.

As a contrast, a pier mixed from one part cement, one sand and two of stone, and cast very wet, shows a splendid condition, even after five years of treatment. This specimen when cast was soft enough so that the concrete would run out of an overturned wheelbarrow, but it would not flow like syrup.

When examined in March, 1910, this pier was apparently in as good condition as when placed. At the recent examination the face and back were slightly pitted, but the edges and sides were perfectly good and the back showed very slight action.

TRADE LITERATURE

Link-Belt Data Book.

For the first time in history, so asserts its publishers, an engineering data book has been published by a manufacturing concern which will enable users of power to select the correct silent chain drives for their work and determine the exact cost from list prices shown in the book. Besides giving complete engineering information on silent chain driving in simple and compact form, "Data Book No. 125" describes many uses of silent chain for the efficient transmission of power, and gives specific reasons and illustrations showing application in a large variety of uses.

Link-Belt silent chain is a series of links connected by joints which consist of segmental case-hardened bushings and case-hardened steel pins. The chain is as flexible as a leather belt—as positive as a gear. Its rated efficiency is 98.2 per cent on actual test. It will transmit any amount of power quietly. Over 200,000 installations, it is stated, were drawn upon for the information contained in this data book. The book consists of 112 pages, bound in flexible red cover. Copies can be obtained free of charge by addressing the manufacturers, Link-Belt Company, 29th street and Stewart avenue, Chicago.

W. G. Cornell Company Expands.

In a richly engraved illustrated folder the W. G. Cornell Co. asnounces the establishment of a department for the installation of approved sprinkler appliances as manufactured by the Associated Automatic Sprinkler Company. The company has made mechanical installations in the following buildings: Woolworth, Cass Gilbert, architect; Municipal, McKim, Mead & White, architects; Lord & Taylor store, Starrett & Van Vleck, architects; Bankers Trust, Trowbridge & Livingston, architects; Stern Brothers store, J. B. Snook's Sons, architects; Gimbel store, D. H. Burnham & Co., architects; Architects' building, Ewing & Chappell and La-Farge & Morris, associated; 80 Maiden lane, D. H. Burnham & Co., architects; the United Cigar Stores building, Warren & Wetmore, architects, and many others.

"Lowest in Ultimate Cost."

Bulletin No. 13, issued by the Turner Construction Company, 11 Broadway, bears the foregoing title and deals with the perfection concrete construction. The bulletin gives interesting detailed drawings with photographs of some of the big operations that the Turner Construction Company has executed. In the contents the following claims are made for reinforced concrete construction for industrial buildings:

"In the hands of an experienced and well organized contractor, a concrete building can be erected at less cost than the best fireproofed structural steel construction. It is proof against all deteriorating influences. It gives the lowest fire risk. These facts explain why a reinforced concrete building is lowest in ultimate cost. The heat-resisting qualities of concrete construction are superior to those of all other forms of fireproof construction. A concrete building is free from vibration. It is the most cleanly and sanitary, because it has no cracks, crevices or joints to breed vermin and collect dirt. A concrete building can be designed, built and delivered to the owner in as short a time as any other type of construction—and frequently in less time. This means that earning power begins at the earliest possible moment. The architectural possibilities of concrete are unlimited. Structural concrete framework and floors may be combined with brick or terra cotta facings to give most artistic effects at minimum cost.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

IMPROVED BUYING IN PIG IRON AND PAINT MATERIALS LOOKED UPON AS ENCOURAGING SIGNS—BRICK FIRMER

Big Forest Products Exposition Expected to Help Sale of Building Lumber Here

BUILDING material interests were inclined to accept the strengthening of iron buying this week as a sign of ultimate change for the better in steel. The fact that certain Eastern Pennsylvania steel interests had taken an extra large amount of iron seemed to be the basis for the better feeling in the metal department of the building material market. The steel companies, however, apparently were encouraged to gather their requirements for the current year, because basic iron prices had been dropped to a point that appealed to them; but it was said that if the steel companies did not have some fairly well-founded idea that conditions were about to improve, they would not have loaded up on this commodity so heavily.

Throughout New England there has been an apparent change in sentiment, which is reflected to a certain extent in the outlying parts of New York, especially for basic building commodities.

Next to the trend of the building metals market the behavior of oils and lubricants holds a center of interest Following the sharp reduction in crude petroleum prices, lists have been generally steady. Flaxseed at Duluth has moved up slightly, but linseed oil quotations in the local wholesale market still prevails at the 45 and 50 cent level. There has been a slight change for the better in the demand for linseed oil, but it was more noticeable because of the general slackness of demand than for volume.

Brick manufacturers along the Hudson and Raritan rivers are rapidly getting into shape to manufacture brick for the coming season. About 40 per cent of them already have started their kilns, and by the first of June practically all those who will operate this year will be under way. In the meantime the New York distributors are feeling a greatly improved demand, which is reflected to some extent in the current prices, indicating an upward trend, but the dealers continue to bear the market because of the impression that manufacturers will be desirous of letting last year's brick go at low prices when the new brick becomes available for use. The fact is that manufacturers are planning for a short season, and are therefore clamoring for higher quotations than are now ruling, instead of acceding to a sacrifice in order to clear their sheds. The generally high quality of brick made last season enables them to take a somewhat firmer stand, especially since they are figuring on making their output conform to the actual requirements of the New York market.

The big country-wide effort to counteract the influences that have been working against the use of wood in building construction took shape this week in a practical demonstration of the utility of this commodity in general construction. Practically all the lumber interests throughout the Eastern district are concentrating their efforts to show the application of wood. Out of this demonstration the distributors in the Eastern territory expect to bring about a marked change for the better in lumber sales, especially in the trim and flooring departments. The introduction of composition and other materials for flooring and trim has been cutting heavily into the market for lumber for these purposes, and the demonstration was designed to check this movement.

The bright spot in the building material and supply department is found in paint and paint materials. More seasonable weather has helped demand perceptably, but painting operations are hardly up to normal yet. An increase of $2 a ton in the selling price of pig lead has made no difference in the market quotations for lead pigments, and as a matter of fact the latter is holding a larger differential than shown over the value of the metal, as pig lead prices are considerably lower than they were at this time last year, while pigments are selling at exactly the same level as a year ago.

IRON AND STEEL.

Better Buying in the Former—Structural Material Weaker.

BASIC iron buying was the bright spot in the metals department of the building material market this week. The fact that this kind of iron showed the greatest animation gave evidence that steel manufacturers were anticipating heavier structural requirements before long, although slack in price of this iron to encourage steelmakers to come into the market on their second-half needs doubtless had a stimulating effect.

The American Steel & Wire Company reports having received orders in heavier volume since the first of the month than in any recent month this was considered another indication that there was an improvement in this department, but it is marked by decided fluctuations in daily volumes booked.

According to authorities in the trade, the steel contracts from this work, aggregating close to 175,000 tons for subway construction, have been placed since the original subway contracts were closed. Of the total, about 150,000 tons were placed with the American Bridge Company and 25,000 tons with the independent fabricators. It is also estimated that before the present construction is finished about 200,000 tons additional will have been placed. With elevated track extensions and improvements the total structural steel purchases will have amounted to 500,000 tons.

According to the statistical department of the American Iron and Steel Institute the total production of beams, beam girders, zee bars, ties, channels, angles and other forms of heavy and light iron and structural steel shapes in 1913 amounted to 3,004,889 gross tons, an increase of 158,402 tons over 1912. Of last year's total 2,553,806 tons were heavy structural shapes and 451,083 light structural shapes.

The total production of iron and steel wire rods in 1913 amounted to 2,464,807 gross tons, against 2,653,553 tons in 1912, a decrease of 188,746 tons. The steel wire rods rolled amounted to 2,463,975 tons and the iron rods to 832 tons.

TURPENTINE.

This Paint Ingredient May Show Gradual Advance.

PAINT ingredients as a general rule have held fairly firm despite unsettling conditions in the crude market and in one instance, that of turpentine, there has been a steady recovery from the slump which featured the market in this department at the close of April. Present prices rule at 48 cents plus for single barrels with larger lots fractionally cheaper in wholesale quantities. The presence of various substitutes on the market is the greatest hindrance to consistent advances in the values of this commodity and these substitutes are increasing in number. A better demand at primary points and an increase in export buying, said a leading paint authority, has placed the material in a firmer position. Further advances are probable, according to some authorities, although no sharp rises are expected.

EMERGENCY SUPPLY ORDERS.

Jobbers Handled 16,000,000 Lb. Requisition Following the Blizzard.

AN echo of the storm of the first of March was heard at the convention of the supply men, recently held, when the sudden strain sustained by the electrical supply interests of this city immediately after the last big snowstorm was recounted for the Record and Guide by a representative of the Western Electric Company.

The extent of that storm may be measured by the fact that 150 carloads of poles were ordered weighing 13,000,000 pounds; 16,000 miles of wire weighing 2,300,000 pounds; 14,000 cross arms weighing 750,000 pounds; fifty miles of cable weighing 270,000 pounds; fifty miles of strand weighing 60,000 pounds; 1,000,000 pounds of hardware, such as tools, tape, connections, braces and other equipment were ordered; 200,000 insulators, all totaling approximately 16,000,000 pounds.

So great has been the drain for this material upon the market that along the lines of the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Reading emergency cables strung along fences, temporary pole stumps and even on the ground, still serve to facilitate the operation of trains and telegraphic business for the simple reason that the wire and equipment companies have not completed deliveries.

COMMON BRICK.

Highest Recorded Unloading Movement of Last Eight Months.

SIGNIFICANCE was attached to the fact that Hudson common brick sales in this market this week favorably compared with the totals reported in the corresponding week a year ago. In that week 56 barge loads came in, as against 58 in the current week, and 59 barges were sold, as against 56 in the six days just closed. Prices, however, are not as high as those that ruled last May.

The current rate of consumption as gauged by the 60 per cent. reports filed by the Greater New York Brick Company show a better movement of this commodity into building construction over last week and, indeed, it is in excess of any unloading movement by almost 2,000,000 brick of any week since last October and shows a gain of half a million brick over that unloaded last week. Of this amount it was estimated at about 70 per cent. of it will enter into immediate consumption as the state of the manufacturing centers up the river is such as not to encourage extensive stacking.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, May 21, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges fur consumption here, follow.

A CONFUSION OF NAMES.

Atlas Portland Cement Co. Not Interested in Freight Line Fight.

THE Portland cement trade heard with interest a report this week that the Atlas Cement Company had on May 20 put into service on the Mississippi a fleet of barges to complete with the east bank railroad lines for the freight carrying trade between New Orleans and St. Louis. When the secretary of President Morron of the Atlas Portland Cement Company of this city, was asked whether there was any connection between the two companies, he said there was none.

Salesmen covering this territory say that while there is still a dearth of business there is unquestionably a better tone to inquiry. Dealers are still carrying light stocks and are holding prices fairly steady considering the competition that is ruling all over the district. Manufacturers, however, are turning out a normal quantity.

Consumers coming into the market now will find dealers competing stiffly, but the dealers are complaining about deliveries. The quotation of $1.58 per barrel in 500 barrel lots alongside dock, New York, continues to be only nominal list price for this commodity.

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

CANAL TERMINAL PROBLEM IN NEW LIGHT

Statistics Show That Cost of Project Overbalances Results Obtained —Only One Per Cent. of Erie Canal Tonnage Reaches New York City

By W. R. MESSENGER

THE many property owners' and taxpayers' associations fighting for lower taxes might profitably investigate the subject of barge canal terminals, authorized by Chapter 746 of the 1911 laws of the State of New York, which provides for an expenditure of $19,800,000. The necessary funds are to be raised by the issue of thirty-year 4 per cent. tax exempt bonds, and the interest and principal of these bonds must be met by a direct tax "on each dollar of valuation of real and personal property in this State, subject to taxation." New York City pays about 75 per cent. of the State taxes.

More than $100,000,000 has been expended for recent improvements on the Erie Canal system. At 5 per cent., the annual interest charges would amount to $5,000,000. The present total annual freight tonnage on the entire Erie Canal system is only about 3,000,000 tons. In other words, it costs the taxpayers more than $1 a ton for every ton of freight at present carried on the Erie Canal.

Tidewater Tonnage.

Only about 20 per cent. or 25 per cent. of the total present annual tonnage of the canal reaches tidewater, so that if all the tonnage reaching tidewater came to New York City it would not exceed about 600,000 tons annually. In fact, the total tonnage from the Erie Canal which reaches New York City is less than one per cent. of the tonnage handled in New York Harbor. Still, it is proposed that the State spend about $10,000,000 for canal terminals in New York City. If improvements were made on the same basis to care for the other 99 per cent., New York would need to spend $990,000,000, and there is just as much indication of increased traffic resulting from the Panama Canal and the Cape Cod improvement, and increased trade generally, as there is increase from the Erie Canal.

Erie Canal Barges.

An average of two barges per day would carry the total present tonnage, which reaches New York from the Erie Canal. There is at present four times the tonnage entering the Harlem River Ship Canal at Spuyten Duyvil than reaches New York from the Erie Canal. The $10,000,000 worth of terminals at New York would mean $500,000 annual interest charges for taxpayers to meet. That would be about $1 for terminal dock facilities for each ton of freight which at present reaches New York from the Erie Canal. It has been represented that large facilities are required at Buffalo for the Lake shipments entering the canal. The fact is that the tonnage entering the canal from the Lakes is less than one per cent of the total tonnage handled at the Buffalo harbor. An average of one barge per day would carry all the freight that enters the canal from the Lakes. More than half of the total annual tonnage of the Erie Canal is at points along the line of the canal itself, which never reaches the Lakes or the Hudson.

In view of these facts, it is wise to examine the law which permits but does not make mandatory the expenditure of $19,800,000 for terminals. It is noteworthy that the law provides for the construction of the terminals, but apparently makes no provision for the operation of the terminals, and apparently no provision for obtaining any revenue from the terminals if they are operated. The law does state that "the terminals provided for in this act when constructed shall be and remain the property of the State, and all of said terminals, including docks, dams, bridges and machinery, shall be operated by it, and shall remain under its management and control forever. None of such terminals or any part of such terminal shall be sold, leased, or otherwise disposed of, nor shall they be neglected or allowed to fall into decay or disuse, but they shall be maintained for, and they shall not for any purpose whatever be in any manner or degree diverted from, the uses for which they are by this act created."

Superintendent's Problem.

The Superintendent of Public Works is given authority to enforce the rules and regulations of the terminal act. How he is going to prevent decay, or prevent any terminal from falling into disuse, is not explained. Eight or ten different locations are specified for the construction of terminals in Manhattan alone. The whole subject of the operation of the terminals, after they are constructed, seems to be one which the law makes ambiguous, and regarding which there seems to be no unanimity of opinion.

The State Commission, created by Chapter 9 of the New York State Laws of 1912, on barge canal operation, in its report transmitted to the Legislature, January 20, 1913, said: "It is inconceivable to the members of the Commission that any fair-minded person, after giving consideration to the problem, can claim that terminal facilities, including human and machine labor, was intended to be furnished free by the State, or that there was an intent, even in the interest of commerce, either conveyed in the provisions of the act or contained in the minds of those who furthered the legislation, that the State should furnish any service or the use of any equipment beyond the waterways themselves free to commerce. Neither does it believe that commerce is in need of such wholesale subsidy, as such a policy would entail. The advantages which water shipments possess over rail shipments are too numerous and too well known to render it necessary that the State should go further on the road to paternalism than it went when the system of tolls on the waterways was abolished."

Fee Recommended.

This commission also, in its report, recommends that a terminal fee be charged on the basis of commodity tonnage, "sufficient to cover the cost to the State for the services furnished and the cost of maintenance, eliminating, however, original capitalization in cost of construction."

Evidently anticipating that this subsidy may be insufficient, the commission on barge canal operation also states in the report: "Undoubtedly, ultimately individuals and corporations owning water frontage or property adjoining water frontage will develop such property by the construction of private docks supplied with terminal equipment. The statute should be so amended as to give the Superintendent of Public Works and the Canal Board jurisdiction over such private docks and terminal equipment, to the extent that it may be necessary, in order that the utilization of such private docks or terminal facilities would not be a menace to the State's terminals."

State's Monopoly.

Thus, if the State terminals were unfavorably located, or developments rendered them unfavorably located, or their equipment was defective, or administration inefficient, still the State could maintain a practical monopoly against possibly even the open municipal docks of the city itself.

It should also be noted that the City of New York has no authority regarding the location of the terminals at this port, except in such cases as the city may cede the land to the State, and then the State has sole right to the management, regulation, construction and maintenance thereof. Although the terminal act specifies exact locations for terminals in New York City, it also provides that "the Canal Board, upon the recommendation of the State Engineer, may modify, redesign or change any of the structures or terminals, or relocate the same within any of the cities, villages or towns specified in this act." Thus New York City has no authority in the location of terminals except in such cases as the city may own the land, and then it must be ceded to the State.

Lone Provision of Law.

The law specifies that at one terminal in Manhattan, "necessary dredging or excavation shall be made to provide a depth of 35 feet of water at low tide." Obviously this is intended to provide for ocean steamers. Similar provision is made for a depth of 23 feet at Buffalo to accommodate the largest lake vessels. Thus the State would be engaged in lake and ocean terminals, as well as canal terminals. Although providing for the construction of a terminal with 35-foot water depth at New York, the law apparently prevents its use, for it expressly states, "Nothing in this act shall forbid the use of the water adjacent to any terminal, or the use of a terminal for a landing place for pleasure craft or barges carrying general merchandise, whose navigation is confined to the Hudson River and the waters of New York Harbor, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Canal Board."

No mention is made of ocean or coastwise traffic.

The act also specifies that a large and commodious barge canal traffic terminal may be provided at Jamaica Bay, but at the end it stipulates that no funds under the present act may be used for such improvement, but must be by future appropriation of the Legislature. No doubt some of the Jamaica Bay advocates have overlooked this.

It is noteworthy that some of the more conservative commercial organizations cautioned against unwise or unnecessary expenditures at the hearings before the State commission. The New York Chamber of Commerce had a special committee on barge canal terminals and investigated the subject quite thoroughly, and pointed out the inadequacy of data available which would indicate the probable increase in canal traffic reaching New York, or the character of the commodities to which the increase might be attributed. At these hearings the most extravagant expectations were in some instances advanced. For instance, figures presented regarding a probable increase in tonnage at New York would mean an increase of thirty or forty times the present tonnage. Staten Island, for instance, in the reports of the hearing, is recorded as presenting a formal plan for a terminal which would cost almost $6,000,000, which would be more than half of the total appropriation allotted to New York City.

According to the present proposals, even if New York does require $10,000,000 worth of terminals, it would be obliged to pay $13,000,000 or $14,000,000 in taxes in order to obtain them, and still would have no authority in their operation, whereas the city could provide its own terminals at less expense and could also use them when desirable for coastwise or ocean traffic and make them self-sustaining, and thus release the bonds for the construction of other port improvements, instead of having the port dotted with State control terminals, authorized by an act which is both ambiguous and inadequate. There is nothing to indicate that State construction or administration is any more disinterested or efficient than municipal. The commission created by law to report to the Legislature on barge canal operation included the State Engineer, the Superintendent of Public Works, and three others appointed by the Governor. The State Engineer dissented from the views of the other members of the commission, who failed to sign their report, and his dissenting opinions are attached to the report which has been filed.

It would seem that each city might be entrusted to provide its own terminals, or that the local municipality contribute at least half of the funds for the local improvement, thus insuring some local interest. Terminals should certainly be provided promptly when and where required, and paid for in full or in part by the community benefited, or made self-sustaining by efficient management and nominal charges. It is just as essential to have boats as it is to have terminals, and there is no great activity yet in canal boat construction. It is already stated that the railroads have gained control of considerable boat traffic on the Lakes as feeders to the railroads, but will not use them as feeders to the canal. It would be well if those interested in the port facilities of New York and property owners' associations, interest in taxes began to investigate the subject of barge canal terminals, advocated chiefly by uninformed legislators and local communities eager for any sort of improvements, with State funds, nearly 75 per cent. of which come from the taxpayers of New York City.

RICHMOND'S WATERFRONT ADVANTAGES.

FUTURE development of waterfront properties in Greater New York is constantly in the minds of municipal authorities and property owners, and periodically commissions make tours of the various boroughs to ascertain available sites where large watercraft may be docked. In speaking of this situation, Percival G. Ullman, Jr., chairman of the Industrial Committee of the Staten Island Civic League, said last week:

"Water transportation, the natural highway of commerce, solves forever the question of freights. Richmond Borough occupies an impregnable position, and the future prosperity and the greatness of our commercial life will insure for it big industrial development. Large commercial waterfront acreage lies within the boundaries of Richmond Borough. Like many other sections within the harbor of New York, this section is not served to a considerable extent with railroad connections, except in a few instances where private enterprises have provided these facilities which are so necessary for industrial progress.

"The industrial section of Richmond Borough is clearly defined; it needs no introduction of city planning; nature has assumed these responsibilities for us; therefore we can dispense with the inventative genius of man in creating artificial industrial locations.

A Great Water Highway.

"Richmond Borough has begun a new warfare; it is not to destroy, but to create and build up its industrial possibilities, so long untouched by commercial progress. The Staten Island Sound, separating New Jersey from New York, bounds Staten Island on the west for its entire length. I know of no other waterway equal to it in size which surpasses it in the volume of tonnage, or in the value carried through it annually. Therefore it is safe to assert that no other waterway on the American continent has a greater or more promising future.

"Great progress has been made in recent years on the New Jersey side of the Staten Island Sound in industrial development, due primarily to marginal railroads which have made manufacturing sites available there. The Federal Government, recognizing the Staten Island Sound as an important waterway, is deepening the channel to 25 feet at mean low water, at a cost of $19,000,000.

"The Richmond Borough side of the Staten Island Sound, when served with railroad connections, will be unsurpassed as a shipping point for export and import trade. The Fresh Kills is an arm of the Staten Island Sound, averaging 800 feet in width, and it is the only large navigable waterway in Richmond Borough that is particularly well adapted for industrial purposes.

"The fact that Richmond Borough has made rapid progress as a trans-Atlantic freight terminal must not be overlooked. There are many miles of shore front along New York Bay, from St. George to Fort Wadsworth, which is exceedingly well adapted for large piers and wharves, by reason of the depth of water and the wide range of the pier line from the shore, and above all its accessibility to the ocean over any other section of the harbor. The American Dock Company has erected and is building large piers and warehouses for the trans-Atlantic trade at Tompkinsville, and many steamships are discharging or loading cargoes for inland or foreign ports at their docks. The waterfront at this point has railroad connections; however, the whole shore from Tompkinsville to Fort Wadsworth will in due time receive the railroad facilities necessary to make it a well-developed shipping terminal.

Coal from Mine to Steamship.

"It is well within reason that the large coal-carrying railroads of New Jersey should seek an outlet to tidewater on the east shore of New York Bay via Staten Island, in order to discharge the product of the mine direct into the hold of the ship at piers which are to be built on the east shore of the borough. This plan would eliminate the slow method now employed for coaling steamers, and the saving in time, labor and expense to the shipping interests of the city would be enormous. The geographical location of Richmond Borough is such, and the distance from the coal mines of Pennsylvania via New Jersey to tidewater, on the east shore of the borough, is so short, that the island can no doubt be made superior to other shipping points on the Atlantic coast when adequate rail facilities shall be provided. Here, too, would be the ideal American terminus for steamship lines bound to and from foreign ports. This plan completed would create for Richmond Borough an advantage over any other part in the harbor of New York.

Richmond Borough's Harbor Plans.

"Richmond Borough should be connected to New Jersey by tunnel, so that a marginal freight railroad would serve our industrial site area on the west bank of the Staten Island Sound. Connection should also be made, by way of Richmond Borough with Manhattan, Brooklyn, Long Island and the Eastern States. Under this plan all terminals within the port of New York would be so connected as to be available to shippers on an equal basis, and all railroads would have equal rights in leasing public terminals at the lowest possible cost. This would be a practical plan for a comprehensive development of New York Harbor. Large piers have been built, and more are about to be contracted for. However, unless the waterfront of the Greater City is served by adequate rail connection to the piers and wharves which have been built or are to be built in the future, our past and present costly congested system must continue.

"Of all the varying factors which promise future greatness for this city, there is none of so great importance as position, and a comprehensive plan of waterfront rail connection for all the boroughs, and I suggest that the natural advantages which we possess should be vigorously supplemented for the immediate artificial development of the port of New York."

Conference of Mayors.

The Mayors of cities in this State have found a certain advantage in meeting together annually and learning from each other's experience. This year the conference will be held at Auburn, June 3, 4 and 5, with Mayor Fiske of Mount Vernon presiding, and it promises to be a notable occasion.

At the opening session on the afternoon of June 3, the next steps in the municipal home rule campaign in this State will be outlined by Robert S. Binkerd, secretary of the City Club of New York. Governor Glynn will speak on "The State and the Municipality."

Lawson Purdy at the evening session will present the results of the tax survey of the cities of the State. This survey was completed only recently, and the preliminary study of the data indicates that the committee will make several imporlant recommendations. The importance of fire prevention work in cities will be described by Joseph Hammitt, Chief of the New York City Fire Prevention Bureau. Chief Hammitt will illustrate his discussion with motion pictures, showing fire prevention methods used in New York City.

The city officials will hold a breakfast conference the second day. At this session each mayor will discuss the next most important problem his city must solve. At the close of the symposium there will be a general discussion of the problems presented.

City planning will be the subject for discussion at the afternoon session. Charles Downing Lay, former landscape architect of the New York City Park Department, will present a program of developing parks and playgrounds, and Professor James S. Pray, of Harvard University, will talk about making the survey for a city plan.

The second big meeting of the conference will be held in the evening, when Mayor Mitchel of New York will discuss the relation of the city to its employes.

ONE AUTHORITY FOR BUILDING INSPECTIONS

A Concentration of Overlapping Jurisdictions Into a Department of Safety Would be a Solution to City's Great Problem.

By RUDOLPH P. MILLER

AS A SOLUTION of the problem now under consideration by the State Factory Investigating Commission, of which Lieut-Governor Wagner is chairman, as to how to avoid troublesome duplication of building inspections and conflict of authority over buildings, Mr. R. P. Miller, late Superintendent of Buildings in Manhattan, and now engaged at the direction of the Board of Aldermen in revising the Building Code, has made to the commission, through its counsel, Abram I. Elkus, Esq., a presentation which is contained substantially in the accompanying article. No one is more qualified by intimate knowledge to speak with authority on this subject than Mr. Miller.

THE conflict of authority and duplication is not merely apparent, as some would have you believe, but it is real; else you would not feel called upon to make the investigation you are now undertaking, nor would the several departments and bureaus, at the instigation of the builders and architects, hold the conference they have called to attempt an agreement or adjustment.

You will recall that in the brief I submitted to your commission in January, 1912, I pointed out that the transfer of authority over exit facilities from the bureaus of buildings to the Fire Department, by dividing jurisdiction over a matter that is largely a structural question, would lead to serious trouble. What I then predicted has happened, and is partly the cause of the present discussion.

Further confusion has resulted by placing the jurisdiction over some buildings (I am confining my remark to New York City) in the Labor Department of the State. This added another department that might inspect buildings already subject to inspection by several city departments.

Your commission evidently sought to avoid this additional inspection and the consequent annoyance to owners by providing, in Section 79d of the Labor Law, that in cities where there is an officer invested with power to inspect buildings (to-wit, in the City of New York the Superintendent of Buildings) the Commissioner of Labor may have him make the necessary inspections and examine such plans as may be submitted for approval. Were this arrangement carried out as provided and intended, much of the public criticism now heard would not have arisen, as the securing of permits and compliance with orders could still have been accomplished through this one department.

Is Co-operation Obtainable?

Last October, when the provisions of Sections 79, 79a, b, c, d, e and f became effective, as Superintendent of Buildings of Manhattan I endeavored to arrange with the Labor Department for this co-operation as above provided, but up to this time nothing has been accomplished toward this end.

The purpose of the provisions cited from Section 79d has thus been defeated, not because the provisions are impracticable, but because co-operation between departments whose heads are not responsible to the same official is almost unobtainable.

And what is here said about the failure of a State department and a city bureau to work in harmony is true of the other city bureaus that do not report to the same elective official. The difficulty even exists in the case of the five Bureaus of Buildings which are under the separate jurisdiction of five elective Borough Presidents.

I understand that it has been suggested that the work of the Bureaus of Buildings be divided and part transferred to the Fire Department and part to the Health Department of the city. This is perfectly logical, but the argument should be carried to its proper conclusion. The work of the Tenement House Department should be similarly divided and transferred—and then the work of both Fire and Health departments, so far as it relates to buildings, should be combined. In other words, there should be only one city department having jurisdiction over the construction, alteration and equipment of buildings so far as is proper under the municipality's police powers, and this department should also see that the proper conditions are maintained.

Home Rule Needed.

Such a department should also, within the City of New York, enforce the requirements of the Labor Law. There is no more reason why the Labor Law cannot be administered by the city authorities than that the Tenement House Law can be enforced by a different department in New York than in Buffalo. The City of New York is large enough to have the provisions of the Labor Law enforced by its own officials, and there is ample work for the State Department outside of the city's limits.

Consolidation Recommended.

The suggestion here put forth is not new. In 1907, in a discussion before the Municipal Engineers of the City of New York, I expressed the opinion that the several police powers of the city should be brought in and exercised by one department, a Department of Public Safety.

Such a department would be divided into suitable bureaus, headed by commissioners or superintendents, as the importance of each would warrant. The head of the department would be the Director of Public Safety.

Logically, the Police Department would be a part of this greater department, although, in New York City, on account of its size, it might be found expedient to keep it distinct. To secure the greatest co-operation and efficiency, however, it should be retained in this Department of Public Safety.

There would be a Bureau of Fire Extinction, which would perform the work we ordinarily consider as belonging to the Fire Department, namely, the extinction of fires.

There would be a Bureau of Building Inspection, which would administer all the laws and ordinances, whether found in the Labor Law, the Tenement House Law or the Building Code, so far as they relate to the erection of new buildings or the alteration or removal of old buildings. This bureau would see that buildings are constructed properly and that the public safety is secured in this respect. One set of inspectors would attend to this, instead of several, as is now the case.

There would be a Bureau for Old Building Inspection, which would see that the safe conditions prescribed by law are maintained after the new buildings or alterations are reported completed by the Bureau of Building Inspection. This would mean that the inspectors assigned to this bureau would enforce all the provisions of law applying to existing buildings, to guard against fire, unsanitary conditions, overcrowding, overloading of floors, obstruction of exits, etc.

Bureaus for Technical Inspections.

There would be also such special bureaus as may be deemed necessary for technical inspections, such as a Bureau of Elevator Inspection, a Plumbing Bureau, a Boiler Inspection Bureau, an Electrical Bureau, Bureau of Combustibles, a Health Bureau, etc.

Attached to the director's office would be the engineering division, which would fix the standards that would govern these inspections by the several bureaus and see that they harmonize; and a statistical division that would analyze the records of the several bureaus, so tabulate them that they would be comparable, and make them of public use.

Qualified Inspectors.

The inspectors of building construction would be men qualified to pass on all matters relating to building construction. It has been said that such men could not be obtained. Such men are found in the offices of every architect of any pretensions, and with any fair incentive would flock into the city service. If the ordinary policeman can enforce all the numerous and varied ordinances and rules, an inspector with a technical training can certainly look after all the matters pertaining to building construction. We must not forget that an inspector is nothing more than a policeman who sees that the laws relating to construction are not violated. He is not called upon to do as much as the architect's superintendent who must see that every detail of the specifications is carried out. Besides, our inspectors would have the advice and assistance of a specialist from one of the other bureaus or the engineering division if he needed it.

The fire-fighting forces would, of course, be drafted and trained in the same manner as they are now. They should be required to do fire fighting only, unless perhaps such light inspection of proper housekeeping as will give them some familiarity with the buildings in their districts. It is not conducive to efficiency to make men do double duty.

The inspection of existing buildings would constitute the largest group, and they could be drawn from various sources. They could, if found expedient, be divided into groups for inspecting, respectively, dwellings, tenements, theatres, factories, etc., as they would be found best adapted.

By having all these inspection bureaus under one head these adjustments to meet the needs of the several bureaus can be easily made and a hearty co-operation can be assured.

I have here merely outlined a solution of the serious question before you, without pretending to have covered in even a small measure the many details involved. I am convinced that a satisfactory organization of a department of safety can be developed, which will not only secure a greater efficiency of building inspection of all kinds, with a considerable relief from annoyance to the property owners, but will also effect a great economy in administration.

HISTORIC SECTION RECALLED BY DEAL

Option Obtained on Old Gravesend Racetrack Revives Interest in District —Should Sale Go Through, 400 Acres Will Be Placed on the Market.

ATTENTION is directed to Gravesend by a report that the old racetrack property, comprising about four hundred acres, has been put under an option to expire July 1. Gravesend is one of the oldest settlements on Long Island. It was founded in 1649 by an Englishwoman, named Mrs. Moody, who established a township with a population of about forty. The Indians were hostile, and when the pioneers decided to become permanently established they were compelled to take the usual measures of defense from marauding bands. The homesteads were arranged in the form of a circle in the center of the village, which was surrounded by a high stockade, the farms stretching out in a fan-like shape from Gravesend Bay to Sheepshead Bay, and as far north as Twenty-second avenue. At nightfall the farmers drove their cattle from the pasture lands to the center of the township, which was strongly fortified.

Old Landmarks.

Many old landmarks still remain as evidence of this early occupancy, the best known and most picturesque being the former Platt home on Gravesend Neck road, between Van Siclen street and Gravesend avenue, where Mrs. Moody is said to have made her home. Another structure typical of the olden days is the present James S. Bennet residence, occupying the block front on the north side of Kings Highway from West 6th street to West 7th street. The historic Town Hall, which was torn down several years ago by the city, is best remembered as the headquarters of the late political leader, John Y. McKane.

Gravesend today is a purely residential section, with the two-story, one-family frame dwelling and the two-story, two-family brick building the prevailing types of construction. The principal streets are Gravesend avenue, Van Siclen street, Kings Highway and Neck road. The old residents descended from the original settlers and, including members of such families as the Lakes, the Voorhies, the Strykers, the Stillwells and the Emmons, still maintain their homes along Kings Highway and Van Siclen street towards the center of the village.

The town is well served with transit facilities, the Culver line running through the heart of Gravesend, while in the summer eight or nine trolley lines connect with all parts of Brooklyn, and Park Row. The growth of the town, however, has been handicapped by a lack of additional transit facilities and municipal improvements. With these in sight Brooklyn real estate men familiar with local conditions are most optimistic regarding its future.

Subways Aid Section.

"The installation of subways will mean a vast improvement in real estate conditions in this portion of Brooklyn," said Henry B. Davenport, president of the Home Title Insurance Company, "and will have a remarkable effect on property values in that section. Land at present is being held at comparatively low prices, and I would not be surprised if in the next three years present market prices were doubled. There are few parts of the city so favorably located for all-year residence, so convenient to the business centers, and yet so near to the ocean with all its attendant benefits during the hot season of the year."

"There is a rosy future in store for the old town," said Pierrepont Davenport, the real estate broker. "The lack of transit lines and sewers have retarded its progress, and these needs are being supplied. The work on the Sea Beach line is progressing rapidly, the retaining wall being nearly complete along a number of sections of the tube. The Culver line will also be elevated and will have several stations in the heart of Gravesend, connecting with the Fourth avenue subway at 38th street. The city officials have realized the long-felt need of a sewer and recently installed a pumping station at West 12th street and Avenue V, to connect with the new sewer at Van Siclen street and Avenue U. In the next four years the entire section will probably be equipped with a complete sewer system. Excavation for the foundation of a new sixteen-classroom school structure at Van Siclen street and Neck road has already been commenced, to meet the increasing needs indicative of the recent growth of Gravesend. A better class of people in moderate circumstances have been and will continue to be attracted to Gravesend by its suburban surroundings, good air and proximity to the sea."

Many Lot Sales Closed.

Melvin J. Ketchum, one of the oldest real estate men in that part of Brooklyn, said: "There have been more lots sold in Gravesend in the last six months than in the previous five years, and the principal reason for this activity has undoubtedly been actual commencement of construction work on the new subway. Gravesend is the same distance from City Hall as 115th street, Manhattan, and when the new tube is completed, Avenue U, Brooklyn, and City Hall will be separated by a twenty-minute ride, and Avenue U and 57th street, Manhattan, by a thirty-minute journey, since express service will be installed on both lines.

"Another factor which apparently held back the development was the ten-cent fare, which has been reduced to five cents. As a consequence, property values are maintaining as low a level as in any section of New York City; a one-family house, on a lot 20x100, being held for from $5,000 to $5,500. Renting conditions are excellent, and there is a steady demand for dwellings. A one-family house of about eight rooms rents for about $30; in the two-family buildings five-room flats average $17 and six-room flats about $20. Gravesend is along the line of the expansion of population from the crowded sections of Manhattan and with houses available at such prices it seems reasonable to assume that people will seize the opportunity to establish comfortable homes in this part of Brooklyn, thirty minutes' ride from New York City proper, and in the five-cent zone."

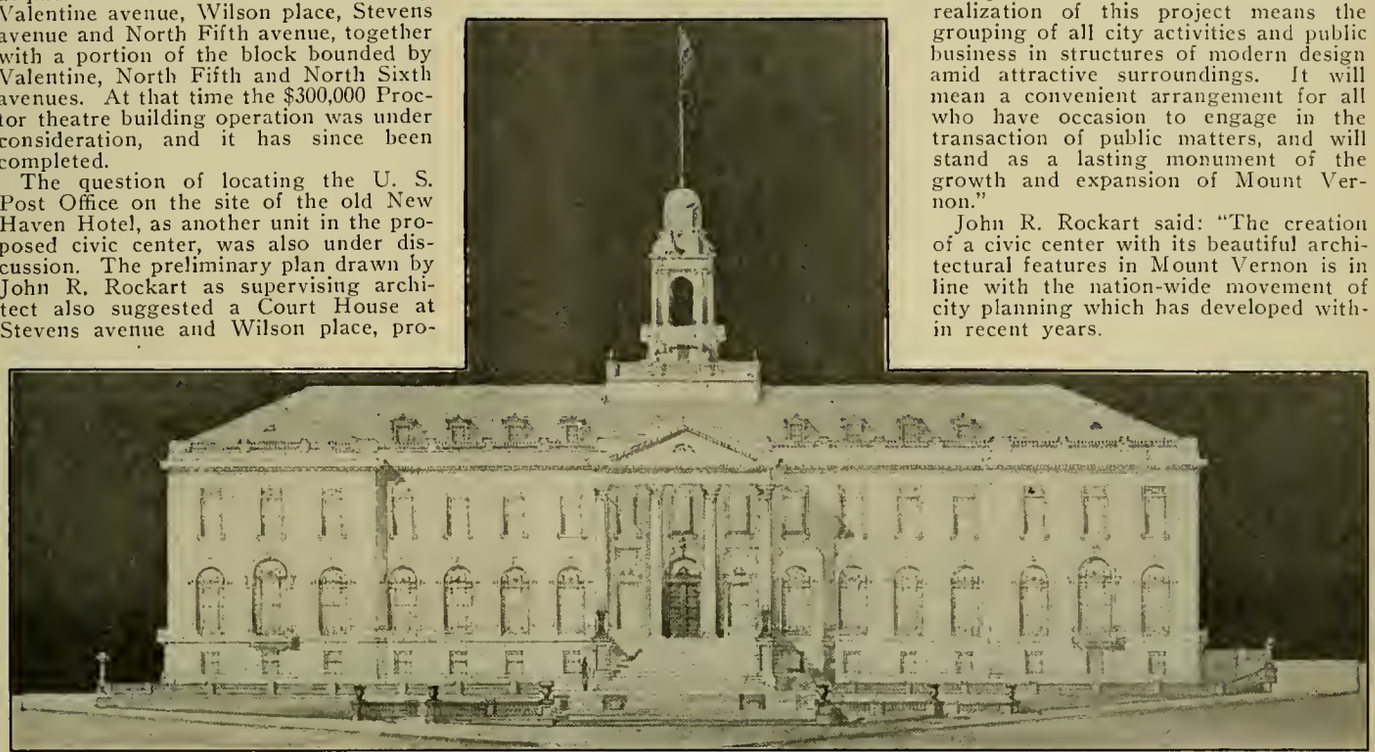
NEW OCEAN AVENUE APARTMENTS.

W. T. McCarthy, Architect.

OCEAN AVENUE, Brooklyn, for a number of years noted chiefly for its number of beautiful residences, is rapidly changing to an avenue of high-class apartments. This change is taking place without a detrimental effect upon the valuation of adjacent properties on account of the fact that the apartments are built under certain restrictions which will tend to increase values rather than decrease them. One important restriction is the setback clause in deeds, which varies according to locality from a minimum of fourteen feet from the building line to twenty-four feet.

Two new apartments have just been started in this section which will be equal to any already erected and in many respects surpass them. They are being built on the west side of Ocean avenue, about one hundred feet south of Church avenue, by Wolfinger & Lasberg, of 346 Broadway, New York City, owners and builders, from plans prepared by W. T. McCarthy, architect, 16 Court street, Brooklyn. The apartments are four stories in height, of brick and Indiana limestone and semi-fireproof. They will accommodate a total of forty families in apartments, ranging from four to six rooms and bath.

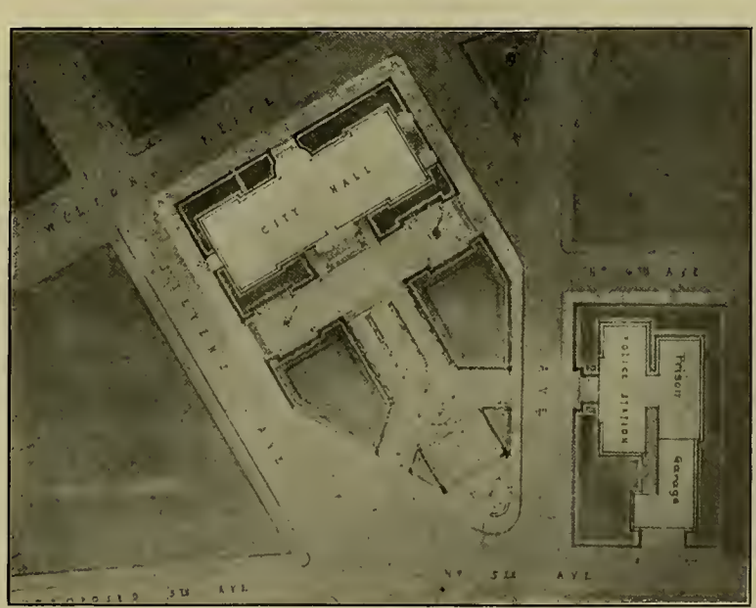
The exterior of the building has been designed in the Gothic style, with the limestone panel and archway to the entrance court as the main feature. The unusual size of this entrance court, forty by fifty feet, will insure perfect light and air for rooms opening upon it. It is proposed to lay out the court as an English garden, with a fountain in the center. The project will cost about $200,000.



Apartments in this vicinity rent from $10 to $15 per room, and tenants demand and have a right to the latest devices for living and housekeeping.

MT. VERNON'S CIVIC CENTER NOW ASSURED

Group of Structures, Including New City Hall, Police Headquarters and Post Office, Will Materially Increase Charm of Community.



WITH a $250,000 City Hall authorized, a $100,000 Police Headquarters building in course of construction and a new Federal Post Office favorably regarded by government authorities, Mount Vernon's civic center project is being realized. In May, 1912, largely through the efforts of Mayor Edwin W. Fiske, the first step was taken by the acquisition of the block bounded by Valentine avenue, Wilson place, Stevens avenue and North Fifth avenue, together with a portion of the block bounded by Valentine, North Fifth and North Sixth avenues. At that time the $300,000 Proctor theatre building operation was under consideration, and it has since been completed.

The question of locating the U. S. Post Office on the site of the old New Haven Hotel, as another unit in the proposed civic center, was also under discussion. The preliminary plan drawn by John R. Rockart as supervising architect also suggested a Court House at Stevens avenue and Wilson place, provided for the covering of the railroad tracks from Fourth to Sixth avenue and the introduction over this space of extensive flower gardens.

DESIGN FOR THE NEW CITY HALL AT MOUNT VERNON.

Later the city authorized a competition for the selection of an architect for the Police Headquarters and City Hall. Fourteen architects submitted designs, and the jury, consisting of Arnold W. Brunner, Charles A. Platt and John R. Rockart, awarded the prize to George M. Bartlett, 103 Park avenue, New York City. The competing architects were asked to submit plans suggesting the location of these structures and the general arrangement of the civic center. Since the appointment of the architect, the city has undertaken the construction of the Police Headquarters, and has also authorized Mr. Bartlett to proceed with the development of plans for the City Hall. He is now preparing the working drawings and expects to be ready for competitive bids by the end of September.

MAP OF THE NEW CIVIC CENTER AT MOUNT VERNON.

Mr. Bartlett's plan calls for a three-story and basement building, approximately 180x60 feet, of brick and white marble construction, and absolutely fireproof. The design selected is Georgian Colonial, which the architect has worked out in a simple and dignified manner, with the main facade of extreme beauty and in strict adherence to style. The basement includes the service plant, heating equipment, etc., coal storage, and the vault for records. The ground floor will be devoted to board rooms and offices. The first floor has the main entrance lobby and a large corridor, along which are arranged suites for the City Clerk, Tax Commissioner, Comptroller and Corporation Counsel. The library and Mayor's offices occupy one entire wing on this floor. The second floor will be occupied by the city court and the Aldermanic Council chamber. Along the corridor separating these main wings are to be located the offices of the heads of city departments and their clerical forces.

In the design of the Police Headquarters, prison and garage, now being constructed, the same scheme has been carried out. Mr. Bartlett is the architect for this group also.

"The acquisition of the necessary land and the preliminary developments have already greatly benefited the property in the adjacent sections," said Mayor Edwin W. Fiske this week, "and the establishment of the civic center will be an incentive for further extension of our plans for civic betterment. The realization of this project means the grouping of all city activities and public business in structures of modern design amid attractive surroundings. It will mean a convenient arrangement for all who have occasion to engage in the transaction of public matters, and will stand as a lasting monument of the growth and expansion of Mount Vernon."

John R. Rockart said: "The creation of a civic center with its beautiful architectural features in Mount Vernon is in line with the nation-wide movement of city planning which has developed within recent years.

"The effect of the establishment of such centers is best exemplified by the experiences of Kansas City and Grand Rapids, where expenditures of several millions of dollars have brought not only more beautiful cities but expansion of commercial activity, and have created in the people a feeling of civic pride which has been conducive to the strengthening of social conditions besides meeting definite practical requirements.

"Since the fundamental idea underlying municipal improvement is the providing of architecturally beautiful surroundings for the purpose of inculcating in the people an appreciation of the beautiful in art and instilling in them a spirit of aestheticism, the creation of these civic centers have been important steps towards this achievement. Not only in Mount Vernon, but everywhere, construction of beautiful public buildings, broad boulevards and well-kept parks and playgrounds have tended to destroy existing evils and improve the moral and social status of the community. In the light of the experiences of other cities where such improvements have been completed, Mount Vernon should benefit in many ways by its civic center project, including an added value for its real estate interests.

Both the city and the country are suffering more from too much government interference than from any other evil.

There should be but one city department having authority over the erection, alteration and equipment of buildings, and Supt. Miller is right in so declaring to the State Factory Investigating Commission. Too many departments are seized with the desire to send inspectors around to buildings.

A lawful building ought to be able to show a clean bill of health sometime, but by passing new laws annually to require more changes in structure and equipment, the duty of departmental inspections of buildings is made an unending process and an unfailing excuse for keeping the city pay roll heavily loaded.

Public garages and picture theatres certainly should not be permitted to settle in the midst of private residence neighborhoods, and should be kept on the main business avenues of the city. Yet how can high-class residence districts be preserved when there is no restrictive covenant running with the land, except under the plan proposed by the late Heights of Buildings Commission?

Real estate interests ought to take an active interest in the proposal of the Merchants' Association for a free port, as they have in the subject of port improvements. They should study the subject, and if they find that it would be advantageous to grant this new accommodation to foreign commerce, then they should urge official action. Because the permanent wellbeing of the city is founded on the foreign and domestic commerce of the port, and the new stimulus for the real estate market which the city is hoping for must come in a large part from the sea. The Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests should add the free port proposal to the subjects which it intends to investigate.

A Real Grievance.

The property owners and manufacturers of New York City undoubtedly have a real grievance in respect to the amount and the diversity of inspection to which they are being subjected. Their grievance is a real one, even from the point of view of the most rigid and ruthless advocate of state supervision of private business activities. What they object to is not inspection and supervision in itself, but inspection at the hands of a multiplicity of departments with conflicting and overlapping jurisdictions. The consequence is not merely a wholly unnecessary number of visits and orders, but a certain amount of annoying competition among inspectors who are acting under different laws and are responsible to different departmental heads. Assuming that all the laws and all the different administrative officials are necessary for the protection of general public interests, an enormous duplication of work and an enormous amount of wholly unnecessary and harassing interference with private business takes place. The business and property interests which are injured by this over-inspection have a right to demand the substitution of a more efficient and economical system of inspection—particularly from an administration that is committed so unequivocally to economy and efficiency.

The necessity for some reorganization of the whole system of inspection is manifest, but the form which the reorganization should take is not so obvious. The suggestion has been made that much of the annoyance and duplication which the present system brings with it can be avoided, in case the various departments will co-operate, rather than compete. Such is undoubtedly the case, but at the same time the providing of a remedy for the exasperating defects of the prevailing methods of inspection cannot be left to the voluntary action of departmental heads. They have not shown the slightest disposition to co-operate in the past, and from their own departmental point of view they have but small interest in co-operating. They are acting under separate laws passed at a separate time for the purpose of protecting the public interest in some specific manner. A conscientious Tenement or Health commissioner might not want to leave the administrative carrying out of a health or tenement house law to the inspector from another department, over whom he had no control. Departmental heads who are not conscientious and who are influenced by political motives in the conduct of their offices naturally want to keep their own force as large as possible, and to maintain the largest possible pretence of necessary official activity. In certain cases also the officials are responsible to the State, rather than to the municipal governments, so that voluntary co-operation becomes still less probable. It is evident that whatever part such co-operation may play in the reorganized system of inspection, the city administration cannot depend upon any such simple and easy method of dealing with this vexed and complicated problem.

The Record and Guide believes that some plan of centralizing the inspection service will have to be worked out. In no other way can an authority be created which will have any sufficient interest in doing away with the duplications, the conflicts and the harassing annoyances of the existing multiplicity of administrative jurisdictions. It will not, however, be an easy matter to frame a practicable plan for a central bureau of inspection. The several departments which are now sending out inspectors will, of course, preserve in almost every case their administrative independence, and they will have to have some assurance that the inspection required by the laws from which they derive their authority is being properly performed. They will have to be effectively represented on any central bureau of inspection, and they will need to have the authority under certain conditions to order special inspections. Just how such an authority can be combined with a really effective centralized system is difficult to imagine, but it probably can be done. The attempt to do it must assuredly be made. We are glad to see that a committee representing certain affiliated real estate organizations has been appointed to study the problem and to present to the Mayor a plan for an efficient reorganization of the whole system. The committee has the opportunity of accomplishing an extremely useful piece of constructive work, and one which may constitute a valuable precedent. Practically all the legislation the administrative aspects of which are now causing so much discontent has been imposed upon property owners and manufacturers against their protest, and the consequence of their opposition has been that they have not been consulted about the legislation as much as they should have been. But if a committee representing the property owners of New York can devise a system of inspection which will really enforce the existing laws for the safeguarding of life, health and the public interest, and which will materially reduce the annoyance and expense of the prevailing system, they will be both performing a valuable public service and providing the foundation for the exercise by the real estate interests of a more effective and beneficial future influence on public legislation and administration.

Strong Phases of the Building Situation.

Almost unprecedented as the existing dullness in the building market is, due to the almost entire cessation of operative building, the little activity which is going on affords an interesting indication of the comparatively strong phases of the existing situation. In the first place, two large improvements are under way in the best retail part of Fifth avenue, and in both instances the new structures will be occupied by business firms of unimpeachable standing. Farther south, two new mercantile buildings are being erected — one running through from Fifth avenue to Broadway, and the other on a side street off Fourth avenue. These particular plans are evidently the result of very exceptional circumstances. They are being built not for occupation by a tenant who has been already provided, but with the expectation of getting the advantage of the practical cessation of loft construction.

The case is different with two new structures which are being erected in the Pennsylvania district. One of these, situated on Seventh avenue, is being built by the National Suit & Cloak Co. to meet the needs of its own expanding business. The other is for occupancy by an important printing company, and makes it look as if that part of the printing trade which still swarms downtown will eventually move up into the Pennsylvania district.

Finally, a small amount of high-class apartment house building is still continuing in the lower Park avenue section. When the revival does come it may be predicted with some confidence that the parts of Manhattan which continue to exhibit some vivacity under the prevailing depressing conditions will be the first to revive.

New York City and the Canals.

The per capita levy of property taxes in New York City is $30.72, or about $122 for the average family of four, and is the highest of any city in the United States, with one exception. It is about double that of other large cities, such as Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, or Newark, or Jersey City. New York's per capita tax is about double that of cities along the line of the Erie Canal, such as Albany, Schenectady, Syracuse, Rochester and 50 per cent. higher than Buffalo. In spite of this, the present plan for barge canal terminals operates in such a way that New York City, in addition to being taxed for its own terminals, will be taxed four or five million dollars for terminals for up-State cities, notwithstanding that

New York City will pay about 75 per cent. of the $100,000,000 for canal improvements, although only about 25 per cent. of the canal tonnage reaches New York City. The present Barge Canal Terminal Act deprives New York City of any home rule whatever in the location, construction, equipment, control, operation or regulation of rates for terminals. The law also contains ambiguities which may be interpreted to the disadvantage of New York. Every way you look you see lawmakers sniping at New York City property owners.

Why Districting Is Essential.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

You ask me for a brief expression of my views in relation to the limitation of building heights and districting. In general, the Commission on Heights of Buildings, of which I am a member, was satisfied that no single rule could be devised which would be reasonable in districts where land has great value and at the same time effective for any good purpose in districts where land has little value. Districting, therefore, is essential to the adoption of rules which will be of advantage to the owners of property by enhancing the value of land and conserving the value of buildings.

The general principle which should be observed in framing regulations is that already indicated, and in particular the regulation should he such, so far as existing conditions may permit, as will prevent the erection of any building not suitable as the type for all the buildings of like kind within the territory suited to the erection of such buildings. Regulations should be so devised that an owner of land may improve it with reasonable confidence that if he erects a building suitable to the location the value of that building will not be destroyed by the erection of buildings near his which detract from its value.

These general principles apply with special force to residential districts. It has frequently happened that dwelling houses in good condition have been rendered valueless by the intrusion of tenements or other unsuitable buildings when such buildings were not demanded at that location. The plan or regulation which the commission had in view should be such as to furnish adequate protection to all owners.

LAWSON PURDY.

Why Architects Favor Limitation.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, at the last meeting, voted unanimouslv in favor of the general proposition of limiting the height of buildings. The profession does not favor an arbitrary horizontal limitation in height, and believes that any regulation should not be subject to politics or interested influence, with a consequent uncertain and unjust shifting of the limit up and down and up again, as has been the case in one or more important cities, Chicago in particular.

The architects, by a similar unanimous vote, placed themselves on record as favoring in principle the proposed system of zones or districts. Architects naturally desire the utmost freedom in designing buildings for their clients. They realize, however, and warn the public that an unrestricted right of an individual to build as high as he pleases, and use his building for any purpose he pleases, becomes not personal liberty, but license to interfere with the light and air and other rights of his neighbor. Such encroachment on the rights of others means in the final analysis injurv and injustice to the community. The problem of regulating the use and height of buildings will be a difficult one to solve. But if the problem is not met squarely, New York will one day realize that it has suffered a catastrophe affecting not only the public health, but affecting in a far-reaching way property values.

This will answer your inquiry as to the attitude of the architectural profession on this important question.

D. EVERETT WAID,
Vice-President New York Chapter.

Redemption After Tax Sale.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Kindly tell me the law governing tax sales; how can the original owner become repossessed of the property affected? Does limitation of period of years bar him from redemption? B. W.

Answer: Under the new system the lien of the City of New York is offered for sale to the purchaser who will bid the lowest rate of interest, not exceeding 12 per cent. per annum. The purchaser then pays to the city the amount of its lien, together with the interest to date of sale and the advertising charges. He receives in exchange an assignment or "Transfer of Tax Lien" from the city bearing interest at the rate bid. The Collector of Assessments and Arrears, Daniel Moynahan, says:

"Under the former system taxes and assessments had to be in arrears three years, and water rents four years, before becoming subject to sale, and when sold only arrears that had run for at least those periods respectively were included in the charges for which the property was sold. Under the present system the period required to run before the lien is subject to sale is unchanged, but there is this important difference: Not only is the lien sold for such arrears, but there is also included all subsequent liens up to the date named in the advertisement of the sale.

"For example: If the taxes for the years 1909, 1910, 1911, and an assessment confirmed and entered in 1910 against a given parcel of property are unpaid, and have been unpaid for three years as to the 1909 tax, it is therefore subject to sale; and not only will the sale be for the tax of 1909, but it will also include the taxes for the years 1910, 1911 and 1912, and assessments confirmed and entered in 1913, prior to date set forth in the advertisement.

"The instrument evidencing the sale and executed by the city to the purchaser is called a 'transfer of tax lien.' The interest due under the transfer of tax lien is payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July in each year. In the event that the owner of the property, or person otherwise interested, fails to pay the interest on the said lien on the due day, and is in arrears for such interest thirty days thereafter, or fails to pay taxes, water rents or assessments that are subsequently charged against the property, within six months after the delivery of the transfer of tax lien, the holder of the transfer of tax lien may foreclose the same, pursuant to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure in respect to mortgages. But in case interest and taxes are paid, the owner of the property has three years from the date of sale in which to redeem, at the expiration of which time the lien becomes due and payable and may be foreclosed, as hereinbefore stated."

Problems for Real Estate Interests.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

A brief outline of the causes of the present depression in the real estate market, together with suggested remedies, and the outlook concerning them, may be stated as follows:

(a) First in importance, and even overshadowing the tax question, is the over-production of new buildings, causing an unusual number of vacancies and a resulting lowering of rents and stagnation in the selling market, particularly so far as the older types of structures are concerned. The number of new buildings being heaped upon us with their ever-changing types is a form of extravagance. Every structure that was a perfect structure when erected, say five years ago, is somewhat old-stylish today.

Thanks to the initiative of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, most of the lending institutions have checked this over-building during the past year by withholding building loans, a step which they should have taken three or four years ago; but better late than never, and they can at least make amends by continuing this policy for at least two years more, or until the demand for building space shall exceed the supply.

(b) Next is the depressing influence of high taxes. As to this, the outlook seems very good for a slight, gradual decrease annually during the next four years. We have a rare combination of very capable men in control of our city affairs, such as New York City has not had within the memory of the present generation. If this administration will not accomplish it, none ever will.

(c) Then comes the matter of the high interest rate of mortgages. The prevailing rate in Brooklyn and the Bronx during the past year has been 5½ per cent., but rates are just now gradually returning to the normal level of 5 per cent. It's highly discouraging to owners to have to pay 5½ per cent. on property located in the densely populated boroughs of Brooklyn and Bronx. The cause is the 4 per cent. rate paid to depositors by our savings banks. It is extravagant and nonconservative on their part and necessitates the charging of 5½ per cent. on mortgages by many of them. Besides, many people would rather keep their cash in a savings bank at 4 per cent. than on a first mortgage at 5 per cent. These same people would gladly accept a 5 per cent. mortgage if the bank would only yield them 3½ per cent., which is as large a rate as conservative banking should really permit. A few larger institutions have, during the past year or so, declared this rate, but the bulk of them, simply as a form of advertisement (which should not exist among savings banks) still keep flaunting the 4 per cent. rate.

(d) Then we have the avalanche of regulatory orders showered upon the buildings by various municipal departments, almost amounting to mania. No fair-minded property owner objects to the correction of any condition substantially dangerous or unsanitary, but it does seem like rank oppression when volumes of orders and violations are intended to regulate or remedy trivial matters which can never harm anybody and which ought to really be a matter between the janitor and the tenants. At least no sensible person has ever been able to figure out why these violation orders are suddenly enforced with unusual vigor when property is at its worst, instead of at its best.

Something ought also to be done about the enormous increase in insurance premiums on plate and landlords' liability. During the past two years they have increased from 50 to 100 per cent. and the necessity for such increase arose solely from the careless and wasteful methods of the companies doing this class of insurance. The plate companies never attempt to prosecute or have punished anyone for malicious mischief and so it has come to be a well-known fact to the street loafers who continually break building windows, that no one is ever punished for it. If the companies vigorously prosecuted offenders for a period of six months or a year and had punishment inflicted as a wholesome example, the loss by breakage would not amount to more than a third of what it is at present. Likewise the accident companies keep on settling for amounts varying from $50 to $100 claims which they know to be without merit and which they can beat out in court, and so encourage a flood of claims and lawsuits four-fifths of which would never come to trial if the company adopted the policy of the railroads and fought the unmeritorious cases to a finish.

These are the problems that the real estate interests should devote themselves to in order to put values up to their proper level. For under normal conditions there is hardly a sounder investment than that of real estate.

THE ADVISORY COUNCIL.

Takes a Decided Stand on a Number of Vital Civic Matters.

The regular monthly meeting of the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests was held at the office of the council, 55 Liberty street, on Thursday, May 28. It is the purpose of the Advisory Council to foster existing organizations interested in real estate matters and to advise them on subjects pertaining thereto. It was concluded that the Advisory Council should be thoroughly advised upon all legal and legislative questions, as well as all technical and practical matters affecting real estate that it might consider from time to time. Therefore, it was deemed expedient to establish a board of counsel consisting of voluntary members, who are authorities in their peculiar legal specialties, and also an advisory staff of experts, such as engineers, architects, constructors, real estate operators and others who are regarded as best equipped and best informed in their particular fields of activity.

The Board of Counsel will be comprised of a central committee which will study all legislative matters, and additional sub-committees, consisting of lawyers selected from their authoritative knowledge upon the subject matter to be considered. Thus, the advisory council will be reinforced by the best legal, technical and scientific authorities in New York, which should place its decisions and determinations upon a basis well supported both in theory and fact. When these advisory committees shall have been completed, the ultimate result will be of value to the city itself as well as to the property owners, thus fulfilling the original purpose in the formation of the Advisory Council.

A finance committee has been appointed consisting of Messrs. Clarence H. Kelsey, Adolph Bloch and Cyrus C. Miller, chairman of the executive committee. Mr. Kelsey was elected treasurer of the council. The following resolution has also been adopted: "Resolved, that no funds shall be requested or knowingly received from any corporation or joint stock association for any political purpose whatsoever, or for the reimbursement or indemnification of any person for moneys for properties so used."

A permanent office has been secured with the necessary furniture, and a secretary.

The council approved the extension of the site of the new court house in an easterly direction if the sub-soil of the new site is suitable for foundations of so large a building at moderate cost. The new plan also permits of a better street layout.

The following resolutions were adopted:

"We think it would be prudent to make borings in the proposed site for the new court house and its neighborhood to determine the nature of the sub-soil and its suitability for the foundations of so great a structure, before committing the city to the purchase of the site or the erection of the building on it.

"Also, that if the circular street around the court house and the boulevard through Chinatown are to be made part of the plan, even though their physical opening be remote in point of time, the question of their cost and the local assessment, if any, should be taken up at the same time with the commitment for the court house itself, so that the approximate cost of the whole plan might be known in advance."

The conflict of orders and the duplication of inspections of buildings have become oppressive, and at times the owners and tenants do not know which of various conflicting orders to obey. It is not for the best present interests of the city nor for its future development to permit these conditions to continue, for in the meantime, tenants and owners will find it to their advantage to rent and purchase in other cities and states, where more liberal opportunities are presented to them.

The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, that the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests commend the efforts of President Marks in his endeavor to diminish the over-regulation of buildings and the multiplication of conflicting orders from city departments, and that the council offers to assist the Mayor and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment in work along these lines."

The council adopted the following resolution in support of the work of the Citizens' Union, with reference to their study of the problems that are likely to come before the convention:

"Resolved, that the preliminary study of problems which are to come before the constitutional convention, now being made by the Citizens' Union and similar civic bodies, merits the approval of this council and that measures should be taken to keep in touch with the work thus being done to the end that if the constitutional convention is held, all matters affecting taxation and property that are likely to arise before the convention, shall have been considered thoroughly."

The following resolution against the single tax was approved by the council, Messrs. Marling and Miller not voting, as they are members of the Mayor's Taxation Committee:

"Resolved, that this council hereby records its opposition to the adoption in this State of any form of single tax legislation, including the plan commonly known as 'halving the tax upon improvements'."

"Resolved, that this council indorses the plan of the Allied Real Estate Interests, one of its constituent organizations, to conduct a campaign of education on the single tax, and urges citizens and organizations to co-operate with the Allied Real Estate Interests towards this end."

Owners Discuss Realty Problems.

City officials and leaders of the prominent real estate organizations discussed the real estate situation on Tuesday evening at the open meeting of the United Real Estate Owners' Associations. The consensus of opinion seemed to be that the harmony and identity of purpose now existing among the large organizations and their cordial relation with the city officials will do much to have the municipal authorities see the view point of the taxpayer more clearly than heretofore.

Tax Commissioner George V. Mullan said: "The Tax Board is about ready to enter into an active campaign to establish a compact with the real estate owner and taxpayer. I believe there should be a representative of the real estate interests present at every meeting of the Boards of Estimate, Aldermen and the Sinking Fund."

The Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests was ably represented by Hon. Cyrus C. Miller, chairman of the executive committee. He held out strong hopes that the Council will become a powerful and influential body; that it will seek to accomplish results both individually and through the existing taxpayer organizations.

The present deplorable condition of the real estate market, Henry Bloch, the president of the United Associations, stated, could be ascribed to three specific causes. 1st, gross extravagances in the past city administrations, resulting in a city debt of over a thousand million dollars and in an enormous annual budget; 2nd, over-regulation by the city and a multiplicity of orders from the various municipal departments, unnecessarily annoying and embarrassing the owner of property; and 3rd, fear of the enactment of retroactive and confiscatory legislation.

Among the others who addressed the gathering were: Lawrence M. D. McGuire, president of the Real Estate Board; Allan Robinson, president of the Allied Real Estate Interests, acting Tenement House Commissioner William H. Abbott, Jr., and Ira J. Ettinger.

Real Estate Board and the Court House Site.

The Real Estate Board has endorsed the opinions expressed by its president, Laurence M. D. McGuire, at the hearing before the Board of Estimate, to the effect that the necessity of the proposed diagonal street should be proven before it is actually decided that such diagonal street is necessary; that both the proposed circular street about the court house and this proposed diagonal street should be made a part of the court house proceeding, as they are essentially an adjunct of the general scheme and it would be most unfair to assess any local area for them.

The board feels that before actually authorizing contracts there should be ascertained the approximate cost of the entire scheme, so that the taxpayers may feel that, under the present economical city administration, the experience of the past, where original estimates have fallen hopelessly short of the final cost, will not be repeated. It is also suggested that should this additional site be acquired, resort be had to private purchase so far as may be found possible, so as to avoid the cost and delay of condemnation proceedings.

Widening Fulton Street.

A new plan for the widening of Fulton street, Brooklyn, has been proposed by the Borough President and referred to the Chief Engineer of the Board of Estimate for a report. It reduces materially the amount of land to be taken for street purposes, and leaves property of great value for street purposes.

The widening will be on the northerly side of Fulton street, between the Flatbush avenue extension and a point about 47 feet east of Rockwell place; Fulton street, on its southerly side, between Rockwell place and Ashland place, asd Ashland place, on its westerly side, between Fulton street and a point about 91 feet north of Lafayette avenue, in the Borough of Brooklyn.

Bronx Sewerage Plan.

The Board of Estimate has taken favorable action on the new drainage plan for the territory bounded approximately by Third avenue, East 140th street, Willis avenue and Southern boulevard. It provides for replacing the sewers in East 135th street, from Lincoln avenue to Third avenue; in East 139th street, from Alexander avenue to Third avenue, and in Third avenue, from East 138th street to East 140th street, with others having a greater diameter. It also shows additional sewers proposed in Alexander avenue, Southern boulevard and Willis avenue, as well as a storm relief sewer in Third avenue, between Southern boulevard and the Harlem River. Information is presented to show that the existing drainage system is here of an inadequate capacity, and that the modifications now proposed are intended to afford adequate relief.

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS.

A U. S. Commission Investigating Real Estate Subjects.

A commission authorized by act of Congress is investigating industrial relations in this city. One of the commissioners is Mrs. J. Borden Harriman of New York, and another is John R. Commons of Wisconsin, who formerly was one of the secretaries of the Civic Federation in this city. Altogether the commission comprises nine persons, appointed by President Wilson. Three are employers of labor and three are representatives of organized labor. They receive ten dollars a day and expenses while actually engaged in the work of the commission.

They are authorized to hold sittings anywhere in the United States, to send for persons and papers, and to administer oaths and compel testimony. They will make their final report to Congress within three years from the date of the act, and then the commission shall expire.

The commissioners are directed to inquire into the condition of labor in the principal industries, into existing relations between employers and employes, into the effect of industrial conditions on public welfare, into conditions of sanitation and safety, and into the question of illegal entry of Asiatics into the United States.

This current week the commission devoted to the Building Trades of New York; on Monday to the abritration plan, and heard Otto M. Eidlitz, R. D. Tompkins, J. W. Johnston, Edward Dunn and Frank B. McCord; on Tuesday to the subject of Boycott on Materials, hearing Walter G. Merritt, Edwin Outwater and John Rice; on Tues- also to general subjects, hearing Louis Horowitz, Frank B. Gilbreth, W. A. Rowan and D. Everett Waid; a part of Tuesday and all of Wednesday was given over to hearing about jurisdictional disputes, when testimony was given by C. G.. Norman, James Lennon, Alexander Kelso, John T. Taggart, Charles F. Massey, John R. Alpine, George H. Morris, James P. Knight, Fred Deegan. On Friday the time was taken up with the subject of Restriction on Metal Work, and on Friday conditions among the laborers and hod carriers were investigated.

The narratives evolved from the testimony would be only familiar history to Record and Guide readers. What the commission will make of it no one knows. If the recommendations of Walter Gordon Merritt, the counsel for the Anti-Boycott Association which has been fighting for non-union trim manufacturers in the West, are followed, the commissioners will recommend that:

(1) All labor agreements be enforcible by making a union liable for damages in case of violation.

(2) Strikes on public utilities absolutely forbidden.

(3) The distinction between lawful and unlawful strikes must be developed and enforced.

(4) Laws to be enacted providing that no strikes shall be called except after a free and unrestrained ballot by the intending strikers in support thereof.

(5) Protection against an organized war of exclusion to drive non-union men, employers and products out of industry.

(6) Labor unions should come under the anti-trust laws.

The Free Port.

A free port would be a small area within the limits of the harbor into which goods might be imported, and from which the same goods might be exported, without payment of duty; but no imported goods could be transferred from the area of the free port, excepting for export, without the payment of the regular tariff.

In other words, a free port is a neutral zone so far as the tariff is concerned. The advantages to be derived from the creation of such a zone are obvious. Certain manufactured articles require the use of raw materials imported either in whole or in part. Such articles, when intended for export, may be produced in a free port without the payment of duty on the imported raw material.

It frequently happens that an export order comprises both domestic and foreign made articles. A consignment of this character may be assembled within the free port and sent abroad without customs house red tape. Exporters often wish to repack imported articles for export in their own packages, and the free port is available for this purpose.

These are some of the uses to which a free port may be put.

The principle underlying the free port idea is already recognized in our tariff law by allowing rebates of duties paid upon imported goods which are subsequently exported, but this procedure has been found to be necessarily cumbersome. The Merchants' Association has found an impressive body of opinion in favor of the plan.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Washington Heights.

At the meeting of the local board held May 26 the following resolutions were adopted:

For paving the widening of Riverside Drive on the easterly side, from 158th to 160th streets. The engineer reports that this service street is supported at present by an earth embankment which will without doubt be disturbed whenever work on the extension of Riverside Drive is begun. On this account he recommends that the service street be paved for only a portion of its width. An estimate has been made for laying a strip of permanent pavement 20 feet in width. This will accommodate the buildings now being erected, and comply with the request of the petitioners. The estimated cost of paving this strip is $7,400.

For laying out a change in the lines of West 189th street, between Wadsworth and Amsterdam avenues. The purpose of this change is to make the street lines coincide with the line of a building recently erected at the southeast corner of West 189th street and St. Nicholas avenue. The position of this building is due to a city surveyor's error. The petitioner states that she is the owner of all the land fronting on both sides of 189th street, and is prepared to cede the land which falls within the new street lines on the northerly side. It is suggested that an agreement as to this cession be entered into before the map change is approved by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

Harlem.

For reconstruction of sewers in First avenue, between 95th and 106th streets, and outlet sewers in 96th and 102d streets, between First avenue and the Harlem River.

The Engineer of Sewers reports that the existing sewers in First avenue were built in 1874; that they have settled badly, are cracked and distorted, and that considerable portions of the brick and masonry are missing. He further states that they are in a dangerous condition and likely to collapse at any time. It is recommended that they be abandoned as soon as the new sewers, for which this estimate is made, can be constructed. The total estimated cost is $116,224, and the valuation of property within probable area of assessment, $16,057,200.

Larger Brooklyn Postoffice.

Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury Department has included a request to Congress for the fiscal year an appropriation of $350,000, which will be required for the land now occupied by the Columbia Theatre, to extend and enlarge the present Federal or general postoffice building on Washington street, Brooklyn.

Activity at Ridgewood.

Hundreds of families are moving over from the Bronx to the Ridgewood section, where there has been a long-continued building movement. Builders there find a ready market for small apartment houses, costing them about $17,500 each, relatively similar to those which were erected a generation ago in Manhattan and Brooklyn, but of course with the modern new law requirements. As an instance of the large scale operations, the Ring-Gibson Company is putting up eighty-four double-four-story houses, each arranged for eight families and estimated to cost $17,500 each. Each apartment has a private hall. German-American families are moving to Ridgewood in large number mostly from Williamsburg and the Bronx. The Ring-Gibson Company is reported to be negotiating for 500 more lots. The eighty-four buildings above mentioned are one block from the Fresh Pond station of the Myrtle avenue L and will be within twenty minutes of Manhattan when the Broadway route is third tracked.

Year's Business of a Representative Concern.

So representative of real estate and building activities in this city is the business of the United States Realty and Improvement Company that the annual report of the corporation is always a subject of special interest. A copy of the report being at hand, it is noted therein that as a result of the unusual business conditions of last year the amount received from net rents was $1,463,720.49, a decrease from the previous year of $127,662.58; but this amount is practically the same as for the fiscal year ended April 30, 1912.

The company's gross income from investments was $2,035,430 and from building contracts $1,384,178; surplus for the year after paying the usual dividends, $514,397. The profits were equal to 8.18 per cent on the capital stock. The construction business of the George A. Fuller Company had a good year, as the new contracts taken on amounted to $20,955,412, to be added to the $20,016,572 unfinished business on the books at the beginning of the year. The unfinished construction business at the date of the report, April 30, amounted to $17,685,364. The list of contracts taken last year shows that the company is doing work of the first rank in most of the principal cities of the United States and Canada. The new engineering and construction department had contracts amounting to $4,090,710 on April 30.

The regular income from real estate and other investments continues to be more than sufficient to pay all expenses and the interest upon the parent company's bonds. The balance of the income from these investments, the profits from the George A. Fuller Company, the real estate operating department, and the general construction work will be applicable to dividends. The reserves set aside for accidents on account of building and general construction work, for depreciation of the company's buildings, for expenses of unproductive real estate, and for contingencies, now aggregate $1,121,523.20. The aggregate of the mortgages on all of the real estate owned by the company is now only 44 per cent. of the book value. With two exceptions all of the company's buildings are modern fireproof structures so located as to afford maximum advantages of accessibility, light and air, and are maintained in the highest possible condition.

—A great amount of money is being loaned into Queens Borough. This spring and building operations are running ahead of last year's record. Ten million dollars worth of mortgages were recorded last week.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

An examination of statistics compiled by the Record and Guide for the last five months shows little decline in business, as compared to the corresponding period for 1913. In spite of the generally prevailing impression to the contrary, the figures show only a slight decrease in the number of sales consummated and conveyances recorded for this year as compared to last year. It may be said that substantially conditions have remained stationary as regards selling activity. The statistics show marked decrease, amounting to over a hundred per cent., in the amounts involved in mortgage loans as compared to the previous year, but this is offset to a degree by the greater number of mortgage extensions recorded since the first of the year. In building activity the only borough which shows an improvement since 1913 is Queens. In Brooklyn and Richmond there have been slight decreases while in Manhattan and the Bronx the decline is noticeable to a more marked extent.

The market showed signs of strength this week in spite of the approach of the summer season which is generally productive of little business of note. Considerable improvement in the situation was evident not only on account of the increase in the number of transactions, but on account of the activity of apartment house builders in the accumulation of well located plots for improvement with high class multi-family structures. Among these were Bing & Bing, who purchased a Park avenue plot, Mayer & Mayer who bought West End avenue holdings, and the Fullerton Weaver Company which obtained a large plot in 67th street in a transaction which also involved a loft building at Fifth avenue and 15th street.

Other interesting deals concerned a row of residences in East 80th street, a probable new home for the Calumet Club and Washington Heigths apartment houses. An encouraging sign and one which may be indicative of continued improvement in the market was the demand for investment properties by small buyers.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 39, as against 19 last week and 19 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 11, as compared with 4 last week and 5 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 28, as compared with 15 last week and 14 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 155, as against 185 last week, 14 having stated considerations totaling $605,250. Mortgages recorded this week number 82, involving $1,890,232, as against 103 last week, aggregating $2,101,033.

From the Bronx 9 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 13 last week and 4 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $529,959, compared with $1,198,297 last week, making a total since January 1 of $18,872,019. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $757,550, and the total from January 1, 1913, to May 31, 1913, was $24,590,521.

Calumet Club Obtains Option.

The former Harry B. Hollins residence at 12-14 West 56th street, will be the new home of the Calumet Club, if the members decide at a meeting next Wednesday to exercise the option of purchase which they obtained this week through Pease & Elliman. It is a five-story building on plot 50x100, just west of Fifth avenue and was recently vacated by Mrs. John Astor who occupied it during the winter. The Calumet has been located for a quarter of a century at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and 29th street. About three years ago the owner, the Francis A. Lawrence Estate, desired a cancellation of the club's lease, which had five years to run, and in payment for this privilege, besides receiving $85,000 in cash the club was given the right to occupy until the property was sold. As there has been no sale, the Calumet members have enjoyed their old home without cost during the last three years. If the Costly Residences for East 80th Street.

Edward J. Hogan and William B. May & Co. have negotiated the sales of four 20-foot private residences, 4, 6, 8 and 10 East 80th street, for Mrs. Otto Dreyfoos, Mrs. Pauline Gutman, Mrs. Solomon Friedman and the Tyrene Realty Company, to a buyer said to be F. W. Woolworth. The present buildings will be removed and new residences erected on the site, the west 60 feet being divided into two lots, one of 28 feet and the other of 32 feet. This operation has been especially planned to secure mutual light privileges in the rear, and will represent a total cost when completed of between $700,000 and $750,000. Adjoining the properties sold, at 2 East 80th street, is a modern five-story dwelling erected a few years ago by Mr. Woolworth for his daughter, Mrs. Frank Hutton, which residence abuts his own at the south corner of Fifth avenue and 80th street. The M. Morgenthau, Jr., Co. was associated as broker in the sale of No. 10 for the Tyrene Realty Co. It was reported later in the week that the purchaser of this house was Solomon Friedman, who sold No. 8.

Big West Side Operation.

David W. Buchlin has sold through Slawson & Hobbs to Jerome C. and Mortimer G. Mayer, the nine private houses comprising the northeast corner of West End avenue and 84th street, known as 263-281 inclusive in the street and one house on West End avenue, at 506, the entire plot being 102.2 feet on West End avenue and 133 feet on 84th street, running through the block half way and adjoining the vacant Broadway corner at that point. The buyers will erect a high-class, twelve-story apartment house with suites of six, seven and eight rooms. In part payment they gave the new twelve-story apartment building at 120 West 86th street, which has been held at $450,000. Slawson & Hobbs have also procured for the Messrs. Mayer a building and permanent loan of $650,000 for five years on the proposed building at 84th street and West End avenue. The operation will involve an outlay of about $1,250,000. Weschler & Kohn, as attorneys, represented Mayer & Mayer and M. S. &. I. S. Isaacs acted for David W. Bucklin.

West Side-Fifth Avenue Deal.

The Sixty-seventh Street Co., A. L. Mordecai & Son, Daniel B. Freedman, Heilner & Wolf and Potter & Brother, has sold to the Fullerton-Weaver Company the six lots in the north side of 67th street, 100 feet west of Central Park West. The property measures 150x100, and lies between the Chatham Court apartments and the Central Park studios and has been held at $250,000. It is to be improved with two nine-story apartment structures.

In exchange the syndicate of operators takes the Kensington building at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and 15th street, an eleven-story mercantile structure on plot 38.6x125. The brokers in the sale were R. E. L. Mordecai, Douglas L. Elliman & Co., and Robert C. Knapp.

Apartment Houses In Trade.

William F. Burns, the florist, is reported to be negotiating for the purchase from the Henry Morgenthau Co. of the Columbus, a ten-story elevator structure, with stores, at the southeast corner of Broadway and 157th street, on plot 100x125, facing the subway station. He will give, it is said, in part payment the "Glenham," an eleven-story apartment house, at 2626 Broadway, and the "Elbe," a six-story structure, at 660 Riverside Drive. The brokers are Arnold, Byrne & Baumann. The "Columbus" was erected by Patrick McMorrow on property secured by him in 1909 from Klein & Jackson. The architects were Neville & Bagge. Mr. McMorrow traded the "Columbus" about eighteen months ago with the Morgenthau Co. for a plot at 131-137 West 35th street, 75x98.9, which he improved with a tall mercantile structure.

Builders Buy on Park Avenue.

Bing & Bing have purchased from Adolph Ganzmuller, the Operating Realty Co. and Margaret Calhoun respectively, 951, 953 and 955 Park avenue, three five-story flats on plot 77, 102.2, 100 feet north of 81st street. The buyers will erect a twelve-story apartment house from plans by Robert T. Lyons. The brokers in the deal were George Ranger and John J. Kavanagh, Stoddard & Mark representing the purchasers as attorneys.

Sonn Bros. Sell "Courtwood."

The "Courtwood," a six-story, high-class apartment house at the southwest corner of Broadway and 169th street, on plot 90 x 150, has been sold by the Central Building, Improvement & Investing Co., Sonn Bros., to an investor who gave in part payment a valuable Mt. Vernon residence. The "Courtwood" was acquired by the selling company from the Pembroke Realty Co. last December.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN has taken title to 869-877 St. Nicholas av, southwest corner of 154th st, plot 86.3x92, from the Manhattan Life Ins. Co. for a stated consideration of $130,000.

M. MORGENTHAU, JR., CO. has placed mortgage loans aggregating $50,000 for Mrs. Marie C. Hartung; $30,000 on 114-16 West 21st st, two 3-sty old dwellings, each on lot 23x92, and $20,000 on 49 East 10th st, a 4-sty business building on lot 28x98.4.

L. J. PHILLIPS & CO. will sell at auction on June 11, in the matter of the Corgil Realty Co., bankrupt, the plot 56.8x71.10xirreg on the west side of Bassford av, 95½ ft. north of East 182d st. They will also sell on June 9, 502 West 180th st and on June 10, 147 West 63d st.

The building, which will be ready for occupancy by December next, has been more than half rented from the plans.

GEORGE F. LADUE has obtained for the Storm Holding Co., Inc., George H. Storm, president, a building and permanent loan of $190,000 upon its garage to be erected in East 72d st, between Av A and Exterior st. The garage is to be four stories high, on plot 125x204.4, running through to 71st st, and will contain many special features. A point of interest in this transaction is that the loan is to be secured by an amortization mortgage, by which the principal is to be reduced by annual payments of $10,000 until the expiration of the term. Pease & Elliman were associated brokers in the transaction.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Parties in interest continue to be the principal buvers at local auction sales. Out of fifty-four offerings at the Manhattan and Bronx Exchange Sales Rooms this week such buyers obtained thirty-four. Eleven sales were either withdrawn or adjourned and only nine parcels went to outside bidders.

Today large lot auctions will be held in the Bronx and in Queens. Joseph P. Day will sell 420 lots on Pelham Parkway and the Williamsbridge Road, belonging to the Pearsall estate and the Jere Johnson Company will dispose of 285 seashore lots at Neponsit on the Rockaway Coast. At the Exchange Sales Rooms tenements and dwellings comprise the bulk of the offerings for the coming week. Most of the holdings are of the usual varietv offered as a result of foreclosure proceedings. Among the more important properties are a fine residence in East 72d street to be sold by Herbert A. Sherman, and an apartment house on Morningside avenue to be sold by Samuel Marx.

FINANCING A LOAN ON LOFT BUILDINGS

By GEORGE F. LADUE

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager For The American Real Estate Co.

CAN a satisfactory loan be obtained today upon a loft building? Refer the question to your mortgage broker and he will answer in the affirmative, provided the contemplated enterprise contains the essentials to success, namely, demand for and desirability of the improvement, and, the financial ability of the promoter to successfully carry the operation to completion. Let us analyzed these essentials in the order mentioned.

Demand for and desirability of the improvement are two essentials often overlooked, ignorantly perhaps, which spell the failure of many a real estate improvement. The workings of these two essentials are best illustrated during a new and rapid development of a section of the city which has hitherto lain dormant, the beginning of which is the result of careful thought and study by clever operators. These men discover the demand, which is often caused by various conditions existing in older established sections of the city. They study this demand and its solution, feel its pulse, as it were, and when the demand is about to assert itself, they are ready with a solution. The requirements have been looked into and a new section of the city selected. One which, by reason of natural growth, offers better advantages both as to location and transportation facilities, and one in which lots can be purchased at reasonable prices, owing to its dormant condition.

The development begins, a boom is started and migration to the newer section follows. This migration is primarily due to the slow and sure northward movement which is the result of limitations peculiar to Manhattan Island, and to many improvements and changes in transit facilities continually being made. It is also caused by the policy of owners of real estate in the older sections who, feeling safe in their position, do not endeavor to satisfy the demands of their tenants as they arise, nor do they appear to realize the possible future results of such neglect. Once started, however, this migration cannot easily be checked. One firm follows another, trade follows trade, until the folly and short-sightedness of owners in the older sections are more than offset by that of the speculative builder who has taken up the cause of the operator in the newer one. The result is that demand is oversupplied in both sections, rents are reduced, and the inevitable shrinkage of values for the time being follows; and the loss falls most heavily upon those who are responsible for pushing the development to such an extreme.

Opening New Section.

However, we are discussing loans on loft buildings, so let us turn our attention to the section under development and analyze its conditions, before, during, and after the boom. The pioneer in any section, and of any type of building, always has difficulty in securing a satisfactory loan, and his broker must find some institution or individual who is open to conviction as to the demand for the improvement, the desirability of the type of building for the section, and its ultimate success.

For a time operator, builder, broker and lender, all march steadily forward to the inspiring music of jingling dollars, rapidly made on the one hand and securely invested on the other. We now find that the elements of selection of location and character of improvement enter largely into the success of an enterprise. The loft must be located on the best available plot, be it corner or otherwise, and it must be of a type suitable to the established demand if it is to attract mortgage funds. Lending institutions are, perhaps, becoming skeptical about the success of further development for the time being, and may endeavor to protect their present mortgage holdings by withholding their funds.

Now, what are some of the features of a loft that will insure its being a profitable investment for the owner and, therefore, safe security for a mortgagee. It must be well-located on a desirable avenue or street or selected inside plot. It must have light and plenty of it, and permanent light on as many sides as possible. Size of plot, height of building and quality of construction are also essential points to consider.

Successful Operation.

I have in mind a loft which was erected last year in the Thirties and recently sold. It is well located on a desirable cross-street and, while it is situated on an inside plot, it has permanent light on all sides above the fourth floor, due to judicious plotting. For this reason the builder had no difficulty in obtaining a satisfactory loan from a savings bank, and has now sold to an investor in a market that refuses to digest any but the best securities.

Now, as to the financial ability of a builder to carry an operation to successful completion: A man who owns a plot or has recently purchased one with the intention of erecting a loft at some future date, decides to go ahead with the operation because he cannot afford to carry his holdings in their present income producing condition. That man will probably find it equally hard to carry the additional burden through to successful completion. Nor should he build merely because his neighbor has put up what appears to be a successful proposition.

In planning the financial details of a loft building an owner should first endeavor to ascertain the true value of his property. What the original cost was or what he recently paid for his lots has little bearing on the case. What are they worth today is the question and their value is regulated largely by the demand for them, and the supply of other lots equally as good.

Secondly, he should carefully figure out the cost of a building suitable to the plot he intends to improve and is justified in adding legitimate carrying charges such as taxes, interest, commissions, etc. After establishing the true value of his property he can be reasonably sure of obtaining 66 2-3 per cent. of the amount on first mortgage, bearing in mind that the amount thus secured is subject to slight variation owing to market conditions and varying opinions as to the value and success of the operation. Such a loan, based upon an honest valuation, can be procured in this or almost any market provided always that the finished product supplies a legitimate demand.

If, however, a builder is counting on "beating the market," "borrowing out" or equaling the "participation loan" of his neighbor, he is doomed to disappointment, for this enlightened market will not stand for any such high financing. He will succeed only in wearing himself out and the patience of his brokers as well, and will find that the recognized lending institutions will begin to look upon him and his enterprises with distrust. I do not mean to infer that a builder should expect to borrow only 66 2-3 per cent. of the true value of his property, but he should not endeavor to secure more than that percentage on first mortgage.

Safe Investment.

A first mortgage of not more than 66 2-3 per cent. on New York City realty, if selected with care and judgment, is the safest form of investment, yielding an equal return that is offered the investing public today. It is legal security for savings banks and trust funds, and its high standard should not be lowered by those whose actions are not regulated by law. One of the causes that is largely responsible for the present withholding of mortgage funds has been the cheapening of this excellent form of investment by the more than liberal policy of careless lenders in the recent past, some of whom are already realizing their errors.

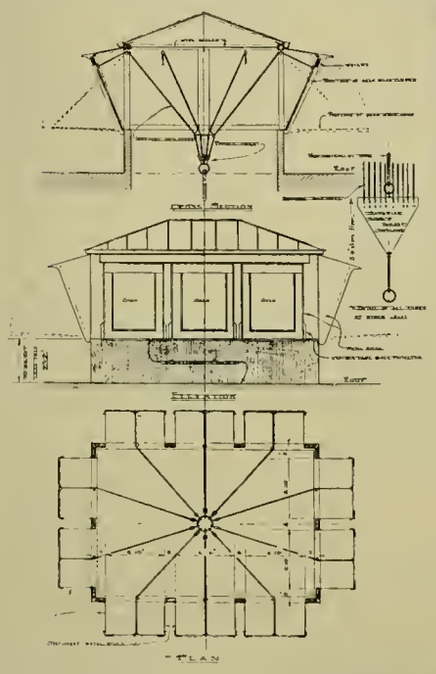
A builder is justified in securing additional funds, if necessary, on second mortgage to assist him in his operation, bearing in mind, however, that the amount of assistance he requires is measured by his financial resources and that there is a limit beyond which he should hesitate to go.

The present status of the second mortgage is, generally speaking, a peculiar one, owing to the usury laws in this State, limiting the interest rate to six per cent. This fact has developed the practice of demanding large discounts by certain lenders, while others, more conscientious or timid, perhaps, refrain from investing in these securities. If second mortgages could legitimately be written to draw a slightly higher rate of interest, it would result in a larger demand for this class of security and would standardize it.

Building and permanent loans are usually obtained from the institutions that are looking for safe, permanent investments, and for that reason, are more conservative in their views. Short-time building loans are generally made by private corporations, or operators who wish to facilitate a sale.

Now, just a word as to rates of interest for loans on loft buildings, for the past few months they have been firm, yielding five and five and one-half per cent. for the best securities. Of late, however, there has been a general improvement in the mortgage market and this excellent form of development should also benefit by the reduction of rates that all are looking for.

USEFUL APPLIANCES



Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

A Combined Ventilator Skylight.

A SKYLIGHT system that has the additional virtue of being a ventilator in normal times as well as in times of fire peril is being introduced by the Superior Cornice & Skylights Works, Inc., 214-216 East 127th street.

The sides of this combined ventilator-skylight are composed of a number of apertures provided with a like number of metal sash set in weather-tight pockets and hinged outward. These sash when closed are positioned at an inclined angle, equipped with brackets, weights, pulleys, fusible-links, etc., and so arranged that they will open automatically without human intervention, and so that its operation will not be hindered by warping or settlement, or from obstruction by snow or ice.

The sash are operated by a system of ropes attached to fusible-links which in return are governed by a main rope or set of ropes run down to a point where they can be conveniently operated. Each sash, in addition to the main lines, is provided with a guide-rope that holds the sash in its extended position when the main ropes are cut or when excessive heat causes the fusing of the links and the subsequent drop of sash.

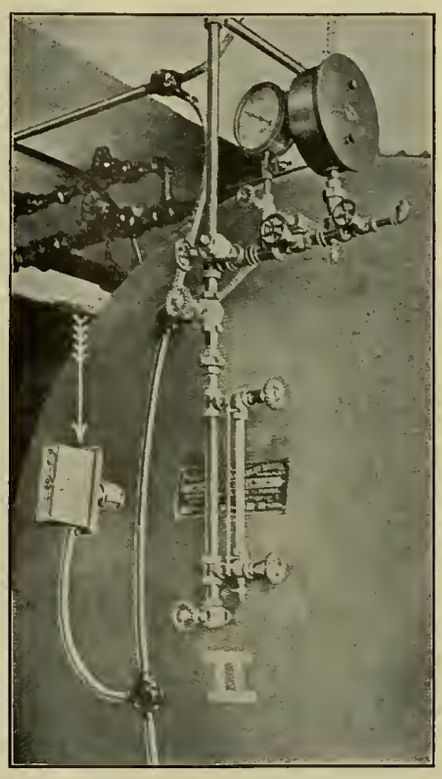
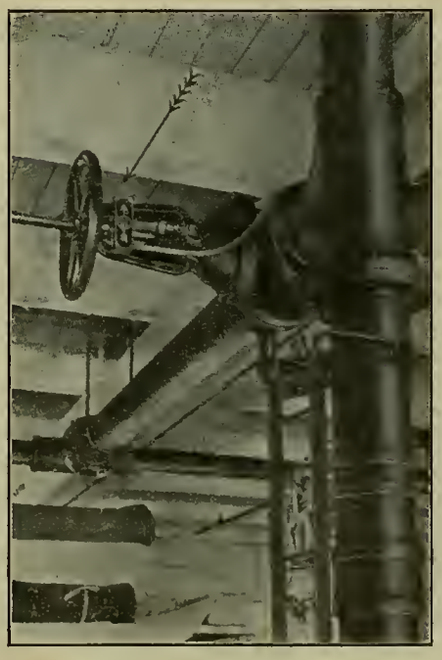
The sash are usually four feet high by three feet wide, with six-inch double corner posts and six-inch intermediate mullions, well braced and reinforced.



The roof of this ventilator-skylight is of first-class hip-ridge construction, with heavy bars and condensation gutters, glazed with a thin glass and made perfectly weather-tight. A No. 12 galvanized, one-inch Underwriters' wire mesh is placed underneath this roof to gather in the glass which invariably breaks from excessive heat in case of fire.

The ventilator-skylight is of special use when there is a fire in a theatre building, it being obvious that the cutting of the main ropes or the melting of the fusible-links will separate the numerous lines, releasing all sash simultaneously, allowing them to gravitate to their open position and thereby permitting accumulated smoke and gases to escape.

Superior ventilators are constructed in a manner approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and in accordance with "An Ordinance Regulating the Construction and Equipment of Theatre Buildings, as Approved by National Fire Protective Association and National Board of Fire Underwriters."



Making Sure of Emergency Equipment.

SK any man in charge of a great mercantile establishment point blank, "Is your fire protection ready for an emergency this minute?" and his answer will be, "Why, I suppose so." Then ask him if that is what he calls fire protection.

"Supposing so" never will save his stock or his company great loss in profits resulting from a delay in the daily routine caused by fire. If an insurance company had given that man a special rate because he had equipped his plant with sprinklers, and then, after the fire, the inspector had found the feed valve closed, a counter claim of contributory negligence could be made, and the settlement might be indefinitely delayed.

There is a way by which building managers may be sure that they are receiving full protection from the expensive equipment installed to give protection in an emergency. If a repair man, a malicious employe turns off that valve, an electrical contact informs the A. D. T. system, and the manager is at one notified that he is without fire protection. If the pressure in the tank is low, the same information is conveyed to the A. D. T. headquarters, and it is remedied. If the water in the tank has frozen, the central office knows about it instantly, through the operation of the devices shown in the accompanying illustrations. In any event the building manager knows whether he is protected or not, and he does not have to guess at it. A similar system is employed in the dry sprinkler system.

As soon as a flash comes over the wires that the sprinkler gate has been closed, the central office telephones the manager. At the same time an inspector is despatched to the building to find out just why that gate was closed. A written report is also sent, so that the manager has a record of just when his fire protection was efficient, and when, because of repair or alteration, it was out of service. The service is rendered on a yearly basis.

An Office Call.

MUCH time is lost daily in the average business establishment trying to locate an employe who is wanted. In order to obviate the usual delays, and thereby save money for the concern, the Multi-Signal Company, of the Marbridge Building, Broadway and 34th street, have put on the market a device which will overcome the difficulty. The accompanying cut shows the telephone desk equipment, and the remainder consists of concealed wires which run through the building, and small annunciators in each department in the structure. When a certain employe is wanted the operator moves a pointer and turns a key. Instantly a call is flashed to every part of the building, the annunciator flashing the number or name of the person wanted, and instead of several persons being disturbed at their work, the one wanted steps to the 'phone without confusion. The device works equally well for fire, time and dismissal signals.

For Leaky Skylights.

IF skylights leak because the glass has been put in with ordinary putty remedial measures may be taken by making a paste oil paint and applying it. This may be made by using paint skins that have been run through a grinding machine or boiled in a kettle and softened by linseed oil. This material remains elastic and does not crack. It must be thinned if the glass has been lapped without frames, then apply a strip of semi-paste to the end of each under-glass. When the paste has set the two pasted layers must be touched up a bit to insure perfect tightness. The result is almost a rubber glaze that will stand the effects of the weather far longer than ordinary putty. It is necessary, first to have all parts that the glaze is supposed to protect thoroughly cleaned and all traces of former putty removed.

Motor Supplants Hand Power.

ONE of the big leaks in building management is the cost of manual labor. The human machine gets tired easily, especially in hot weather, and so the United Manufacturing Company of Kansas City, Mo., hit upon the idea of doing many little stunts formerly thought practicable only by hand power, with a portable motor. This motor is mounted on a truck which may be trundled from one part of the building to another. It may be used for polishing desks or scraping floors, washing windows, drilling holes through concrete floors and scrubbing.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

Many Large Structural Improvements Completed by the Libman Construction Company Since Its Formation Ten Years Ago

THE Libman Contracting Company has been identified with many large structural operations in Manhattan during the ten years since its incorporation. Founded by A. L. Libman, the president of the concern, in 1904, the concern has erected many public and private buildings.

The first municipal building erected by the company was the Rutgers Place Public Bath, which was commented upon in an article published in the Record and Guide on July 3, 1909. On this operation the Libman Contracting Company made a record for public buildings, by completing more than thirty days in advance of contract time. Since that date they have received many other important municipal contracts, among which are the transformer station at Blackwell's Island, for which Raymond F. Almiral was the architect; the Central Fire Alarm Telegraph Station for Greater New York, situated at Transverse Road No. 2, Central Park (Morgan & Trainer, architects); Public School No. 169, situated at Audubon avenue and 169th street (C. B. J. Snyder, architect); Public School No. 178, situated in Dean street near Saratoga avenue, Brooklyn (C. B. J. Snyder, architect).

In 1907 the Libman Contracting Company received its first theatre contract, the overhauling of and additions to the Mount Vernon Opera House, which amounted to about $15,000. Since that date the company has erected seven theatres, the total cost of which, excluding ground, amounted to more than $2,000,000. These theatres include the Prospect Theatre, at Prospect avenue and 160th street (E. C. Horn Sons, architects); the Riverside Theatre, at Broadway and 96th street (Thomas W. Lamb, architect); the Royal Theatre, at Westchester and Bergen avenues (Thomas W. Lamb, architect); the Audubon Theatre, at Broadway, 165th and 166th streets and St. Nicholas avenue (Thomas W. Lamb, architect); Cecil Spooner Theatre, at 163d street near Southern Boulevard (E. C. Horn Sons, architects); Keith's Prospect Theatre, 9th street near Fifth avenue, Brooklyn (William H. McElfatrick, architect), and the Candler Theatre, 223-229 West 41st street (Thomas W. Lamb, architect).

The apartment house work executed by the company includes the Middleton Apartments, at 189th street and St. Nicholas avenue (Goldwin Starrett & Van Vleck, architects); Lathrop Apartments, 83d street near Central Park West (Schwartz & Gross, architects); the twelve-story apartment houses at the southeast corner of Park avenue and 78th street and the northwest corner of Park avenue and 76th street (George & Edward Blum, architects), and the block of apartments in the north side of 141st street, west of Lenox avenue (George Fred Pelham, architect). In 1910, the Driscoll residence, at 122 East 80th street, for which Schwartz & Gross were the architects, was erected, and in the following year the residence at 116 East 78th street was erected from plans by Rouse & Goldstone.

THEATRE AT BROADWAY AND 97TH ST.

Not only in the special fields above mentioned has the Libman Contracting Company been successful in obtaining contracts, but many of the large mercantile buildings in Greater New York have been erected by this company. The Leavitt Building, at 126-132 West 46th street, was erected in 1912, from plans by Nast & Springsteen; the International Motor Company's building at the northeast corner of 64th street and West End avenue (Nast & Springsteen, architects); the Roethlisberger Building, at 178 Franklin street (James C. Maurer, architect); the American Steel Company's building, at 162 Chambers street (Mitchell Bernstein, architect), and the Carnegie Company's building, at 9 West 35th street (Gross & Kleinberger, architects). The garages erected by this company include the Belnord, Motor Transportation, Cadillac and Manchester garages.

Contracts now in work include the Eclair Film Company's building, at Fort Lee (Charles Jourjon, architect); the Murray Hill Chambers, at 33d street and Madison avenue (Starrett & Van Vleck, architects); the Nassau County Court House, at Mineola, L. I. (William B. Tubby, architect), and the Hopkins Theatre, at 153-159 West 49th street (Murphy & Dana, architects).

Herman F. Lippe, for twenty-five years identified with the building interests of New York, is in charge of the construction staff, and James F. Connell, the secretary of the company, has immediate charge of all office work. As the Libman Contracting Company has grown with rapid strides, it became necessary from time to time to obtain the services of new superintendents at the various buildings, and in each instance union mechanics were taken from the wall and placed in charge of the new buildings, with extremely good results; and with the assistance of these men, now amounting to twelve, the company is in a position to handle contracts of any magnitude with speed and strict fidelity to the plans and specifications.

Architectural Renderings.

Architectural rendering has of late years become more or less of a specialty, and the men who make the exhibition drawings and the color renderings for submission to clients have in the main become a specialized class, which does nothing else, and their ranks are recruited mainly from the architects' offices, but with occasional accessions from the painters. In the old days the perspective drawing (it was not then called a "rendering") was almost invariably made in the office of the architect, or often by the architect of the building it depicted; and these old rendering, though oftentimes crude and unintelligent, were perhaps more interesting than the beautiful drawings of the present day, because they were per- documents of the designers. This method gave of course a certain advantage in the securing of work to the architect of pictorial talent—an advantage perhaps undeserved, since the picture is not the ultimate aim of the architect. The professional renderer was developed to overcome this disadvantage.

The fact that it is now the habitual practice of most offices to have their rendering done by men outside of the offices, does not mean that the proportion of men among the draftsmen in their offices who have ability in rendering has decreased, says the Brickbuilder; in fact, the contrary is the case, and not only is there a larger proportion of men who are able to render with some approach to architectural skill, but also the work of these men is of a better grade than it used to be.

Mr. Magonigle, for example, made a drawing for his proposed scheme for the Perry Memorial some years ago, which was quite as beautiful a thing as Mr. Long's wonderful drawing of the Hudson-Fulton Competition. Mr. Seymour made a rendering of the winning scheme of the Perry Memorial (Freedlander and Seymour, architects), which was one of the best architectural renderings we have ever seen, and, although it was a truly architectural rendering in black and white, it still was the type of drawing which could be submitted to a client.

Proposed New Publishing Building.

During the week announcement was made to the effect that a new building designed primarily for the use of the printing and allied trades would be erected in the section which has, during the past few years, become the new home of many of the city's largest publishing concerns. The new building will be located at 440-448 West 37th street and will be twelve stories high, covering a plot 125 by 100 feet. Hill & Stout, architects, 299 Madison avenue, are now at work on the preliminary plans. H. I. Underhill, of South Orange, N. J., is the owner of the projected building, and it is his intention to lease lofts for printing, lithographing and general publishing purposes.

The Public Recreation Commission, of which Cyril H. Jones is acting secretary, will soon submit plans to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for its approval for the new "Betsy Head" Memorial Playground, to be erected at Brownsville, East New York, Brooklyn. Plans have been prepared by Henry B. Herts, of 35 West 31st street. The group consists of a play field, 300x438 feet, a men's gymnasium and a similar building for women; swimming pool, 60x150 feet; lockers; wading pool, 54x95 feet; farm house with farm gardens, and an additional play field, 108x279 feet. BRIGHTON BEACH HOTEL OPENS.—At 10.30 o'clock this (Saturday) evening, May 30, there will be a double holiday at Brighton Beach. New Superintendent of Buildings.

Borough President Marks has appointed Alfred Ludwig as Superintendent of Buildings for the Borough of Manhattan, to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Miller's resignation in order to take up the work on the Building Code. This appointment is in no way conflicting with the statement of Robert D. Kohn recently published in the Record and Guide. The appointment of Mr. Ludwig, who has been Chief Inspector and Acting Superintendent since April 15, has been made merely to avoid possible legal difficulties that may arise. It is fully expected that Mr. Miller will return to the position of Superintendent of Buildings when his work in connection with the Building Code is completed.

New Dumbwaiter Ordinance.

The Board of Aldermen at its meeting on Tuesday, May 26, passed the amendment to Section 97, making the provisions of that section applicable merely to dumbwaiters hereafter erected. It will be recalled that the Court of Appeals decided that the provisions of Section 97 as given in the Building Code of 1899 were retroactive, which meant that in all buildings where dumbwaiter shafts, though constructed in accordance with the law in force at the time, were not fireproof they would have to be reconstructed to make them fireproof—at an expense in many cases of from $1,000 to $1,500.

The new ordinance regulating billboards and sky signs was passed by the Board of Aldermen at its meeting on May 26, and is now awaiting the signature of the Mayor to become effective. The provisions of this ordinance were outlined in a recent number of the Record and Guide.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

IRON AND STEEL MEN IN CONVENTION FORESEE RETURN OF BUILDING PROSPERITY AND TELL THE REASONS WHY

Silicate Brick Again To Be Factor in Market-Plan Filings

PERSONAL opinions voiced by prominent men in the building material markets, from steel to cinders, indicate firmer demand. Whether the optimistic utterances of such men as Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation's board of directors; W. F. Thomas, president of the Briar Hill Steel Company, of Youngstown, Ohio; A. P. Houston, of the Lukens Iron & Steel Company, of Cotesville, and John A. Topping, chairman of the board of the Republic Iron & Steel Company, at the meeting of the American Iron & Steel Institute held here this week had anything to do with strengthening of the market or not, is a matter of speculation, but it was significant that there was an actual improvement in the volume of building materials called for of late second-half delivery.

Men who play large parts in industry cannot afford to be false prophets. They have too much at stake. Therefore they are inclined to keep silent until they have some definite basis upon which to make predictions as to the business future. They based their opinions that the door of prosperity is reopening upon the favorable crop reports and the strengthening of the pig iron market.

If there are any who doubt the close relationship between prosperity in the steel and iron trade with that of the movement of basic building materials, it is only necessary to note that while the pig iron market has been slowly but steadily firming on demand, common brick prices also have been firming.

Next to common brick, concrete ingredients indicate the wist of the wind. Crushed stone quarrymen say the demand is taking all the output of the mills, which are now working at about 60 per cent. of capacity. They put on extra crushers during the last month. Sand interests are extremely busy, and prices are held firmly. Portland cement, however, is being sadly cut on price, but dealers are taking quantities more freely and have been buying more on quotation than on brand.

As building business improves, however, there is bound to be an automatic readjustment of buying, because, while dealers want good prices, they also demand prompt shipments, which old customers have a right to expect, and new customers hope for, but do not always get.

Hardware interests say they have not yet felt the general improvement in building orders, which is also true of other finishing lines, such as paint, glass, cement finishers and hardwood. Timber, stone, architectural terra cotta, machinery equipment lines, kalomein; all report that in their lines business does show some signs of brightening. Encouragement is found in these statements because most of the activity is on prospective building operations that have been held in abeyance for some time.

Summing up the brightening tone of business, A. F. Houston, president of the Lukens Iron & Steel Company, of Cotesville, Pa., puts it this way:

"I have backed my judgment that trade is on the mend: that September will see the beginning of new trade expansion, by the fact that 50,000 tons of basic pig iron have been bought within the last few days. That means more steel. The steel man does not buy basic pig iron for his health. He buys it to sell in rolled material that goes into these big New York buildings. Steel alone does not make a building. It takes brick, sand, cement, stone and a thousand other things. Therefore when iron men foresee a demand for steel, that should indicate to producers of other building lines that there will soon be a demand for material to go around the steel.

"All you've got to do is to watch the basic pig iron market. That market is going to move fast from now on, because everybody has been operating on low stocks. They've held off buying, expecting still lower prices. In the meantime the second half was approaching, and the building season traveled with it. They were finally forced to come into the market, and now they've started buying, and the crops are going to be good; they are going to give us prosperity right away. Iron bought now comes out in structural shapes in the fall. That is the time the practical side of the present day optimism will be felt by everybody dabbling in building construction."

Plan filings for new buildings in the five boroughs this week compared with last week show a gain of more than $4,000,000 over the week preceeding for a total gain of over eighty buildings:

	Week Ending.
	No.	May 14	No.	May 21
Manhattan	10	$1,346,200	17	$2,453,100
Bronx	12	228,125	22	491,500
Brooklyn	139	978,450	166	3,387,675

Continued Active Buying Gives Hope to Building Material Interests.

LIBERAL buying of pig iron continued this week. One large interest went into the market for 4,000 tons with a Buffalo furnace for second half delivery. New inquiries for 4,200 tons of foundry were issued Thursday for shipment into New Jersey over the third quarter. Another inquiry developed for 1,200 tons for a New Jersey equipment manufacturer and a Brooklyn manufacturer of equipment came into the market for 700 tons. Another New Jersey order still unsatisfied as the month closes calls for 500 tons. Connecticut buyers supplying this market with equipment also came in for moderate tonnages.

But the really significant movement of the week as far as indications of a change for the better are concerned is the fact that the Commonwealth Steel Company has taken an additional lot of 3,000 tons of basic iron, making its total purchases in the last two weeks 24,000 tons. In the Pittsburgh steel manufacturing territory the action of the American Steel Founders in holding off its purchases of 10,000 tons until after the turn of the first half of the year in the hope of an eleven-hour change in prices, has undergone reconsideration in view of the tremendous buying movement featuring the basic steel market during the last fortnight. This business probably will be closed in time to make the first deliveries shortly after July 1. Furthermore, the fact that Booth & Flinn and the O'Rourke Eogineering Company have been awarded the contract for the construction of the two East River tubes will immediately bring into the market inquiries for pig iron to cover the 85,000 tons of cast iron sections that will be required for this purpose.

In the structural steel department this week the Hay Foundry & Iron Works took the contract for 2,400 tons for the new Astor apartments. The National Casket Company took bids for about 500 tons of structural steel for a new building on Long Island, and the Alan Realty Company has inquiries out for a loft building on 37th street. Another loft building under project is also being inquired, both these structures approximating their requirements at about 1,500 tons. These buildings are now going ahead after being deferred since last fall.

TO MAKE SILICATE BRICK.

Powerful Interests Behind a Movement to Sell This Facing Material in New York.

BACKED by a large company, several defunct plants which formerly made silicate facing brick have been bought in by the Silicate Pressed Brick Co., with temporary offices in those of the American Clay Machinery Co., 40 West 42d street. Articles of incorporation were filed in Albany with a capitalization of $200,000, to do a general manufacturing business in brick, tile and composition wares and to utilize various kinds of by-products of the plant. The directors are: Sutcliffe N. Widdup, who for years has been the backbone of the silicate brick business at the Capitol and who succeeded in having this type of facing material specified for several government buildings there; Louis C. Hieser, 38 Vernon avenue, and Gun Mozee, 30 East 42d street. The attorneys are Spoor & Russell, 149 Broadway.

The company in time will have an important chain of manufacturing plants on Long Island, the one at Port Jefferson being the first to be operated. Other plants will be put into operation as soon as they can be equipped with machinery. The first plant will start about June 10 with a modest output of 20,000 a day until the market has been established. It is the ultimate plan of the company to establish plants along the sound so that it can supply the entire market between New York and Boston. For the present, however, the selling campaign will be concentrated in New York City.

COMMON BRICK.

Call for Good Brick Makes Local Market Slightly Firmer.

HUDSON common brick prices are reported to be a little stiffer in view of an increasing demand for high grade material, and prices show a slight chaoge upward.

In the total of brick unloaded by barges consigned to the Greater New York Brick Company the consumption movement indicated is practically that of last week. Manufacturers are still loading their kilns, but only one, an experimental kiln, has been fired. It probably will be a week or more before the plants actually start burning, thus bringing new brick into the market considerably later than usual.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, May 28, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

LUMBER.

Movement Toward Eastern Market Better —Prices Generally Firmer.

LUMBER reflected the improvement in shipments eastward perhaps better than any other line during the last few weeks. Wholesalers are reporting a stronger demand for spruce, hemlock and North Carolina pine, while hardwood interests are making bigger shipments. The reason is ascribed without hesitation to the belief that the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision in the railroad freight rate increase, argument will be favorable for the petitioners. In the suburbs the dealers are reporting improved building movements, and they are loading up gradually in anticipation of an increasing demand and a quick depletion of southern and northern mill supplies in the event of freight rates being advanced. Labor conditions and the generally weak state of the distributing market during the early season have encouraged mill men to hold back on their outputs and even to sacrifice their held-over supplies with the result that should a rush for material ensue following the handing down of a favorable decision in the rate case there will be a quick depletion of stock and a sharp shift upward in prices.

FIRE PREVENTION AS A MUNICIPAL FUNCTION

Total Loss By Conflagration Throughout Country Aggregates About $600,000 Daily—Per Capita Loss Five Times That Of Any Country In Europe.

By JOSEPH O. HAMMITT, Chief Fire Prevention Bureau

FIRE prevention as a municipal function is somewhat difficult to deal with, because municipalities so far have done very little functioning along that line. Municipal fire prevention is comparatively new. Though the fire waste in this country amounts in actual cash, according to a Government estimate, to about $600,000 a day, or $25,000 an hour, and has been such for many years, we have given little thought as yet to scientific measures for reducing this enormous waste. The per capita fire loss in this country is five times as great as that of any country of Europe. I gave the figure of $600,000 a day, which is $416 a minute, as the actual cash cost of our fires in this country. But that is only the minor portion of the loss. To arrive at a fair estimate of what fires cost us we must include the upkeep of fire departments, part of the upkeep of water departments, and so much of the fire insurance premiums as are not paid out in indemnities. This brings the cost of fires up to not less than $500,000,000 a year, which is $125,000,000 more than the total cost of the Panama Canal.

Gigantic Fire Loss.

Now, even the $500,000,000 does not include the total loss, for to this must be added the economic loss—loss of business, loss of employment, disturbance of industry and of financial conditions; and to all this, one more factor, which is, from the humanitarian viewpoint, the most important, must be added—the loss of human life, which averages in this country about 2,000 persons a year, and the injuries which deprive the sufferers of the capacity to enjoy life or to make their lives fruitful. The number of persons incapacitated at fires in this country each year is about 6,000. Should we count in all our losses, using the actuary's figures of $5,000 as the economic value of a life, the figures would well run into billions instead of hundreds of millions.

The Federal Government in 1907 conducted an investigation into the causes of fires. The results of this inquiry ought to have awakened the country. The figures put the total cash cost of fires for that year, excluding that of forest fires and marine losses, but including excess cost of fire protection due to bad construction, and excess premiums over insurance paid, at $456,485,000. A Government report shows that the tax of this fire loss on the people exceeds the total value of the gold, silver, copper and petroleum produced in the United States in that year. This report shows that nearly one-half the value of all the new buildings constructed in one year throughout the country is destroyed by fire.

Movement Started in 1835.

As far back as 1835, Zachariah Allen inaugurated in New England the first fire-prevention movement in this country by introducing into his cotton factories what is known today as "mill construction." Allen became the moving spirit in the factory mutual system of fire insurance. He devoted much attention to the subject of building construction and found that by increasing the thickness of his floors and of the beams in his buildings, by building fire walls in the different parts of these structures, by closing vertical openings through the floor, by keeping these floors clean from oily waste and clippings, by even paying attention to the condition of the watchman's lanterns, and, generally, by instituting carefulness and good housekeeping where carelessness and slovenliness had prevailed, he was able to reduce the number of fires to a great extent.

*From an address delivered at Auburn, N. Y., June 4.

JOSEPH O. HAMMITT.

Creation of Bureau.

The first serious attempt to develop fire prevention as a municipal function in this State was the enactment in 1911 of an amendment of the Greater New York Charter creating in the Fire Department a Bureau of Fire Prevention. Through this bureau the Fire Commissioner enforces laws and ordinances and regulations of the Fire Department itself for the prevention of fires, and also as to making buildings safe for their occupants in case of fire by means of adequate exit facilities. The principal aim of fire prevention as a municipal function is the protection of human life. The protection of property against destruction is a secondary, though very important, feature.

The public demand which called forth the enactment of the New York City fire-prevention law was awakened by the tragedy of the Triangle waist factory fire in which 145 factory workers met death.

Two lines of attack are open to the municipality which makes war upon its fire waste, having in view the protection of human life as the principal object and the preservation of property as a secondary, but very important, consideration. One of these methods of attack is fire prevention in its narrowest sense, and the other is fire prevention in its broader sense and consists of requiring in every building (such as a hotel, a factory, an office building, a lodging house, or a place of public amusement) adequate and accessible exits through which all the occupants can pass in a short period of time to a place of safety in case of fire or panic.

Orders Complied With.

Both these lines of attack are availed of by the Fire Department of New York City, acting under its fire-prevention law. The character of results obtained is indicated by a statement of important requirements of the Bureau of Fire Prevention complied with during the first three months of 1914. The following statement gives a record not of the orders issued by the Fire Department for safety, but of the orders actually complied with during the first three months of the present year. It is as follows:

(1) Sprinkler systems installed.....	20
(2) Additional exits, stairways and fire-escapes	61
(3) Repairs and extensions of existing stairways, fire-escapes and exits, removal of obstructions at exits and keeping doors unlocked	231
(4) Miscellaneous structural alterations, fireproofing and protection, fireproof windows, shutters, skylights, etc.....	1,381
(5) Repairs of electrical equipment..	475
(6) Removal of dangerous conditions in heating and power plants..	299
(7) Miscellaneous fire appliance and fireproof receptacles (such as water buckets, hand fire extinguishers, etc.). The figure represents not the number of appliances but the number of orders to install equipments..	2,583
(8) Installations of interior fire alarm systems	6
(9) Installation of fire drills (tested and approved by the Bureau of Fire Prevention)	46
(10) Hazardous occupancies discontinued, hazardous stock removed, etc.	170
(11) Quantities of combnstibics on storage reduced	49
(12) Approved storage systems for combustibles installed	9

These figures do not include the work in theatres. One of the heaviest responsibilities of the Fire Department is to protect the theatregoing public, including the tens of thousands of patrons of moving-picture shows. In New York City we have fairly adequate ordinances setting forth the requirements necessary for the safety of theatre and moving-picture patrons from fire and panic dangers.

Enforcing Ordinances.

This year we discovered in the City of New York how to enforce these ordinances. We notified the theatre managers that their licenses would not be renewed unless they complied with all the requirements. Theatre licenses expired on the first of May, and I imagine that in the six weeks immediately preceding that date there was more work done in existing theatres in order to render them safe in case of fire or fire panic than during any equal number of months in the previous history of the Fire Department. The sudden solicitude for the welfare of the public displayed by certain theatre managers who had disregarded the law was quite touching. Orders which had been issued each year beginning with 1910 were enforced for the first time in April, 1914. In those cases where it was physically impossible to complete the work before the license expired the licenses were not renewed until we were satisfied that extra precautions were being taken and had every evidence of good faith that the orders would be complied with within the shortest possible time.

100,000 Inspections Monthly.

More than 100,000 inspections are now being made each month in New York City. They have resulted in an enormous cleaning up of rubbish piles which are acknowledged to be the principal fire breeders. In the course of a year the housekeeping inspections should show results in a reduction in the number of fires.

Another important feature of our work in New York, which I strongly commend to the officials of other cities, is the educational work. Illustrated lectures on fire prevention are given in the public schools, to civic societies, business associations, Y. M. C. A. meetings, Boy Scout organizations, and wherever suitable audiences can be secured. Several hundred thousand copies of fire-prevention warnings in printed forms have been distributed. Just at present the Fire Department is cooperating with the Board of Education to introduce a course in fire prevention as a part of the curriculum in the public schools.

Now we are taking up seriously the use of the moving-picture theatres for the campaign of education. The Fire Department is co-operating in the preparation of moving-picture scenarios that will carry fire-prevention warnings to audiences all over the United States. The possibilities of this work are enormous.

Placing Responsibility.

Still another thing we have attempted in New York is of special interest to the other cities. Perhaps you know that in some foreign countries a man on whose premises a fire is started is frequently held responsible for the cost of extinguishing the fire and also for damage to the property of others. I do not know exactly how the laws under which this responsibility is fixed in foreign countries are phrased, but we have in the Greater New York Charter a provision under which we think that if a fire occurs or spreads because of the absence of precautions required by law or by lawful orders of the Fire Commissioner, the owner of the premises or person responsible for the violation is liable for the cost of putting out the fire and injuries to firemen sustained in fighting it. No suit had ever been brought under this section of our City Charter till the present Fire Commissioner, Robert Adamson, went into office. We had a disastrous smoke fire in the cellar of a loft building. It could easily have been extinguished by a single company without danger to the firemen if an order of the Bureau of Fire Prevention for the installation of a sprinkler equipment had been complied with. Because of failure to comply with this order, Commissioner Adamson holds that the Greenwood Cemetery Corporation, which owns the building, is responsible for the cost of putting out the fire; and he has brought suit to recover. We expect to bring suit also for the injuries to the firemen. Perhaps, if we succeed it will be clearly established that the Greenwood Cemetery Corporation must indemnify all those who suffered loss in the fire. Once that is established, many people will be more careful.

Remedy Suggested.

But suppose we do not succeed in our suit? Will it not be clear that the law should be changed so that such suits will succeed in the future? Should there not be such a law, not only for New York City but for the entire State? Do you not want such a law for every city in the State? Would it not be fair to relieve the taxpayers who are so careful as to avoid fires of the expense of putting out the fires started through the carelessness of others? I suggest that the matter be referred to the proper committee of this conference to have the necessary legislation prepared and advocated.

Not long ago the Wisconsin legislature conducted an extensive investigation into the causes of fires in forty-four American cities with annual fire losses of about $44,000,000.

The following partial tabulation is the result of that investigation.

	Number of Fires.	Per Cent of Fires.
Rubbish	4,452	10.53
Matches	2,663	6.30
Chimneys, defective	2,136	5.47
Cigars, cigarettes and pipes	1,681	3.97
Flues, defective	1,346	3.18
Furnaces, defective	1,159	2.74
Electric wiring, defective	1,097	2.59
Ashes, hot	809	1.91
Candles	761	1.80
Stoves, defective	682	1.61
Stoves, overheated	599	1.42
Gas jets, contact with curtains, draperies, etc.	492	1.16

It will be noticed from the items of this list that most of the fires may be attributed simply to carelessness and bad housekeeping. It has been estimated by experts, and it seems to be a reasonable approximation, that carelessness will account for not less than 60 per cent. of our fires. All of the items mentioned on the list need not have been mentioned at all if people had trained themselves to "think fire beforehand."

Preventative Measures.

There are two kinds of carelessness: carelessness in creating the conditions which lead to fires, such as allowing the accumulation of rubbish and waste, failing to remove clippings from the floors, neglect of common precautions against fire, faulty building construction, and similar very simple ways of exhibiting lack of thought. The second form of carelessness is actually making the fires after establishing the conditions which lead to them. This consists in the doing of overt acts which directly cause fires, such as throwing away lighted matches, cigars and cigarettes; using naphtha and other explosive substances too close to open flames; looking for gas leaks with lighted matches or candles; allowing sparks to fly from unprotected meters near accumulations of inflammable material—in fact, doing or permitting to be done a hundred and one things which could be avoided.

The "human element" enters largely into the creation of our scandalous fire loss. An extensive campaign of education throughout the country showing people what they are actually being taxed each year—that each family is paying about $27 a year for smoke—would probably awaken the public conscience concerning the supreme importance of fire prevention.

Millions Can Be Saved.

More than half of our fires could positively be prevented. This would save the country millions of dollars each year. If more money were spent on fire prevention, if efficient fire-prevention bureaus were established in every municipality in this country and if these bureaus were given the proper support by public-spirited citizens, the problem would in part be solved.

There is no excuse or palliation for our enormous fire waste. It has been called a scandal to the nation. As I have said, we have diagnosed the disease; we have studied its causes; we have discovered the fire germ, so to speak—its name is carelessness. We have also discovered the remedy—fire prevention. Let us unite to apply it.

WHERE SHOULD THE FIRE LIMITS BE PLACED?

A Fireproof Area Suggested For Lower Manhattan, and a Limitation on Frame Construction at the North End.

IN considering the extension of the fire limits in the several boroughs of the city, Mr. Miller proposes to extend to the other boroughs the principle already established in the Borough of Brooklyn, restricting within certain limits, outside of what are known as the fire limits, the construction of frame buildings to one and two-family residences which do not cover more than 80 per cent. of the width of the lot. The purpose of this provision would be to encourage, in certain districts which have a residential character, the construction of detached dwellings, and to discourage the encroachment of business buildings into such sections. Mr. Miller will be pleased to have any suggestions or criticisms on this matter, and especially would be pleased to have his attention called to districts or sections where such a restriction would be particularly desirable.

In a proposed revision of the Building Code submitted several years ago there was included in the section governing fire limits a paragraph fixing a district within the Borough of Manhattan, within which all new buildings, except private residences, would be required to be of fireproof construction. It is seriously considered including in the proposed new Building Code a similar provision.

An examination of the conditions in the Borough of Manhattan show that while there has been considerable development in recent years in the lower end of the section now outside the fire limits, there has been very little change for the last ten years above 181st street, and even in Marble Hill. The development in that section lying between 165th and 181st streets in recent years has been all in the way of construction of multiple dwellings. The records of the Bureau of Buildings show that no private residence has been erected between 165th and 181st streets, west of Broadway, since 1908, and no frame building has been erected since 1904. Of the 86 buildings which were constructed in that section in the last ten years, 71 were multiple tenements, one of them being of fireproof construction. In that part of the Marble Hill section lying between Broadway and Terrace View avenue there are at present less than 100 buildings, practically all residences, about 5 per cent. of which come under the classification of tenement houses. In this section there are still more unoccupied lots than those containing buildings.

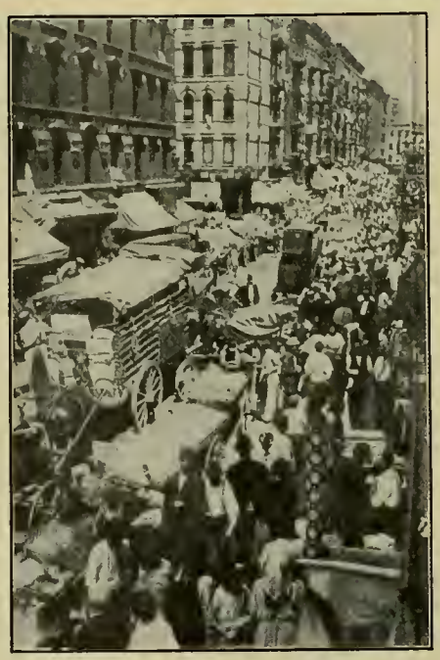
Under the circumstances it would seem well to apply to this section as well as to the Inwood Hill section and the Washington Heights section — that is, that part of the present fire limits lying above 181st street—the restriction prohibiting frame construction except for private residences occupying not more than 80 per cent. of the width of the lot.

The general consensus of opinion regarding the Borough of Richmond is that no fire limits should be established in that borough. This is not only the judgment of the Fire Commissioner, but also that of Borough President McCormack of that borough. Superintendent of Buildings McDermott of Richmond points out that with 58 square miles of territory, the population is only 2.3 per acre. He says further: "The great improvement in transportation facilities between the other four boroughs will no doubt increase their building operations considerably, and such a possibility might well be taken into consideration in extending the fire limits."

WHAT HOUSING REFORM HAS DONE FOR US

Looking Back Over The Work of the Tenement House Committee —Better Structural and Sanitary Conditions, But Higher Rents.

THE experiment of having a department to deal with housing problems has been tried in this city. And the public judgment is that the experiment has been successful on most counts. It has improved the plan and structure of multi-family houses. It has let light into dark rooms. It has provided decent toilets and enforced cleanliness in houses and yards. On the other hand, the rise in rents that has taken place since the year 1901 is by some authorities held to be due in a large degree to the operations of the Tenement House Law, but this is not conceded by those responsible for the enactment of the law.



Judging by the progress made in improving housing conditions during the last decade, it is not too much to expect in the opinion of the Tenement House Committee of the Charity Organization, that at the end of the next decade we shall have as clean dwellings as the far-famed German cities. When the new law went into effect New York was getting the first of the flood of immigration from Southern Europe which has transformed our American metropolis into the second Italian city of the world in point of population, which has transformed it into the third Russian city, and which has given it half as many Hungarians as there are in Budapest. It is fortunate that the tenement law went into effect about that time, else the lower East Side of New York would be less sanitary and habitable than it is.

Results of a Decade.

The results which have been obtained under the head of housing reform will be found set forth in a report just made by the Tenement House Committee of the Charity Organization Society for the years 1911, 1912 and 1913. The publications of the Charity Organization on the subject of housing are always interesting. When the Tenement House Department was organized by Mr. de Forest and Mr. Veiller, it was the first city department of its kind in the world. To it were given powers over tenement houses formerly vested in the Health and Building Department. In 1912 it had an appropriation of $400,000, and before the close of that year the staff numbered 385 employes. Since then both the staff and the annual appropriation have doubled.

The Tenement House Commitee of the Charity Organization antedates the tenement law. It was in fact the author of the law, as it has been its strongest defender since. It has had to consent to modifications of drastic provisions, but the fundamentals of the law have not been impaired. Seven members of the committee have served continuously since 1901, and thirteen since 1903. The present duty of the committee is to "prevent the passage of legislation which will weaken the tenement house law, to secure from time to time, as may be necessary, new legislation strengthening and improving the present requirements, to study carefully the enforcement of the existing laws by the local authorities and to stimulate them to more efficient administration, co-operating with the local officials wherever possible."

The committee has been successful in all these particulars. The facility with which it has obtained amendments to the law has often been remarked upon, as in sharp contrast to the long-continued and fruitless efforts to revise the building code. By going to Albany, instead of City Hall, for legislation the committee has avoided the crowd. Tangible results of these years of "watchfulness and work" are not wanting. The members of the committee are Paul D. Cravath, chairman; Grosvenor Atterbury, Charles S. Brown, Robert W. de Forest, Edward T. Devine, Otto M. Eidlitz, Matthew C. Fleming, Dr. E. R. L. Gould, Darwin R. James, Jr., Dr. Ernst J. Lederle, Robert Grier Monroe, Henry Phipps, Frederick B. Platt, Miles Tierney, Alfred T. White, Lawrence Veiller, director; Madge D. Headley, secretary.

Provisions for Fire Protection.

On the constructive side, the committee has joined each year with Tenement House Commissioner Murphy in preparing and securing the passage by the Legislature of measures that increase the safety of the families in multiple dwellings. Heretofore people living in fireproof apartment houses, as well as in ordinary tenements, were dependent for escape from the building upon a single flight of stairs, as the laws did not require fire-escapes upon such buildings. With the erection of buildings of this kind to great heights, a seventeen-story apartment house having recently been built, and the larger knowledge that has come through serious fires in recent years, the danger has recently become manifest. Under the changes made in the law last year, every multiple dwelling, both fireproof and non-fireproof, must have two independent ways of egress; these may be either outside or inside stairs, fire-escapes or fire-towers.

Another important change in the law, and one which the committee has been patiently biding its time for the past ten years to bring about, is that which forbids in the future the use of certain rope-ladder or wire-cable fire-escapes upon the smaller tenement houses, requiring instead in every case, outside fire-escape balconies with connecting outside stairs, the only type of fire-escape that is really adequate.

Another amendment legalized the erection of fire-escapes in a recess in the front of the building on new tenements —a form of construction that it is desirable to encourage, as fire-escapes on the front of a building take away much from the attractiveness of the better class of flats and apartment houses.

The bill also required that every flight of stairs in new tenement houses shall extend from the entrance floor to the roof. Previously it was only necessary to have one flight of stairs thus extended.

In a similar way provision was made to affect a new type of apartment house, namely, the so-called "duplex" apartment, in which certain evils had arisen which it had not been possible to foresee. A number of these houses had been built in recent years. The "duplex" apartment is one which occupies a portion of two separate floors of an apartment house. On one of the floors are to be found the living-rooms, parlor, study, dining-room, kitchen, etc.; on the other floor are to be found the bedrooms. It developed in the course of practice that these houses were being built in such a way that in case of fire the tenants had no means of escape from the bedrooms, except by going down the stairs from their upper floor to the living rooms on the lower floor and proceeding thence to the public hall or fire-escapes. It is obvious that this was a dangerous mode of construction. This has now been corrected and the tenants of such houses built in the future will have direct access at each floor of their apartment to a proper means of egress.

Changes in the Law.

A further important change in the law was one which required in new tenements the separation of the elevator shafts from the stairs and halls by means of brick walls or fireproof partitions. Hitherto the practice had been to build the elevator shafts generally in the wellhole of the stairs. This practice had by no means been confined to tenement houses but prevailed in hotels, offices, lofts, and other buildings.

The fire in the Equitable Building in 1912 showed for the first time in a dramatic way the great danger of this form of construction and called attention to the fact that the elevator shaft with its oiled track afforded an extraordinary means for the quick spread of fire throughout a building.

This change in the tenement house law marks a distinct advance in building construction and affords to the dweller in new tenement houses a greatly increased degree of protection.

Another important advance was made by requiring that all windows in the halls of new tenements shall be fireproof and shall be glazed with wire glass, even though such windows open directly upon the street. The effect of this will be to minimize the danger of the spread of fire from floor to floor through the outside windows of the building.

Fire Stops Compulsory.

Provision was also made specifically so as to remove any doubt as to the legality of open stairs in future buildings; also strengthening the law so as to prohibit in fireproof as well as in non-fireproof buildings any openings whatever from the public halls to the apartments, except of course the necessary door openings.

The law was again strengthened by requiring the partitions separating one apartment from another or from the public halls of the building to be provided with certain means of fire stops.

Another advance in the law was that by which inside cellar stairs, permitted in the smaller buildings, were required to be enclosed with brick walls and provided with self-closing fireproof doors.

THE POLICIES OF THE ADVISORY COUNCIL

Will Work to Protect Real Estate Interests Against the Dangers of Paternalism—Will Gather Full Informationon Legislative Matters.

By CYRUS C. MILLER

THE charge often has been made that the real estate interests of New York never are united on any question involving their welfare, and that therefore lawmakers cannot know what are the wishes of the real estate people themselves. There is truth in this charge. It must be admitted also that when real estate owners appear before a legislative committee, or the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, or the Board of Aldermen, they sometimes are in opposition to the measure under discussion, and their suggestions are not always constructive or well informed as to the facts. The result has been a lack of harmony between officials and citizens, and sometimes the enactment of measures which might have been beneficial, instead of harmful, if they had received the aid of the practical knowledge of intelligent real estate people. The reason for this has been, in a large measure, that real estate owners are busy men who have not the time to inform themselves on the intricate and perplexing matters of legislation and public policy which affect them.

Why the Council was Formed.

The object in forming the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests, composed as it is of eminent and influential men of the city who are interested in real estate and its allied branches, was to coordinate the various and sometimes conflicting elements of the real estate business in New York so that they could take a united stand on public measures affecting them and work in harmony whenever possible with departments of the State and City whose work affected real estate. Necessarily, many questions of law and policy will arise upon which opinions of property owners and officials may differ. To harmonize these differences is one of the main features of the Advisory Council. An examination of the names of the council will show that it is composed of representative citizens who are capable of considering every phase of real estate activity and of taking a broad view of real estate questions in their relation to the public interest. It is recognized that to be of permanent force the conclusions of the council must be for the general public good as well as a benefit to real estate interests. It is recognized also that at times the conclusions of the council may not be in entire accord with some individual interests, but that is to be expected. The aim of the council will be to work for the general welfare in the belief that the ultimate good of the individual will be served best in this way.

The Danger of Paternalism.

The need of such an organization is only too apparent. All over the world movements are on foot of a paternalistic kind. We are moving very swiftly. Governmental acts are accepted now as a matter of course which only ten years ago were regarded as revolutionary. Society must advance, changes must be made, but all changes are not necessarily good ones, especially when they are urged by persons who have nothing to lose, who lack experience and often are interested only in their own advantage. Mr. James J. Hill recently at the National Foreign Trade Convention in Washington warned us of the changes taking place in a country situated somewhat like our own:

"Great Britain is now maintaining many of her industries in an artificial condition by appropriating for the support of one class of her people the property of another class . . . The British Empire is now sustaining itself by sequestering, under one guise or another, the stored accumulations of past generations. The end of that policy comes when this accumulated capital is exhausted, or has removed itself beyond the reach of legal capture . . . But the burdens placed by unwise restrictive legislation and unnecessary taxation upon business in the United States are producing their natural effects here also. Industry slackens, less because capital is dissatisfied with the present than because it is uncertain of the future. Just such mistakes as Great Britain has made and is making may confront the American workingman with a lost job, an empty cupboard, and no younger and more promising land to which he can emigrate as his needy fellows have done for centuries when caught in the vise of economic errors or commercial revolutions."

The evil days of trade in Great Britain which Mr. Hill points out may come to New York real estate unless wisdom sits at the helm of State.

To Foster Owners' Organizations.

It is not the intention of the council to supplant the property owners' organizations now in the field, but to foster them and to work through them and others which may be formed from time to time. In order to do this efficiently and to command the respect of such organizations, and of officials, both State and Municipal, it is necessary that any action taken by the council shall be based on intelligent data, and taken only after thorough investigation into all sides of a question. For this purpose it will maintain a small, but active staff, with a fund sufficient to retain the advice of experts whenever needed. It proposes to gather full information on all legislative measures and proceedings of the Board of Estimate and Board of Aldermen, and matters of general interest to real estate, and to advise real estate organizations of its findings. Such advice is to be given without charge, and without any intention of forcing it on the organizations, but it is expected that it will be followed more and more generally as it is found to be good.

Personnel of the Council.

The Advisory Council is composed of fifteen members, eight members-at-large and seven members representing organizations and property owners. They are: Messrs. John Claflin, chairman, ex-President of the Chamber of Commerce; Charles A. Peabody, president of the Mutual Life Insurance Company; Thomas Mulry, president of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank; Clarence H. Kelsey, president of the Title Guarantee & Trust Company; Frederic B. Pratt, Albert G. Milbank, of Masten & Nichols, attorneys; William J. Amend, attorney; Cyrus C. Miller, ex-President Borough of the Bronx; Adolph Bloch, United Real Estate Associations; Alfred E. Marling, Allied Real Estate Interests; Laurence M. D. McGuire, president of the Real Estate Board; J. Howland Leavitt, Borough of Queens, and William S. Van Clief, Borough of Richmond; secretary, Birch Helms. The representatives of the Boroughs of Brooklyn and Bronx have not been chosen, but it is expected that they will be in a short time. . . .

The executive committee is composed of Cyrus C. Miller, chairman, Clarence H. Kelsey, Adolph Bloch, Alfred E. Marling, and Laurence M. D. McGuire. The treasurer is Clarence H. Kelsey. The committee meets once a week and the council once a month, at the office of the council, 55 Liberty street, New York.

The council will be aided by a board of counsel and an advisory staff of experts. The Board of Counsel will be comprised of a central committee, which will study all legislative matters, and additional sub-committee consisting of lawyers selected for their authoritative knowledge of the subject matter under examination. The Advisory Staff of Experts will be made up of engineers, architects, tax experts, constructors and others who are regarded as best equipped and best informed in their particular fields of industry. Thus the conclusions of the Advisory Council will be the result of the experience and knowledge of the members of the council and the professional skill of the members of the Board of Counsel and the Advisory Staff of Experts.

The Board of Counsel.

The following named lawyers are members of the Board of Counsel: Walter Lindner, Henry R. Chittick, Stanley W. Dexter, Louis Franklin Levy, John M. Stoddard, William P. Burr, Harold M. Phillips, John J. Kuhn, William Allaire Shortt, Newell Martin, William B. Ellison, William J. Moran, Samuel C. Rogers, Alfred C. Reeve and others who may be added from time to time.

The following are named for the Advisory Staff of Experts: Henry W. Hodge, engineer; Otto M. Eidlitz, builder; Louis Horowitz, builder; Robert Moran, engineer; William Barclay Parsons, engineer; Amos L. Schaeffer, engineer; Julius Francke, architect; John P. Leo, builder; Cornelius W. Luyster, builder; James A. Henderson, builder, and others, who may be added from time to time.

An idea of the scope of the work of the council may be had from the list of questions already submitted to the council for consideration:

SUBURBS SHOW GREATEST BUILDING GAINS

Brooklyn and Queens Projects Running Ahead of Last Year's Record —Manhattan Has Active Sections and Noteworthy Operations.

TAKING the whole city into account, the building operations projected so far this year are only about two million dollars less in total estimated value than those planned during the corresponding part of last year. Brooklyn is doing over six millions' worth more, and Queens nearly two millions' worth more. Manhattan is four millions behind last year's record, and the Bronx is nearly two millions behind.

But with the lessened amount of building, the technical position of the real estate renting market is steadily strengthening, both in Manhattan and the Bronx, especially for residential buildings. The over-supply of space in office buildings will continue for some time to come. The supply of apartments was well taken last year, and the market balance in this department has not been lost since.

From January 1 up to Memorial Day plans were filed in Manhattan for 221 buildings to cost about $22,450,000, which compares with 310 buildings estimated to cost $27,015,000, which was the record of the first five months of last year. Some noteworthy operations are included in the pending projects. Five of the buildings are to be more than twelve stories high.

Five Tall Ones.

A loft building planned for erection at 36 to 46 East 31st Street, to the order of the Aeon Realty Company, from plans of Summer Gerard, will be twenty stories high, and cost $850,000. A building to be put up at the southwest corner of Vanderbilt avenue and 45th street by the New York Central Railroad Company will rise nineteen stories and cost $900,000. Warren & Wetmore are the architects. A loft building at 6 and 8 East 37th street for George C. Boldt of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel will be sixteen stories and cost $300,000, according to the estimate of the architect, Charles H. Caldwell. A loft building of fourteen stories is being erected at 121 to 125 West 48th street for the Alt Realty Co. from plans by William H. Gompert. Another sixteen-story business building is going up on the far West Side, at 441 and 443 West 55th street for Alida Beekman Emmet of 32 Liberty street, from plans by Henry B. Herts.

Other buildings planned are notable in some respect, if not for height. Vincent Astor's new stores and offices at 2 to 16 West 33rd street, opposite the Waldorf-Astoria will have a frontage of 200 feet and cost $500,000. Herman L. Meader is the architect, and excavating has begun.

Robert W. Goelet is improving two Manhatan sites which he owns. At the southwest corner of 90th street and Broadway he is building a $110,000 theatre, store and offices from plans by Thomas W. Lamb. The firm of Isaac A. Hopper (Inc.) is the general contractor. The building has a frontage on Broadway of 88 feet and a depth of 162 feet. On the premises 402 and 404 Fifth avenue, southwest corner of 37th street, Mr. Goelet is having erected an eight-story loft and store structure from plans by Warren & Wetmore. The corner store is to be occupied by Mark Cross on a long term lease.

Activity on Broadway

Broadway in the Nineties, with several large operations underway, has an encouraging appearance to a builder. The block front between 89th and 90th streets, which has been one of a long series of vacant sites, is ringing with the strokes of steam drills excavating for the great apartment house which Vincent Astor is to erect there, at a cost of $1,000,000. Charles A. Platt is drawing the plans and Marc Eidlitz & Son have the contract. Directly across Broadway is Mr. Goelet's theatre project, and at the southwest corner of 95th street a large site is being cleared for a taxpayer building which Vincent Astor is having erected.

Sixth avenue has two operations which signalize the growing importance of the districts around the 38th street and 42nd street elevated stations. One is at the southwest corner of the avenue and 39th street, where a four-story building is going up, and the other operation is at 50th street and the avenue, where an eight-story building is rising.

East 31st street, between Madison and Fourth avenues, is the scene of three considerable operations, one being the twenty-story loft building for the Aeon Realty Company, above referred to. In 33rd street, between Madison and Fourth avenues, a sixteen-story commercial building is being erected from plans of M. E. Rountree, to cost $425,000.

WHERE VINCENT ASTOR IS ERECTING A MILLION-DOLLAR APARTMENT HOUSE.
The site on Broadway from 89th to 90th street, which is being excavated, has for many years been unoccupied.

Intrinsic business conditions from the economic standpoint are sound. There is little over-production in any important industry.

A former Tax Commissioner, Mr. Strasbourger, says that when the vacancies in skyscrapers are considered, and the interest on the investment is reckoned, the normal building of nine or ten stories in the end will pay as well or better than the skyscraper.

It is the consensus of opinion of some of the keenest and most farsighted men that the United States is entering on an era of prosperity that will completely overshadow even the great periods of business prosperity that have already come to this country since the Civil War. They assign many sound reasons for this prediction.

Brooklyn and Queens seem assured of a year of good building business. Brooklyn leads all the boroughs in gains for the first five months and shows an increase of 26 per cent. over last year's plan filings in the corresponding period. Whenever there is a new building movement under way it starts in the suburbs with the lighter work.

The old Astor House site represents a fine opportunity for something, but what? "For a commercial hotel," answers the traveling man. But the hotel man himself cannot see it distinctly on a site one-half of which was appraised at $2,000,000. The receipts from the cafe would, of course, be enormous, and the dining-room would be a money winner, but the returns from the rooms is uncertain. The total gross income would have to be very large indeed to meet even the interest charge on so heavy an investment as a modern hotel building on this expensive site would require. In view of all the facts, the Hotel Register and Review advises caution and expresses a preference for Government bonds.

Can We Get a Better Form of Government?

From the statements which Mayor Mitchel has been giving to the papers, the new Charter which is now being prepared by the Administration is what would be called a radical document. The Mayor did not go very much into detail, but he intimated that a certain measure of direct government would be established; that the Mayor would have a long term, but that he would be subject to recall probably at two-year intervals. A statement of this kind does not, of course, mean very much, but it undoubtedly affords an indication of the general nature of the proposed new Charter. That document will probably embody a plan of government analogous to the so-called commission form. It will provide for a considerable concentration of governmental power—a much greater concentration than that which is permitted by the present New York Charter.

But this delegation of responsibility and power will be accompanied by the reservation to the voters of a large amount of direct authority. In all probability certain classes of legislative acts, such, for instance, as the bonding of the city, will be subject either to an optional or a compulsory referendum, while at the same time the legislative and administrative officials, great as their power will be, will have to retain public confidence, because they will always be liable to the attack of a recall petition. But while the commission form is likely to be accepted, in so far as it provides for a highly concentrated government, resting directly on popular confidence and subject to popular control, it by no means follows that the commission plan will be adhered to in other and perhaps more doubtful respects. The weakness of that plan has always been the confusion which it involved of legislative and administrative functions. The same five commissioners are both heads of departments and the general legislative council of the whole city.

Such a method may do for a small city of 15,000 people, the conduct of whose business does not involve a very large amount of technical skill and executive experience, but it will not do for a city with 5,500,000 inhabitants. In such a city the legislative and administrative authorities must co-operate, but they must not be confused. Just as the board of directors of a private corporation is separated from the president, although the president usually sits upon the board, so the legislature of a city should be chosen in a different way and have very different functions from its executive. The new Charter which is now being prepared will undoubtedly depart in this respect from the model offered by the majority of commission-governed cities, for Mr. Bruère and the other gentlemen connected with the administration are well grounded in fundamental political principles and would not frame a charter which would be open to obvious and fatal criticism. The plan which they present may provide for one of several different days of making the legislative and executive powers efficient yet distinct, but it may be safely predicted that in this respect the new Charter will follow European models, rather than those offered by our own Western cities.

The fact remains, however, that the new Charter will contain a certain element of direct government, and the taxpayers of New York should be making up their minds whether they will approve or disapprove of such an innovation. In the opinion of the Record and Guide the matter should not be prejudged one way or the other. If the Charter is in other respects an acceptable instrument, no doctrinaire objecting to direct government should be allowed to stand in the way of its approval.

Direct government is undoubtedly a somewhat experimental innovation in the political organization of a great city like New York, but it is not sufficiently experimental to warrant the assumption by influential taxpayers of a position of uncompromising hostility. It all depends upon the kind of direct government which is established and the kind of representative government which is associated with it.

If the legislative and executive powers are reorganized, so as to grant to the legislative and executive officials a large measure of discretionary power, it is natural that in a democracy some special provision should be made against the possible abuse of that power. Such a government can rest only on the continuous and cordial expression of popular confidence; and if such popular confidence is to exist, some method of giving expression to doubt or lack of confidence must be incorporated in the plan of government. A powerful administrative and legislative organization needs a larger and fuller measure of popular support than does a group of officials whose ability to do either good or evil has been impaired in advance by an elaborate system of checks and balances.

Whatever the attitude of the New York taxpayers, however, it may be doubted whether a charter which includes a substantial measure of direct popular government will ever get through the Legislature. The political machines of both parties will be opposed to it, and they will not pass it unless public opinion in New York is unanimous and aggressive in its favor. But public opinion in New York is never unanimous in favor of any particular plan of government, and it is very rarely aggressive about anything. The Mitchel administration was very unsuccessful in its handling of the Legislature at its last session, and if it expects to get through the new Charter it will need to adopt a much more effective method of urging its plans.

The Post Office and the Subway.

The press, the government and the people of New York have all of them deeply resented the attitude assumed by the national administration in respect to the easement for a subway under the New York post office; and there has been good reason for this resentment. The Federal government, in its title to the land on which the post office stands, is not in the position of an ordinary property owner. The land was given to the government by the city for a public purpose. Of course the grant was not made subject to any specific restrictions, but when a public corporation makes such a grant it expects subsequently to be treated as if the property were held in trust for the public benefit. It may reasonably anticipate that any subsequent request made in the interest of the people of New York, and not harmful to the building in its use as a post office, would be granted.

Instead of that, the Treasury Department has behaved as if it were a private property owner whose only object was to wring every penny from the city which the grant of a specific privilege can be considered to be worth. The easement for which the city is asking will not cost the national government a dollar of money, or the slightest inconvenience. On the contrary, the location of a subway under the post office will facilitate the distribution of the mails. Yet the government wants to charge the city a larger sum for the easement than it could possibly get from a court of law. The actual damage suffered by the government will be negligible, but it can hold up a piece of work vital to the health and prosperity of the people of New York, and it is proceeding to do so. The payment of $1,000,000 for the privilege of running a subway under the post office would be more like a payment of blackmail than a payment of damages.

The vestrymen of Trinity Parish are not aware of any historical associations or other reasons why they should wish to preserve St. John's Chapel, in Varick street. It is a quaint little edifice, but not so very old as churches go. It was not here during the Revolution, and it played no part in any other national crisis. The park which once gave St. John's a picturesque distinction was sacrificed to commerce, and today it is surrounded by factories and warehouses. There are houses of worship that are older and handsomer, and besides there is now another St. John's in the same ecclesiastical denomination — the great cathedral on Morningside Heights. The architectural idea of having the sidewalk of Varick street built through the porch of the chapel would be excellent if the trustees desired it, but as they do not, and as they are the most competent persons to decide, what reason is there for others to assume the responsibility and the expense?

Why Fifth Avenue's Prestige Should Be Preserved.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

The high-class retail business for which Fifth avenue is so well known is the most sensitive and delicate organism imaginable, depending first on the exclusiveness of the neighborhood; secondly, on the nearness to the homes of the rich and the large hotels, and, thirdly, on its lack of congestion, especially on the sidewalks, so that the customers are not crowded or jammed in a hurly-burly crowd on their way to and from the different shops.

Wholesale trade, on the other hand, is crowding the retail as firmly as the retail businesses invade the residence section, their object being to be as close as possible to their customers.

Fifth avenue, below 34th street as far as 23d street, has already been doomed. Below 23d street it is irretrievably lost. Nothing of any nature can ever redeem it. Of primal importance, therefore, is the preserving of Fifth avenue from 42d to 59th street. Loft buildings have already invaded some of the side streets with their hordes of employees, under the guise of "light manufacturing," and, if the occupancy of the buildings were restricted so that no manufacturing could be done either on Fifth avenue or from Madison avenue over to Sixth avenue, the problem would doubtless be entirely solved.

Employees from these loft buildings cannot be controlled. They spend their time during the lunch hour and before and after business congregating in crowds that are doing more than any other thing to destroy the exclusiveness of Fifth avenue, as witness below 23d street, and when the exclusiveness and desirability of Fifth avenue is destroyed, the value of real estate on Fifth avenue will depreciate immediately.

This is not a plea for property-owners, but for the preservation of Fifth avenue, the most wonderful shopping street in this country, and in many respects more wonderful than anything in Paris or London. The city would lose millions of dollars in taxes in not preserving it.

In case that the occupancy cannot be regulated through the Factory Commission or otherwise, the next best step would be the limitation of the height of buildings in this zone, thereby diminishing the volume of operatives. From a business standpoint, this would be no hardship on the owners of property, for the most paying investment today in the section under discussion is a six-story building. A large office building and a large hotel, owing to the nature of their occupancy, are no disadvantage. A first-class hotel, on the contrary, is a decided advantage.

If the scope of the commission is broad enough, I would recommend the limitation of the height of buildings through the city into zones, so that the different sections may be treated in a manner that would comply with their local problems. For instance, if the Greenwich section and the old drygoods section above Chambers street were treated as a manufacturing center, this would work out to the salvation of the neighborhood. The tenements of the East Side furnish the operatives for manufacturers of this city, and therefore should factories be established in the neighborhood more convenient to their homes, which this would do, it would be of mutual advantage, at it would supply a line of tenancy for buildings that are now nine-tenths vacant.

Values north of 42d street, on the side streets between Fifth and Madison avenues, as compared with those between Fifth and Sixth avenues, are indicative of the value of property occupied for exclusive business, and that occupied for loft business. Between Fifth and Madison avenues, where there are practically no loft buildings property is worth $4,500 and up a front foot. The buildings are all used for retail businesses, while between Fifth and Sixth avenues there are already a number of loft buildings which have determined the occupancy of the remainder of these blocks and the value of real estate is from $2,700 a front foot to as high as $5,000, according to its nearness to Fifth avenue.

These are the conditions as they exist today, and if something is not done speedily to check further inroads, the same condition now existing below 23d street will, in a few years, prevail on Fifth avenue, north of 34th street, and Fifth avenue's prestige will then be lost to this city forever.

New York As a Future Steel Center.

New York City is the largest market for structural steel in the United States, as everybody knows, and the Merchants' Association claims that steel shapes will be manufactured here at less cost than in the Pittsburgh district, when the barge canal is ready for service. Not only shall we then be able to get Lake Superior ores, on which Pittsburgh depends, for a lower transportation rate than Pittsburgh pays, but Adirondack, Newfoundland and Cuban ores can be put down here for a lower price still; and the iron and steel scrap used in manufacturing also costs less in this port than at Pittsburgh. The Hudson River valley was once a great iron manufacturing center, and is likely to be again, because, when considered with New York harbor, it is the strategic center of the world's trade and has the resources of a continent behind it. The Merchants' Association points out, further, that in the last analysis the choice of a location for steel-making is a question of freight rates, and that this district has exceptional advantages in this respect, not only for assembling the raw material, but also for distributing the finished product. Already two blast furnaces are under construction in this harbor, and are referred to as proof that there are manufacturers in the steel industry who hold the same view.

This new industry, should it desire to locate in this district, must, however, be treated in a broad way by our commercial bodies and city authorities. They must not expect that room will be found for great steel mills on the congested waterfront of Manhattan or Brooklyn, or even in The Bronx. More likely the mills will be on the Jersey side of the harbor, up the Hudson, where there are iron mines, coal depots and deep water, and on the Jersey meadows. No feeling of jealousy against the suburbs should be shown in this matter. Let the outskirts have the smoke-emitting mills and the laborers, and let New York be content with the trade and commerce they will bring in their train.

Transit in Queens.

At a joint meeting of the Board of Directors and the Transit Committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, held this week, resolutions were adopted opposing any change in the plans of the Dual Subway System tending to delay the inauguration of that part of rapid transit into Queens Borough which passes through the Bridge Plaza, Long Island City, and requesting the Board of Estimate to make at the earliest possible moment the necessary appropriations requested by the Bridge Department for the reconstruction of the Queensboro Bridge to adapt same for rapid transit trains. It was also the sense of those present at this meeting that the Board of Estimate and the Public Service Commission should take into consideration the serious matter of the reduction in the width of the present roadway by the operation of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit trains, and that if it is finally determined that this roadway must be reduced in width, then any such reduction of roadway be compensated for by providing additional and sufficient roadway space on some part of the bridge, or by any other method.

Seven separate contracts have been let to date aggregating $5,601,842, for every rapid transit extension in Queens Borough included in the Dual Subway System with the exception of the lines across the Queensboro Bridge and the extension of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit System from Cypress Hills, Brooklyn, to Jamaica. Of these extensions which connect with the station on the Bridge Plaza, in Long Island City, work on the Astoria extension is completed, and construction of the extension to Woodside, Elmhurst and Corona is progressing rapidly. The construction of the big passenger transfer station on the Bridge Plaza in Long Island City is now under way, and it is hoped will be finished in a little over a year, the Steinway Tunnel will be ready for operation by January 1st, 1915, and its extension to Queensboro Bridge will be finished shortly after. To connect all these lines across the Queensboro Bridge it is necessary that work be started as soon as possible as it is estimated that it will take two years from the time the work starts, to complete the reconstruction of the bridge.

The Inspection Pest.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

The system reeks with incompetency. It reeks with politics. It reeks with graft. Inspectors with scant idea of the work before them are getting $1,200, $1,800, $2,000 and more. Many of these men owe their positions to the pull of politicians. It is true that most of them are on the civil service list, but such matters are easily arranged by the professional politician. There are a certain number of places to give out and for these places the politicians have their men in readiness, and in many instances the men are placed there.

—Ten years of American occupation of the Panama Canal Zone were completed on May 4, 1914. The decade has seen the virtual completion of the canal and the beginning of its commercial and naval use.

Market Conditions Continue To Improve

COMING NIGHT AUCTION.

Fleet Estate in Bay Ridge to Be Offered in Brooklyn June 16.

One of the most important auction sales of Brooklyn property to be held in recent years is scheduled for the evening of June 16, in the Music Hall of the Brooklyn Academy of Music, on Lafayette avenue, between Fulton street and Flatbush avenue. The offering comprises the holdings of the Fleet estate and consists of 291 lots located in 68th street, between Third and Sixth avenues and on Fifth, Sixth and Bay Ridge avenues, Bay Ridge. The selling estate has had possession of the property for the last 79 years, and when it acquired the tract there was nothing but farm land surrounding. Today, however, buildings have encroached on every side, and it is a vacant oasis in the midst of a built-up city.

The property is located at the 68th street station of the Fourth avenue subway system, now in course of construction, but in addition the tract is reached by the various trolley lines on Third, Fifth and Bay Ridge avenues. Moreover, the station on the Fifth avenue elevated system at Third avenue and 65th street is only a few blocks distant. All the streets have been made on the property to be sold, and Fifth and Bay Ridge avenues are paved and sewers installed. The new Bay Ridge High School, at Fourth avenue and 67th street, is within one block of the lots.

Mr. Johnson, of the Jere Johnson, Jr., Company, who will conduct the sale, said last week: "At present there is but one great subway in actual operation. As everyone knows, this runs from Flatbush and Atlantic avenues, Brooklyn, to 96th street, Manhattan, where it diverges, one branch passing through the upper west side of the Borough of Manhattan, on to Van Cortlandt Park, and the other branch penetrating the Bronx as far as 181st street and Boston road. When the contracts were let for this existing subway, and also when the operation stage was reached, times were unusually good, and the resultant rise in values in the then outlying sections that came under the subway influence was almost beyond comprehension. The building growth that followed, for instance on Washington Heights, was the talk of the country, and the wonder was that, despite the enormous annual increment in the population of New York City, this crop of apartments, stores and rows of houses could be so readily absorbed.

"On the other hand, when contracts for the Fourth avenue subway were let, the real estate market was at its lowest ebb, which result was brought about not by investments in high grade property, but by wild-cat speculation in inaccessible, sparsely settled sections where the supply was apparently limitless, but where the legitimate demand was practically nil. Well-located lots were fortunate under the circumstances in maintaining their own. As the future has not been as yet discounted along the route of the Fourth avenue subway, now is the time to buy.

"Things generally are beginning to brighten; there is a much better demand for well-located property in Bay Ridge; the stimulating influences of the Fourth avenue subway are in evidence, and the supply of available vacant land along this route is very limited. Just the same as water always seeks its level, there must be a readjustment and equalization between Manhattan and the Bronx on the one hand, and the property along the Fourth avenue subway on the other, which means a marked enhancement, as far as the Brooklyn end is concerned, for otherwise New York, instead of being the banner city of the world, is nothing more than a mammoth junk heap — the latter a proposition which even the most pessimistic would not care to defend."

Realty Golf Tournament.

The first spring tournament of the Real Estate Board of New York was held at Baltusrol Golf Club, Short Hills, N. J., on Tuesday, June 2nd. The programme was arranged by the board's golf and tennis committee, which includes Albert B. Ashforth, chairman; Joel S. deSelding, secretary, and Alfred V. Amy, John P. Kirwan, Leroy Coventry, Walter Stabler, W. J. VanPelt, Harry Parker and H. H. Hazelton. There were fifty-one entries and eight prizes were awarded in two classes—Class A and Class B.

The winners in Class A were H. C. Richards, prize low gross score 87; B. N. Phillips, prize low net score gross 87 handicap 15 net 83. Class A selected scores, afternoon and morning rounds, H. J. Sachs, low gross 87; G. H. Conger, low net 80. In Class B, low gross, W. B. Mabie; low net, G. D. Arthur, gross 104, handicap 25, net 79. Selected score, R. H. Macdonald, low gross 97; F. D. Kalley, low net 85.

The object of the tournament was to increase the bond of good fellowship between the members of the Golf Club and the Real Estate Board.

New Schools in the Suburbs.

Significant as an indication of suburban growth near New York City are the school buildings in the southern half of Nassau County and several new ones in the western part of Suffolk County. These buildings have been built to provide school facilities primarily for the children of thousands of new residents to the territories, most of whom formerly resided in the city. As there is an average of three children to every family, so it may readily be understood why modern and more ample school facilities were imperative.

Business at Bronx Register's Office.

Register Edward Polak reports the following as the business transacted in the register's office for the five months ending May 31, 1914: Mortgage tax indebtedness, $14,455,534; consideration of conveyances, $3,059,348; receipts from mortgage tax, $69,861; receipts from other sources, $19,063; folios recorded, 120,290; mortgages recorded, 4,093; chattel mortgages, 8,437; conveyances, 3,586; notary certificates filed, 1,450; commissioner of deeds' certificates filed, 1,057.

National Conference on Taxation.

The National Tax Association, though of recent formation, having been founded in 1906, has already assumed a commanding position in dealing with the prosaic subject of taxation. Its work has been of a pioneer character, mainly educational, designed to provoke a statewide and nation-wide study of the underlying principles of taxation, to remove outgrown restrictions preventing effective administration and to promote uniformity in the treatment of similar situations in neighboring states. The effect of this work is familiar to students and administrators being indicated by the much more intelligent development of the subject in recent years and a much greater care in administrative details.

The association numbers among its members tax officials of practically all the States and of the Provinces of Canada, as well as economists from the leading universities in both countries. Its volumes are widely circulated through the State, university and local libraries, and are frequently consulted and quoted in public discussions. The annual conference is attended by delegates appointed by the Governors of States, Premiers of Canadian provinces, presidents of universities and associations of accountants.

The next conference will be held at Denver, September 8-11. Professor Seligman of this city will preside. There will be eight sessions in all—one devoted to the Federal income tax, one to the single tax and one to the subject of efficiency in taxation. Among the speakers will be Dr. Allen of the New York Bureau of Municipal Research, Congressman Hull, Dr. J. L. Coulter of the Federal Census Bureau, Prof. A. B. Clark of Manitoba University, G. J. Knapp of Pueblo, Col.; F. J. Dixon of Winnipeg, F. C. Wade of Vancouver, A. C. Rearick of New York, Edmund F. Trahue of Louisville, W. Hastings Lyon, counsel to committee of the American Bankers' Association.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

Last week the real estate situation showed signs of improvement, not only on account of a noticeable increase in the volume of business transacted, but on account of the class of buyers. Considerable surprise was manifested in real estate circles that this season of the year was productive of more than the usual trading. Last week's budget of sales apparently was not a flash in the pan, for the market continued to be active and to attract the numerous investors, whose presence indicate confidence in local real estate holdings, and as a consequence strengthened conditions.

There were a number of important deals consummated this week, involving properties held at several millions of dollars. High-class West Side apartment houses still hold the center of interest. Another out-of-town investor, from Pittsburgh, figured in a million dollar deal whereby he became the owner of a valuable multi-family structure at West End avenue and 78th street. Dr. Charles L. Paterno disposed of a similar structure in West 109th street, obtaining in trade a Broadway corner which is to be improved with an apartment house. The boroughs of Queens and Brooklyn contributed largely to the business.

A number of large leases were closed, the most prominent involving apartment houses in West 43d street, which are to be modernized, the Hotel Wellington, and mercantile buildings in Perry street.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 33, as against 39 last week and 19 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 3, as compared with 11 last week and 5 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 30, as compared with 28 last week and 22 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 171, as against 155 last week, 21 having stated considerations totaling $1,331,800. Mortgages recorded this week number 83, involving $4,513,550, as against 82 last week, aggregating $1,890,232.

From the Bronx 14 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 9 last week and 9 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $989,442, compared with $529,959 last week making a total since January 1 of $19,861,463. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $912,661, and the total from January 1, 1913, to June 7, 1913, was $25,161,690.

Squadron A Buys Rockland Farm.

The Verdin homestead and 123 acres of land, near New City, the county seat of Rockland, have been purchased by Squadron A, a leading organization of the New York National Guard. The farm which is 28 miles from the Manhattan Armory is ideally located for the purposes of the buyers.

For more than two generations the Verdin homestead has been one of the exhibition places of Rockland county. It was selected by a committee of the squadron after hundreds of places had been inspected in the last five years. The large residence on the place is in a beautiful grove of pine and spruce trees and dates back to Revolutionary days. The stone walls are twenty-two inches thick. Although many buildings are available for immediate use, extensive improvements and additional structures are contemplated. The sale was made through Dudley P. Power.

Dr. Paterno Trades Apartment House.

Max Marx has sold through David Stewart, to Dr. Charles V. Paterno, the plot of about six lots at the northwest corner of Broadway and 48th st. measuring 102.5x133.5x140.7x102.2, for which the buyer gave in exchange the Prince Monaco apartments, at 227 West 109th street, a nine-story structure, on plot 55.8x100.11, between Amsterdam avenue and Broadway. The Broadway plot will be improved with a 14-story apartment house. In June, 1912, the Bendheim Construction Co. sold it to Harry Schiff, who razed the small buildings then on the premises, and planned to erect a tall apartment building. The project was never carried through, however, and the following month the property was retransferred to Max Marx, the present seller.

A $1,000,000 West End Avenue Deal.

George H. Flinn, of Pittsburgh, Pa., has purchased from the Cambridge Construction Co., Adolph Hirschfield, president, the 12-sty. apartment house on plot 102x75, at the southwest corner of West End avenue and 78th street. In part payment, he gave three four-story apartments, each with 50 feet frontages, on Craft avenue, Pittsburgh. The deal, which was negotiated by Tucker, Speyers & Co. involved about $1,000,000. Mr. Flinn is president of the newly-organized Flinn-O'Rourke Co., Inc., which has been formed to construct the four East River tunnels. Title to the New York property passed on Wednesday subject to a mortgage of $525,000.

58th Street Apartment Houses Sold.

The Biltmore-Bleiheim Co., L. Napoleon Levy, president, has sold through William B. May & Co. the two seven-story apartment houses, at 54-62 West 58th street, on plot 100x100.5 near Sixth avenue. The buildings are in modern condition and will be held by the purchaser as an investment. They are advantageously located, being opposite the 58th street entrance to the New York Athletic Club. The seller, who acquired the property in June, 1906, from Edward H. Landon, has held it at $550,000.

34th Street Deal Denied.

The report earlier in the week that interests identified with the McAlpin Hotel had purchased from William M. Cruikshank, the two buildings at 46-48 West 34th street, adjoining the hotel, was denied by both of the reported principals.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the subject of installing heating systems, of any kind or make, properly in the situation upon which they are to perform their duties.

No system ever brought forth, or that ever will be invented, will in itself make up any lack of capacity in boiler, piping or radiating surfaces, or poor workmanship in erection.

We Guarantee Our Work.

We design complete heating plants, furnish working plans and specifications and co-operate with owners, contractors, and architects solely to insure the perfect operation of our product.

of the value, use and necessity of written listings, the report considers the separate clauses that are necessary to a complete blank, fair to both owner and broker and which covers the essential details of a broker's employment, thus avoiding misunderstandings that frequently arise when the contract is verbal and a matter of memory only.

THE REAL ESTATE Board is co-operating with the Safety First Society of which Mr. Ogden L. Mills is president, and will, as a preliminary step, lend its aid in securing from such owners as are willing to loan them, vacant lots throughout the city to be used as public play grounds for the children who would otherwise have to use the streets. Some time ago the Board took this matter up and appointed this Committee to work with the Safety First Society: Lawrence B. Elliman, chairman, Albert B. Ashforth and Frederick D. Kalley. This committee met on Thursday with a committee of the Safety First Society and went over the preliminaries for a vigorous campaign for "vacant lots for playgrounds" and the Board is taking this matter up with its members. Police Commissioner Woods, who is also interested in the play ground scheme, has been notified of the Board's plan for co-operation.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Interest in the auction market this week was confined largely to large lot offerings, the two important properties sold to the highest bidder having been the Pearsall estate tract in The Bronx, and a tract at Neponsit, Long Island. The former property was sold by Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies, two days being consumed in disposing of the 420 lots. The bidding was without spirit, except at times, the buyers seeming to feel that by holding back bargains could be obtained. It is pertinent to compare the Pearsall estate sale with the Morris Park offering of a year ago, inasmuch as the tracts adjoin and are governed by the same transit conditions, both present and prospective.

In the case of the Morris Park sale, which started Decoration Day, 1913, an average price of about $1,200 a lot was obtained for the 3,089 lots. This price was considered remarkable when the size of the offering was taken into account, as well as the general apathetic condition of the realty market in The Bronx. This week's sale averaged about $990 a lot, or about one-sixth less than obtained a year ago. The auctioneers announced at the sale that the property cost the selling interests, with taxes, assessments and improvements, an average of about $1,700 a lot; consequently those who disposed of the property took a generous loss on their investment. Still it must be remembered that the present purchasers will have to expend large sums of money before their holdings are thoroughly improved.

In the majority of cases only a small percentage of the purchase price was paid at the time of sale, the result being that a generous mortgage will stand against the property for some years to come. New street improvements, including paving, grading, guttering, sidewalks, gas, water and sewers, will have to be installed, all of which will have to be borne by the realty owners; so before their purchases are finished products a considerable additional outlay will have to be made.

There is no doubt in the minds of those who have made realty conditions in The Bronx a study that values will rise, and that in the course of a few years the present prices will appear cheap. But the long, tedious period of waiting must be taken into account. The real solution of the situation now lies in the hands of the new owners. Should a building movement be started, and homes and apartment houses be erected on the property, the increment would increase rapidly and ready profits be obtained. On the other hand, if the auction buyers simply remain dormant, and make no effort to improve their properties, the expense account will mount up and a longer time will have to elapse before a profit can be obtained.

The sale of the 145 seashore lots at Neponsit on Decoration Day by the Jere Johnson, Jr., Company reached a total of $65,080, or an average of approximately $450 a lot. The sale also included three cottages, which were sold for $6,900, $6,500 and $4,500, respectively. When the auctioneer commenced the sale about 750 people faced the stand. Most of the buyers took two or more lots.

For the coming week, the most important sale will concern 600 lots, known as the Stewart McDougall property in Borough Park, Brooklyn, to be offered, today, on the premises by Bryan L. Kennelly.

At the Manhattan and Bronx Exchange Salesrooms, the various auctioneers will offer a number of properties, with tenements and dwelling particularly conspicuous. The more important properties to be sold are loft buildings in Lispenard and Lewis streets by Joseph P. Day, and in East 17th street by Henry Brady.

Money Well Spent

Every day in Brooklyn some already-built apartment house is made modern and convenient by the installation of electric light.

The owners of these buildings realize that the public is educated to the many advantages of electric service. They are quick to grasp not only the fact that vacant apartments rent quicker when electrically equipped, but also that tenants are willing to pay more for an electric-lighted apartment than for any other.

The money spent, then, to make the necessary installation is really not an expense, but an investment that pays large returns.

REINFORCED CONCRETE FOR HEAVY LOFTS

By J. P. H. PERRY, Manager Contract Department, Turner Construction Co.

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager For The American Real Estate Co.

FIFTEEN years of strenuous publicity on the part of cement manufacturers, concrete contractors and the legion of interests devoted to a wider usage of Portland cement is just beginning to reap its reward. In a year which, so far as general building construction goes, is voted one of the dullest in a long period, the reinforced concrete contractors in metropolitan territory are more busy figuring definite industrial propositions and in actually constructing factories and warehouses than at any time in their career.

There are two reasons for this activity in concrete construction: The first has just been noted, viz., the logical tidal wave of accumulated results of widespread advertising and well planned selling campaigns; the second and perhaps the more fundamental reason is the absolute merit of reinforced concrete construction for industrial buildings.

Numerous competitions in the past five years in this district have demonstrated that on warehouse and manufacturing lofts of four to ten stories, with floor loads of 200 pounds per square foot or more, where interior finish does not have to be of the toothbrush variety and where exterior treatment is reasonably simple, reinforced concrete construction can save from 8 to 15 per cent under any other fireproof type of building. Such instances as the Frederick Loeser Company warehouse in Brooklyn, where concrete beat steel by 12½ per cent, and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. warehouse in Manhattan, where there was a 10 per cent differential in concrete's favor; or the Austin, Nichols Company warehouse in the Williamsburgh district, where steel fireproofed was beaten by 8 per cent, have served to wake up the investing and architectural interests of the city to a realization that meritorious concrete possesses most of the qualities of structural steel at a handsome saving. In each of the cases just noted the competitions were definite and the comparisons exact; plans carefully detailed were drawn for both structural steel and reinforced concrete designs; figures from a number of competent contractors in both classes of work were taken and the award to concrete was made only after a most rigid investigation of what concrete had actually done under service conditions.

To anyone who doubts the reliability and satisfaction to be rendered by a reinforced concrete loft building, an inspection of any of the buildings herein named will in nine cases out of ten remove from the doubtful one's mind the last prejudice or suspicion of concrete.

Notable Examples.

For warehousing or manufacturing the following buildings are interesting: In Manhattan, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co.'s new terminal warehouse at 26th street and 11th avenue, a 10-story building, 352x67, the largest concrete building in Manhattan, with the new flat slab or beamless and girderless type of floor construction; the Gustav Schock building, 524 West 57th street. Structural steel columns were used in the lower stories to keep column size to a minimum. This building is of the more typical rentable loft where the tenants are of a considerable variety of manufacturers.

In Long Island City, the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company factory, the largest industrial building in metropolitan territory, is just completed. This is a structure carrying floor loads of 3,000 pounds per square foot down to 150 pounds per square foot; a building which is used for manufacturing, storage, shipping and office space. Its exterior and interior finish compares favorably with any loft in the city. Its speed of construction and equipment could not be surpassed by the average industrial building.

The new building for the New York Consolidated Card Company, Fourth and Webster avenues, Long Island City, is one of the most modern manufacturing loft buildings in the Greater City—building roughly 500x70, 5 stories, floor loads 150 pounds.

THE LOOSE-WILES BISCUIT COMPANY'S PLANT.

The Galvin Building, 13th street and East avenue, is a 200-pound loft rented to some eight or ten different concerns, who find the concrete building in every way suitable to their needs.

Brooklyn Structures.

In Brooklyn, the home of concrete, manufacturing and warehouse lofts are to be found scattered through all districts. The group of Gair buildings, five great factories from ten to sixteen stories in height, having a total floor space of over thirty acres, furnish an argument for the use of this material which is incontrovertible, the Bush Terminal Company model lofts in South Brooklyn, a group of fourteen buildings having a total floor space of 125 acres, running in height from six to eight stories, are, like the Gair buildings, designed for live loads of 200 pounds per square foot. These two groups of buildings represent the ideal in concrete construction—simple exteriors, plain finish on the interior, maximum light, great resistance to vibration, high load-carrying capacity, sanitary in every detail and fireproof and fire-resistant to the limit.

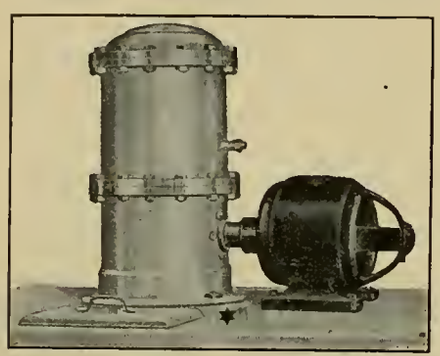
There is no reason why the ordinary manufacturing or warehousing loft on Manhattan Island or in any other part of the Metropolitan district should not at least be figured for reinforced concrete construction. The investors should instruct their architects to draw the plans in their usual structural steel and brick manner and submit these plans with sketches or specifications which call for an alternate design in reinforced concrete. There are a number of reputable concrete concerns in this territory who are thoroughly competent to submit alternate figures in such shape that the comparison would be exact and the papers easily prepared to form the basis of a contract, where the owner could see at a glance what savings if any there were in behalf of concrete.

Old Bugbears Removed.

The old bugbears about concrete being unsafe, being difficult to obtain loans on, being slow of construction, being subject to dehydratization, being unsightly, being difficult to rent, are today largely myths. The buildings already cited herein answer every one of these points, except perhaps the question of loans. Other buildings, however, the names of which for obvious reasons cannot be mentioned, can be furnished where mortgage loans have been made by well known financial institutions without much difficulty. It is hard to see how the investor or speculator can afford to go ahead with an industrial loft proposition without satisfying himself of the savings to be effected by reinforced concrete. In all cases competitions may not develop the 8 to 10 per cent saving which conservative judgment would indicate that concrete should effect. Competitions are uncertain things. Prices from different contractors vary with the conditions of their offices and the type of plans submitted, but in a great many instances there is money to be saved by taking bids on reinforced concrete construction.

When it is remembered that most of the loft buildings recently constructed in the Fourth avenue and Seventh avenue sections are built of steel and concrete with brick walls, it will be realized that reinforced concrete buildings such as the Loose-Wiles building, Long Island City, and the Brewster building of the same borough, or the Loeser building in Brooklyn, are practically the same as these Fourth avenue lofts, save that structural concrete has been substituted for structural steel and a concrete wall for the brick walls except on street fronts. There is little foundation in fact for the prevalent refusal to consider reinforced concrete for the average industrial loft.

If the financial and building interests are willing today to trust concrete floor arches and fireproofing around structural steel, why should they not be willing to put their money into structural concrete buildings veneered with brick or terra cotta? The speed of erection from the time of signing the contract is but little different. Concrete construction gets an early start and is well under way while the steel people are waiting for the delivery of their shapes.



USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

A Household Ice Plant.

SEVERAL innovations are contained in a household ice plant that the Montclair Refrigerating Co., Woolworth building, is just putting on the market, that make it appeal strongly to architects and to apartment house owners.

The device consists of a refrigerator, to all outward appearances identical with any that may be bought in the open market. Instead, however, of the usual ice box there is a brine tank fed by ethelchloride gas, instead of the usual ammonia, and an electric motor which circulates the gas and again vaporizes it after it has become condensed through the performance of its refrigerating work. All this is concentrated in a self-contained cylinder and motor which is attached to the top of the refrigerator, where it works silently, and only so long as the predetermined temperature controlled by a thermostat is being maintained. In ordinary operation the motor will operate about one hour to give a refrigerating temperature, which may go as low as 18 degrees below zero for several hours.

In addition to these features there is an ice-making chamber in which cubes of ice, suitable for use in tumblers, are always on hand. This is accomplished at a cost for current of 17 cents, sometimes less, according to the manufacturers, depending upon the local rate for electricity. Machines having a refrigerating capacity equal to a thousand pounds of ice are being made, as well as machines small enough to be purchased in quantity by apartment house owners and leased to tenants at a rate low enough to afford them a saving in their ordinary ice bills. The device requires a gas pressure of only 10 pounds, thus avoiding danger of explosion, and it is operated without cranks, valves or springs.

What Lack of Caution Did.

TOO much care cannot be exercised by rent payers in starting fires in ranges, which have been exposed to cold weather, says the "Plumbers' Trade Journal," which proves the assertion by the accompanying photograph. The tangled mass of iron shows the result of starting a fire in a stove, in which the waterback had become frozen. The fire was kindled and the servant stepped out of the room. Had she not done so she probably would have been killed, for in less than five minutes steam had been generated under excessive pressure in the frozen heater and an explosion followed. The range was lifted from its foundation, the side of the house was blown out and part of the stove and debris were carried one hundred feet away from the building. Waterbacks do not freeze at this time of the year, but it might be well next autumn to recall the experience of the family whose stove is shown in the accompanying illustration.

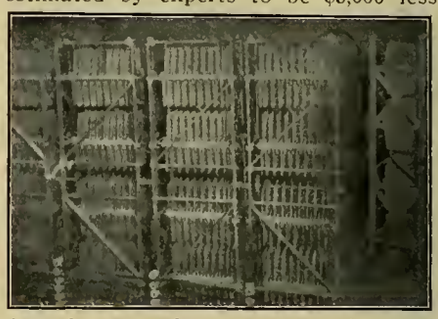
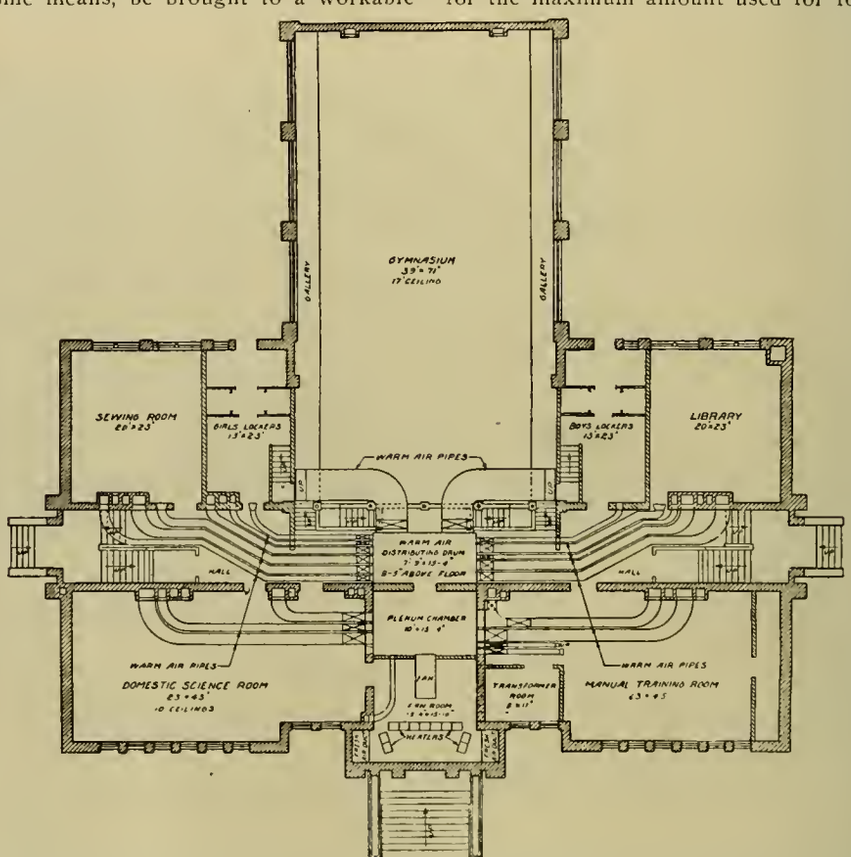
Electric Heater for School.



OPERATING on a flat rate of $1 per kilowatt a month for electricity generated from a government power plant situated fourteen miles away, it is said that the new high school at Rupert, Ohio, is demonstrating the practicability of heating its entire building by electricity at a cost considerably less than that ultimately chargeable to coal or oil when cost of delivery, handling, ash removal and cleaning are eliminated.

Of course, the success of electrical heating depends entirely upon the rate procurable from distributing power stations and in this case the power is derived from a government-owned hydraulic plant. In New York where electricity is generated from coal hauled great distances from mines, hoisted to hoppers from barges and automatically fed, where franchise rights and maintenance costs are heavy, the rate of 10 cents per kilowatt, regardless of the amount of current used, must necessarily be beyond fair comparison with the case cited, but it demonstrates to architects and builders the economic possibilities of electric heating if the rate can, by some means, be brought to a workable level. At any rate, a description of the size of the building thus heated may be of interest.



The accompanying illustrations published by courtesy of the Heating and Ventilating Magazine, gives a good idea of the heat-generating equipment and distributing system of the building. The high school is built of repressed brick and stone trim, three stories high, 65 x 111 feet with a rear extension 43 x 47 feet. Its cubical contents totals 300,000 feet. It has been called the most perfectly fire-resistive high school in the country. No fire is used anywhere within its walls. The transformer and heater room is a ventilated brick and concrete vault, yet the structure is provided with standpipes reaching every office and room and fire-fighting equipment is stationed within reach on all floors.

The heating system employed is that of the hot blast composed of 18 units, having a total capacity of 400 k.w., which allows for an overload of 100 k.w. These units are connected in pairs vertically, each pair being under the control of a separate switchboard in the principal's office. Each pair can be switched to a 220-volt circuit or a 440-volt circuit, thus giving 9 or 36 k.w. for each pair. Different degrees of temperature may be obtained by this system. The sketch shows the layout of this most unusual heating plant, and also gives a partial idea of the character of the heating problem that confronted the contractors.

The cost of the heating system is estimated by experts to be $3,000 less than the cost of any system using coal as the source of heat. The total cost of current for heating purposes for a school season, it is contended, will not exceed $1,500. In addition much room has been saved for school purposes that otherwise would have been used for boiler, heater and fuel rooms. The basis of compensation for the current has been worked out so that the school pays for the maximum amount used for four months and for each of the remaining months the school is charged for the maximum amount used at any time that month.

Checking Up Elevator Mileage.

A DEVICE is being put on the market by the Chicago Elevator Mileage Co. that checks up the mileage of elevators. It operates somewhat on the order of the speedometer on an automobile wheel. Its value lies in its capacity for determining just when to expect evidences of wear on cables and incidentally gives an accurate record daily of the performance of each car. It has, however, a much more important virtue than that. Renting agents use it to convince prospective tenants that the building is not only well occupied, but that it is a well-frequented structure. Busy elevators mean busy tenants and busy tenants are good drawing cards.

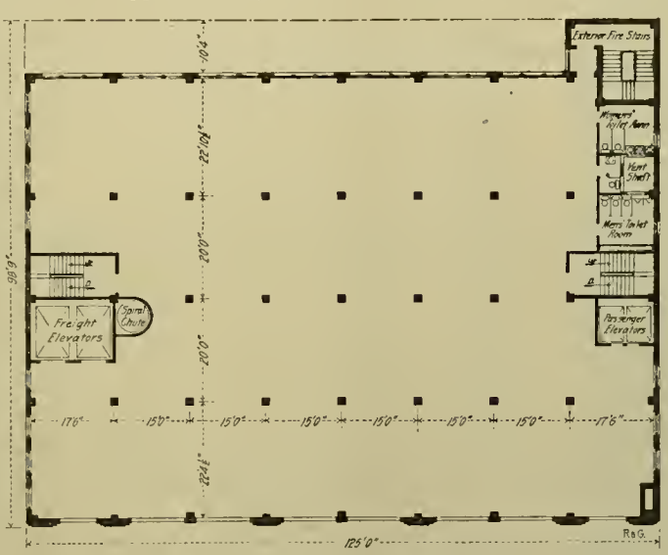
CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

Several Large Improvements in Course of Construction in the New Midtown Printing Center—Model Structures Being Erected

THE printing and lithographing and kindred trades are rapidly moving away from the section near the New York terminal of the Brooklyn Bridge, where they have conducted business for many years past. They have migrated, for the most part, into the territory bounded by 30th to 40th streets, Seventh and Tenth avenues. This district within the last few years has become the new home of many of the largest publishing houses in the city, and shows every indication of becoming the center for many years in the future of the printing and allied trades in general.

A number of the larger of these concerns have erected for themselves, or are leasing on long terms, buildings designed with a special regard to the nature of their particular business. Simultaneously with the completion of the new building for the Hill Publishing Company, at the corner of 36th street and Tenth avenue, comes the announcement of another projected building at 440 to 448 West 37th street. This will be 13 stories in height, covering a plot 125x100 feet, and will be erected from plans and specifications prepared by Hill and Stout, architects, 299 Madison avenue.

This building is to be erected for H. I. Underhill of South Orange, N. J., owner, who intends to lease it for printing, lithographing and general publishing purposes. The contract for the construction of this building has been awarded to the Whitney Company, 1 Liberty street, New York City. A peculiar coincidence in connection with the award of this contract is the fact that the first building erected for publishing purposes in this district, i. e., the David Williams Company building, at 239 West 39th street, was built in 1906 by A. R. Whitney, Jr., Company, which firm was the forerunner of the Whitney Company.



During the last week ground was broken for another building to be erected in this section. It will be at 406 to 426 West 31st street, opposite the open cut of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. This building has also been designed exclusively for occupancy by the printing industry. The architect is Edward L. Larkin, who prepared the plans and specifications for the McKeon Realty Company, 80 Maiden lane, owners and builders.

This building will be the largest of its kind in New York City, having a frontage of 250 feet, and a depth of 103 feet on the easterly line and 85 feet on the westerly line, with a floor area of 20,200 square feet. The building will be 15 stories in height, with basement and sub-basement, and will have a total floor area of approximately 325,000 square feet. On account of the extreme height of the individual floors, the building will have a total height of nearly 240 feet from curb to cornice. An estimate of the size of this project may be gained when it is known that its cubical contents will amount to approximately 4,350,000 cubic feet.

In the layout of the floors, particular attention has been devoted to planning in regard to efficiency of light and the future placement of presses and machinery. The columns have been placed about 15 feet apart, and particularly high and wide windows have been provided to permit the maximum of natural light. There will be nine electric elevators, arranged in banks of three cars each—one bank on the easterly side, one in the central portion, and one on the extreme westerly side of the building. Some of these elevators are to be used for passenger traffic exclusively, while others have been designed as combination freight and passenger cars, and will have a lifting capacity of four tons each. This building will represent an outlay of about $1,100,000, exclusive of the cost of land.

The American Book Bindery, for a number of years past located at Cherry and Rutgers streets, has leased from the plans the store, basement and first four lofts for a term of 15 years, and the rest of the lofts will be rented wholly or in part to concerns doing business in the printing line.

A third project planned for this section will be located at 344 to 348 West 38th street. This will be a modern loft structure, 13 stories in height, on a plot approximately 75x98 feet, which, from the very nature of its environment, will no roubt be tenanted by concerns in the publishing line, although no especial effort toward this end has been made in its design. The building has been planned by Edward L. Larkin, architect, 80 Maiden lane, for George Kern, owner, 496 Ninth avenue, and it will cost about $275,000.

Hill and Stout, Architects
PLAN OF NEW UNDERHILL BUILDING.

With the completion of these contemplated structures the future of this section, which has already become known as the publishing district, seems assured for many years to come.

COMPOSITION FLOORING.

With the dawn of the twentieth century new and better flooring material was introduced into the building trade of this country. Not until recent years, however, has the manufacture and laying of this material attained that degree of perfection where it can be considered a real success among leading architects and builders.

Composition flooring, as manufactured and installed today is a light weight, resilient, non-slipping, water-repelling, fire and germ-proof covering. It is laid in a plastic state in one or several colors and bonds directly to wood, metal or concrete. The material is easily installed about one-half inch thick and is trowelled to a smooth and better finish. About twenty-four hours is required for the composition to set into a monolithic mass.

While in a semi-hard condition the composition may be scored or marked to represent tiles, bricks, or marble slabs, and may be laid in colors or combinations of colors varying from almost pure white to jet black. Patterns, panels, monograms and other designs may be worked out in the floor. A sanitary cove base may be installed with composition and run into the main floor without joints or breaks. Some concerns have gone so far as to construct wainscoting and partition work with this material.

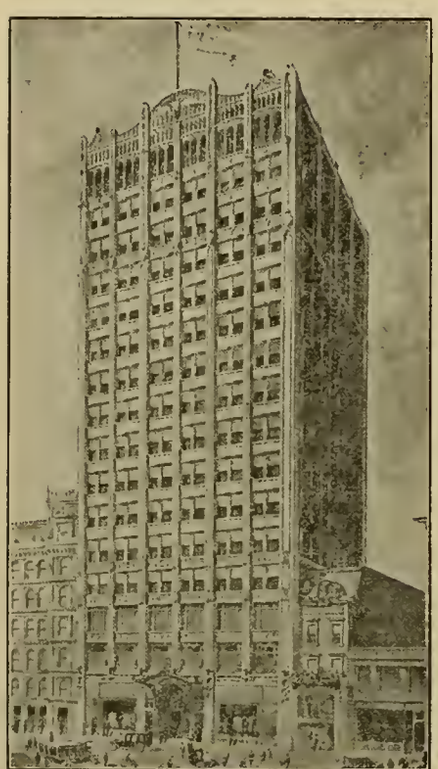
Discovered in 1853.

Composition was first discovered in 1853 by Stanislaus Sorel, a French chemist. Later a number of promoters took out patents upon certain products whose basic ingredients were the bonding materials of present-day composition, and endeavored to market the goods for exterior building construction. It was found, however, that these products had not wear-resisting properties essential for this purpose. Even today it has been found impractical to use composition for stucco work, building blocks, roofs or tanks. Germans were the first to perceive the advantages of composition for floor purposes, and the Americans followed in their footsteps. In America, until about the middle of the nineteenth century, wood formed the standard building material, and it was thought that no finer floor surface could be obtained than from tongued and grooved matched maple or oak. Even today these floors are perhaps the best obtainable for residences. City codes and insurance regulations have eliminated one after another the classes of buildings in which wooden floors might be used, and owners of large structures in many instances insist on having sanitary and fireproof flooring.

From timber, architects and builders turned to mosaic and encaustic tile; but here it was found that the floor was hard, slippery and difficult to install, especially over an old wooden foundation. Terrazzo was next offered, but objections in some instances were found to this material.

Battleship Linoleum.

Next followed battleship linoleum, and this formed the real advancement toward a solution of the problem for floors of this material, easily installed, which were resilient, water-repelling and non-slippery. Marble, cork, tile, and many other similar materials have been used; but in many instances objections have been found.



Much of the composition flooring on the market is of a cheap calibre, and it is not contended for a moment that every floor laid is a success. It can be said that this material cannot be properly installed by mechanics who have not had at least several months' experience in laying composition; in fact, most reliable firms will not ship their materials to outside contractors but will maintain their own force of experts to install floors of their own manufacture.

Some concerns lay their material in a single operation, while others install it in two or more layers. The under sections in the latter instance consist of binding ingredients and fillers, while the top section only contains the better ingredients. Some composition flooring companies also lay their material over metal lath to obtain reinforcement and to hold the composition for the foundation. The method of the Troegerlith Tile Company consists of driving zinc floor nails into a wooden foundation, about six inches apart, leaving the heads protrude about one-half an inch. Composition bonds readily to wood, and it is contended by this company that the metal lath breaks rather than assists this bond, while, if zinc nails are used, the material may be grouted over the nails and into the wood. Moreover, it is a known fact that the acids in the composition have a tendency to corrode the metal lath, while they do not affect zinc nails.

New Loft in Fourth Avenue Section.

The contract was awarded last week for the erection of a new 16-story store and loft building at 30 to 38 East 33d street, from plans by M. E. Rountree, architect, of 3 East 44th street. The structure will immediately adjoin the Park Avenue Hotel and will cover a plot approximately 85 x 100 feet. The building will be fireproof in the most modern sense of the term, constructed of brick with hollow tile partitions, with a front of white glazed terra cotta of modified Gothic design.

M. E. Rountree, Architect.

The building will contain four electric passenger elevators and be equipped with a sprinkler system. The general design and layout of this building will permit of its being used for light manufacturing or office purposes, and it is so arranged that any tenant may have any desired amount of floor space. This operation, which will cost in the neighborhood of $425,000, is to be built by the Altoria Realty & Construction Co., general contractors, 3 East 44th street, for George A. Wheelock, owner, 3 West 86th street, who has been in possession of this property for about twenty years.

—Concrete highways are giving a good account of themselves. The village of Saugerties, N. Y., built a mile of road four years ago, half of concrete and the balance macadam. At the end of two years' service the latter half was completely rebuilt. The concrete road remains in perfect condition.

—Considerable building is going on along the Sea Beach Line, in the Eastern Parkway section, and on Nostrand avenue between Eastern Parkway and Flatbush avenue.

INTERPRETING LABOR LAWS.

The Industrial Board Makes Important Concession to Property Owners.

The Real Estate Board of New York, which has been persistently bringing to the attention of the State Labor Department such provisions of the labor laws affecting factories as it believes to be unreasonable, obtained this week an important interpretation of the law on a point which is of particular interest to owners of buildings.

The labor laws (section 79-e, sub-division 2) provides for occupancy of floors in factories. Occupancy is based on 14 persons to the floor for every 18 inches in width of stairway provided for such floor, and conforming to the requirements of a "required means of exit." Greater width than 18 inches allows a proportionate increase in occupancy. A building must have two required means of exit.

The Real Estate Board brought to the attention of the Industrial Board the point that when one of these required means of exit is a stairway and one a fire-escape, not only the stairway but the fire-escape should be included in computing the number of persons permitted to occupy a given floor. The board some weeks ago, through its counsel, George W. Olvany, asked for an interpretation from the Industrial Board and this week J. J. Flood, Chief Factory Inspector, replied as follows:

> "In reply to the inquiry contained in your letter of the 13th inst., I would state that this department will be obliged to take into account the width of the fire-escape in computing the occupancy of any building, provided, however, that said fire-escape complies with the provisions of section 79-b, relating to fire-escapes, service as required means of exit."

The Industrial Board upon the solicitation of the Real Estate Board and Abram I. Elkus, chief counsel for the State Factory Investigating Commission, is also considering the order frequently issued to fireproof windows on the course of fire-escapes not serving as required means of exit. On this point the Industrial Board has fixed public hearings for July 7 and 8.

Owners of factories have been troubled with two other orders of the Labor Department which are not likely to be enforced. One of these is an order to fireproof windows within 8 feet in a horizontal or oblique line of any part of fire-escape, balconies or stairs. The other is to fireproof all windows within ten feet in a vertical line of any part of fire-escape balconies or stairs.

Diligent search of the labor laws by Mr. Olvany revealed no section or subdivision that required this, the only requirement being that "all windows opening upon the course of the fire-escape shall be fireproof windows" (section 79-b, subdivision 4).

Inquiry at the Industrial Board brought out the fact that no official ruling on these two points had been made, but that they were orders issued by the Labor Commissioner. The position taken by the Real Estate Board on these two points is that owners are to be held only to requirements of the labor law and rulings by the Industrial Board.

SUBWAY PROGRESS.

Contracts About to Be Let—Tracks for Fourth Avenue Line.

Bids have been opened for the work of installing the tracks in the Fourth avenue subway in Brooklyn. The contract calls for the laying of tracks from the Manhattan Bridge, along Flatbush avenue extension, as a four and eight-track railroad, to a point near Willoughby street; thence as a four-track railroad along Flatbush avenue extension, Fulton street and Ashland place to Fourth avenue; thence as a four-track railroad along Fourth avenue to a point near 65th street; thence as a two-track railroad along Fourth avenue to a point near 86th street; including all turn-outs and junctions within these limits. The city will furnish rails, splice bars, spikes, tie plates, ballast, etc., and the contractor will be required to install the same, but will not furnish electrical or signal material or apparatus. On the official totals the Thomas Crimmins Contracting Company was the lowest bidder, at $212,880.

The form of contract for the construction of Section No. 1 of Route No. 12 has been approved and bids will be opened Tuesday, June 16, at 12:15 o'clock. Route No. 12 is the Eastern Parkway subway, and Section No. 1 begins at the present terminus of the existing subway, at Atlantic and Flatbush avenues, Brooklyn, and runs thence under Flatbush avenue to a point about 274 feet southeast of St. Marks avenue, where it joins Section No. 1A, the contract for which has already been awarded.

The Public Service Commission has adopted the form of contract for the construction of Section No. 7 of Route No. 5, the Lexington avenue subway in Manhattan, and authorized the chairman and secretary to advertise for bids thereunder, to be opened Friday, June 12, at 12:15 o'clock. Section No. 7 begins near the southerly line of 43d street and extends northerly under Lexington avenue to a point about 50 feet north of the center line of 53d street. North of the latter point the Lexington avenue subway is entirely under contract.

Bids for the construction of the proposed crosstown subway in Canal street are under consideration by the Public Service Commission. This is known as Section No. 2 of Route No. 20. The plans call for a two-track subway from the Manhattan end of the Manhattan Bridge through Canal street to a junction with the Broadway subway. This line will pass under the existing subway and the Centre street loop subway, and will have a deep station running from Centre street almost to Broadway. It will be operated by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation and used to bring the trains coming over the Manhattan Bridge into the Broadway subway. This will be a difficult piece of work, and will take about 32 months to complete. On account of the swampy character of the ground the commission asked for bids on two different kinds of plans—one according to the usual method of excavating and building the subway structure in the cut, and the other by providing cast iron tunnels for a portion of the route. The lowest bidder for the usual method of construction was the Underpinning & Foundation Company, at $1,822,994.25, while the Degnon Contracting Company was the lowest bidder for the method including iron tunnels, at $2,438,258.

Bids for the construction of Section No. A1 of Routes Nos. 4 and 38, the Seventh avenue subway in Manhattan, will be opened by the Public Service Commission on June 9 at 12:15 o'clock. This section covers the connection between the new Seventh avenue subway and the existing subway at the Battery. It will involve work similar to that to be done at the Times Square junction, although, on account of the difference in location and the fact that an open park covers the subway at the Battery, the difficulty will not be as great. The work involves the building of a new station opposite the present station at South Ferry.

Monthly Price Table Shows
Few Changes—General Outlook

JUNE opens with building materials in a stronger position, generally speaking, than they have been at any time so far this year. Based upon the current prices of the sixteen basic building materials approved by the Bureaus of Buildings in the metropolitan district, the index number for the 1st of June shows a gain of .811 over that of May 1, when the index number figured out to 3.515. On June 1, 1913, the index number worked out to 5.001, which, when compared with 4.326 for the first of the current month, shows that the state of the building materials market is only .675 below that of last June, which was a month showing an increase in basic building material requirements of 5 per cent. above a ten-year normal.

The weak departments in the current building material situation are Portland cement, certain grades of building lumber, structural steel and petroleum products entering the manufacture of paints. In each case cited, however, there is a strengthening tone. Shading is not being resorted to so extensively. Especially is this so in structural steel. The stiffening in the demand for basic pig iron is having its effect upon current steel orders calling for late summer and early fall delivery. Common brick, terra cotta fireproofing and facade materials, building stone, linseed oil, plaster, lime, sand, crushed stone, timber, pig iron and flashing material all are firming and are getting back nearer to list quotations, which is the best possible indication that there is a slight change for the better actually under way.

It is not such a far cry from June to harvesting time, when the moving of crops means a heavy demand upon the freight car reserves of the country. The producer of building materials knows that the dealers have been working along on hand-to-mouth supplies, and soon will be forced to replenish in order to be able to insure prompt shipments to his contractor. If a car shortage develops within the next sixty days it is natural to ask how the dealer is going to deliver on time, and so, being in a little more independent position, the distributor is not inclined to share his profits to induce the dealer to come into the market early as he was a month ago.

Manufacturers' outputs will not be large this year in any department. A survey of producers of basic building materials coming into this market shows that in no case is production running beyond 60 per cent. of full time capacity. Apparently other lines are taking their cue from that of steel, which is operating on a 60 per cent. basis. At the recent meeting of the National Manufacturers' Association here it was openly stated that it was the generally accepted policy of practically all lines to keep their production down to actual market requirements — at least until business picks up sufficiently to warrant a change in policy.

New building plan filings for the five boroughs in the week closing Thursday, June 4, show a slight decrease in totals and values over those of last week:

	Week Ending
	No.	May 28	No.	June 4

General Improvement In This Line Continues.

ADVICES from steel and iron centers in New York indicate no change from the trend of improvement that has recently come into this department. Basic pig iron is still attracting a number of purchases, there being about 22,000 tons on inquiry this week for this district, making the total tonnage pending in the territory east of Buffalo about 40,000 tons, namely for shipment over the second half of the year. In the New York metropolitan district contracts for buildings pending call for about 8,000 tons of steel. Conspicuous among these, as reported by fabricators, is 350 tons for the Astor apartments at 305-317 West 45th street; about 350 tons for a factory building at 240 West 53d street; about 3,000 tons for the Alan Realty Co.'s 12-story loft building at 134-142 West 37th street. About 2,400 tons for the new Astor apartment at 89th and 90th streets and Broadway went to the Hinkle Iron Works, instead of to the Hay Foundry & Iron Works, as incorrectly reported last week. In this case the steel is about to be delivered.

PORTLAND CEMENT.

Much Shading of Prices—Yard Business Slightly Better.

YARD business in the Portland cement market promises to give the month of June a better record, so far as quantity is concerned, than was accorded to May, or, in fact, to any month so far this year. The gradual improvement in building activity has prompted dealers to replenish stocks which they have kept low pending an improvement in demand, but undoubtedly price shading has encouraged it.

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

NEW YORK, JUNE 13, 1914

THE INSPECTION PLAGUE AND HOW TO STOP IT

How the State Authorities Regard the Situation—Not the Laws But the Administration of Them Is Blamed.

By ABRAM I. ELKUS
Counsel of the State Factory Investigating Commission

In response to a request made by The Real Estate Record and Guide for a statement as to the workings of the laws which have been passed by the Legislature with reference to alterations in buildings and requirements as to occupancy, in order to ensure safety in case of fire in buildings occupied as factories, Mr. Abram I. Elkus, Counsel for the New York State Factory Investigating Commission, made the following statement:

A LITTLE over three years ago the Triangle Waist Company fire occurred. One hundred and forty-seven lives were lost in that single factory fire in a so-called fireproof loft building. Naturally this caused a searching investigation by the State. The result was this significant undisputed finding: that for decades we have been erecting factory buildings, some of which were occupied by hundreds and even by thousands, of employes and had paid but scant attention to providing sufficient means of exit for those occupants in case of fire. In other words, the life hazard was practically ignored.

The Factory Investigating Commission, which was created by the Legislature, not only investigated the subject of fire hazard, but the far more important subjects, perhaps, of sanitary conditions and preservation of the health of the worker—important alike for the employer and the employe.

After a careful investigation the Factory Commission prepared a number of bills, among others, by which it was hoped to secure safety to the factory workers in case of fire. Wide publicity was given to these proposed measures and they were under consideration for several months; some of them for over a year. They were first issued in tentative form, widely distributed all over New York State, and were discussed at public hearings and in conferences. Although direct appeal was made to the real estate interests, but little concern appeared to be taken by them in the matter, but a committee of the real estate interests (consisting of two prominent gentlemen) approved of the bills as they were passed. These proposed laws were changed and amended to meet the suggestions and criticisms offered. Every witness who was called to testify to facts before the commission was permitted to be cross-examined by anyone who desired, and any witness who desired to make statements was permitted to do so.

Is There Too Much Inspection?

Now that these laws are being enforced, and at the same time old laws which for many years had been practically dead letters are also being enforced, some real estate owners feel that a heavy burden has been placed upon them by the new laws, but more especially that there is too much inspection of their premises by different departments of the city and State.

Of course, wherever structural changes are required in a building which cost some money, naturally those affected will consider it a burden, but the fact remains that many of these buildings in which structural changes are now required were permitted to be erected without regard to safety in case of fire. Many thousands of buildings are being occupied as factories where a number of people are employed, which were never erected for that purpose. Far-sighted real estate owners realize, however, that the changes required by the law, while in many cases numerous, are necessary. It has been said that the law should not apply to low buildings because they do not prevent any fire hazard. We have only to consider the Binghamton fire of last year (a building of four stories) where many lost their lives, to realize that while the fire hazard may be less in a low building it still exists, and to an alarming extent. Due allowance has been made for low buildings, as they are exempted from some of the most costly requirements; for example, the enclosure of stairways. The tenement house fire at 90 Essex street, which occurred on June 10, 1914, where eight lives were lost, is an illustration of the danger in low buildings. It is true this was a tenement house, but it was only a five-story building. It also illustrates the necessity of one of the laws which was enacted on the recommendation of the Factory Commission; that is, doing away with the storing of rubbish on the premises.

Duplication of Inspection Admitted.

It is gratifying to note that for the most part the property owner and the employer do not object to the new laws. They do object—and properly—to the multiplicity of inspections where they could be avoided and to the conflicting orders which they claim are issued by different departments of the city and State government. Of course, the complaints in this regard are naturally exaggerated, but that there is duplication of inspection which may be unnecessary and a giving of orders piecemeal, is apparent, and these should be done away with altogether. I do not believe there are many contradictory orders. From investigation by the commission it is clear that a little common sense in the administration of the laws would eliminate this harassing condition of affairs.

It should be made clear that the Factory Investigating Commission did not propose the law which created the Fire Prevention Bureau of the Fire Department of the City of New York.

Administration Difficulties.

Most of the trouble complained about is in the administration of the various laws. This can be practically done away with without any legislation. All of the city departments are under the control of the Mayor and the Borough President. Undoubtedly they would be glad to work together in harmony, and by so doing would do away with a great deal of the multiplicity of inspections and with any conflict of orders between city departments. I happen to know, from meetings with various officials that they are working along these lines. Legislation to accomplish this end cannot be relied upon altogether. This is made clear by what has happened with reference to the bakeries in New York City.

Two years ago there was a division of responsibility as to these establishments between the Labor Department and the Health Department of the City of New York. To do away with this the Factory Commission recommended to the Legislature that the Health Department of the City of New York be given sole and exclusive control over conditions in bakeries in that city. Legislation was enacted to carry this out. It has now been reported that the Health Department of New York City alone sends three different inspectors into the bakeries, one a medical inspector, another to inspect food stuffs and a third for the purpose of inspecting sanitary conditions. Of course, a little common sense would avoid most, if not all, of this. The doctor might make all three inspections. To do this needs only a direction from his superior.

Plans for Relief.

The Factory Commission is now carefully considering a plan which it hopes will eliminate the complaints as to the administration of the law and the troubles complained of. To that end conferences have been held with the jurisdiction over the inspection of buildings. It was tentatively agreed that there should be a conference held with the heads of these departments to ascertain whether inspections of the same property by different departments could not be in most cases dispensed with and thus guard against the issuing of what might be deemed conflicting orders. The results of such a scheme of co-operation will soon be ascertained. If

Such conferences may result in the different departments so standardizing their inspections that one department may rely on the other's reports. It may mean the merging of some of the present departments, or the elimination of some departments of the city government. All these requirements apply to existing buildings and mostly affect buildings which are not new. The buildings erected in the last five years are practically not affected by any of these new laws at all. As to future buildings, no complaint is made as to requirements as to their safety.

The Factory Commission naturally desires to have the workings of the statutes made as simple and as light a burden as possible upon all concerned, and is only too glad to co-operate with the real estate owners and others to that end. For that purpose, among others, there will be a series of hearings by the commission, beginning June 22 next, to consider the proposed recodification of the Labor Law. There all interested will be given full opportunity to be heard and to present suggestions. If there are any cases where the new laws work undue hardship or are unfair or unreasonable, those cases should be then brought to the attention of the commission, or privately, if desired, to the chairman of the commission or its counsel. If changes are made necessary by reason of these facts, they can be recommended to the next Legislature. Suggestions should be there made.

Every public-spirited citizen realizes that the first duty of the commission is to safeguard life and to take all reasonable means to do this, and practically every real estate owner has this same feeling, and the only question is the method of doing this with the least possible expense and trouble to the property owner, and that is the purpose and the guiding spirit of the commission.

WEST SIDE SUBWAY EXTENSION URGED

Citizens of Upper Manhattan Moving in the Matter—Mass Meeting Adopts Resolutions and Suggests a Route.

THE population of Washington Heights has increased by very rapid strides since the opening of the subway in 1904. A scantily populated district, with a total of 15,000 inhabitants, has grown until it now has poll lists showing a voting strength of 26,000, corresponding to a population of 130,000 inhabitants.

The traffic capacity of the Broadway division of the subway system has long been overtaxed, and the increasing inconvenience, indecency and danger resulting therefrom has brought about an intolerable situation, which can be relieved only by some additional means of conveying the growing population to and from the lower part of the city.

The opening of the Lexington avenue subway cannot be regarded as a means of relieving the situation in this respect, because the Bronx is growing at a more rapid rate than any other part of the city.

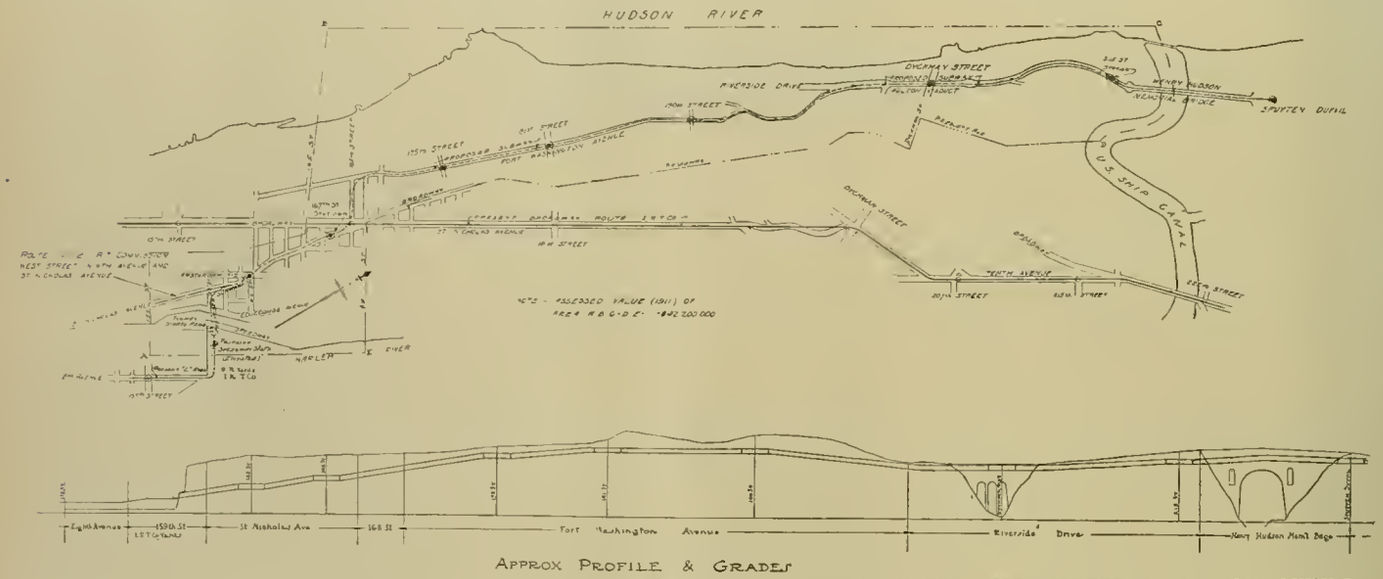
Retarded Development.

A considerable part of upper Manhattan, including the Fort Washington ridge and Inwood Hill, is without means of access to the subway, and a great area of extraordinarily valuable property is retarded in development, and its assessable value is maintained at a low level on this account. The Manhattan Elevated Railway system on the Ninth avenue division is believed to be capable of a larger amount of traffic than it sustains at present, and presents the largest immediate potential possibilities of increase of any existing railroad, due to the third-tracking which has been recently authorized.

A Fort Washington avenue subway, as an extension of the elevated system from Eighth avenue and 155th street, has been proposed as a means of ready, economical and effective relief to Washington Heights, and as providing a development of a most important part of the borough of Manhattan.

The Route.

A map prepared by Reginald Pelham Bolton, C. E., shows the route favored. It begins as an elevated structure. There will be stations on the new line at 162d and 167th streets on Amsterdam avenue, and at 175th and 181st streets on Fort Washington avenue. The grade will not be more than 3 per cent., and no stations will be on a curve. The cost of construction up to 181st street, a distance of one mile, is estimated by Mr. Bolton at $3,000,000. From 181st street to Spuyten Duyvil is a distance of one and one-half miles. For the entire distance the route is on city property, and considerable sections are represented by the extension of Riverside Drive, Memorial Bridge and the viaduct. The assessed valuation of the real estate in the area to be served exceeded $42,000,000 in the year 1911.



Citizens in Mass Meeting.

A mass meeting in the interest of this project was held last evening at Public School 132, in West 182d street, at St. Nicholas avenue, under the auspices of the following named associations: The Washington Heights Taxpayers', the Dyckman Tract Taxpayers', the North Manhattan, the Northwestern Bronx and the Park Protective League. Addresses were delivered by representatives of the various bodies, and Mr. Bolton exhibited stereopticon views and working drawings and explained the whole project. At the close the meeting adopted resolutions offered by H. H. Dreyer heartily endorsing the application for the Fort Washington subway extension and urging the Public Service Commission to grant an immediate hearing on the adoption of the route.

Playing Fair With Property Owners.

The present city administration has given evidence from time to time that it wishes to give property owners a square deal. One of the tax commissioners recently stated in public meeting that it would be the policy of the heads of departments to meet with property owners' associations frequently and get their point of view, with the hope of establishing confidence and doing justice. He said any property owner dissatisfied with the valuation placed upon his premises for taxation purposes could make application to the Tax Department in a direct manner, with the assurance of fair treatment.

For this purpose the department has prepared a form to be filled out, the most essential part of which, after giving the location, size and character of the building, is the answer to a question as to the price paid for the property by the present owner. It is not required that the statement be sworn to, and the assurance is given that no improper use will be made of the information so obtained. The law requires that all real estate shall be assessed at its full and true value, and the price paid is evidence of the value at the time.

PHASES OF WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW

Many Interesting Conditions May Arise If Law Is Found To Be Unconstitutional—Employers Must Be Careful How Risks Are Placed.

By A. P. NEWTON

THE Workmen's Compensation Law purports to designate specific employments which are declared to be hazardous, and to which the law shall apply. The consequence is, that while the law, in the language used in the digest of the New York State Insurance Department, covers practically all employers engaged in transportation, construction, manufacturing and other industries that are conducted for profit and gain (except domestic service, farm labor, and state, county and municipal employes), there will be many (a) employments which cannot be definitely determined to be included or excluded; many (b) "duties and services" performed by employes in employments covered, which services and duties will not be covered; (c) services and duties in "doubtful employments," which duties and services, under some circumstances, will be covered and under others not; and (d) services and duties in employments clearly not covered, which particular duties and services will be covered.

Obviously, there will be thousands of claims for "compensation," arising out of upwards of one hundred thousand accidents annually, which cannot be determined to be covered or not covered until the Compensation Commission, in all doubtful cases, and the courts, in many cases, has definitely decided as to each.

How to Get Full Protection.

Hence an employer cannot be fully protected unless he insures under a policy which covers both Employers' Negligence Liability and Workmen's Compensation Liability, because cases will arise in designated employments where the workman is not entitled to compensation and will sue for damages, in which event the employer who carries compensation insurance only will not be protected; other accidents will occur in employments, where the employer, believing the law does not apply to his business, will not carry compensation insurance, and in that event, should the Compensation Commission determine the accident to be covered by the law, the employer will find he is liable for compensation, against which liability he has no compensation insurance; and secondly, he will he liable for a heavy penalty for having failed, as required by the law, to insure the employe under the Compensation Law.

The employer who elects to insure in a stock or mutual company should be certain that his policy covers both—negligence liability and compensation law liability; the employer who insures in the State Fund which has no authority to insure anything but workmen's compensation liability, is without protection as to possible negligence liability in cases where the injured workman is not entitled to compensation.

It is understood that stock and mutual companies will issue only one form of policy; namely, a policy which covers both workmen's compensation liability and employers' negligence liability.

Another peculiar feature of the law is that it declares absolutely void every liability insurance policy (except forms which expressly exclude accidents to employes) unless it covers workmen's compensation liability. Apparently the intent of the Legislature was to prevent the liability companies from protecting an employer, to whom the law applies, who endeavored to evade insuring his employes. But this clause of the law is so worded that an elevator liability policy, or a general liability policy, or an automobile liability policy, or a team liability policy, or any other form which does not exclude liability for accidents to employes, must also cover workmen's compensation liability or be absolutely void. It is a question for courts to determine whether it will be void as to both employe accidents and public accidents, or only as to accidents to employes.

The Workmen's Compensation Law took effect January 1, but the application of the chapter as between employer and employe, and the payment of compensation for injuries will not take effect until July 1. An analysis of the law will be found in the Record and Guide of December 20, 1913. In case of total disability adjudged to be permanent, 66 2-3 per centum of the average weekly wages of the injured person will be paid by the employer during the continuance of the disability, and for lesser injuries the same rate, but for stated periods. A number of mutual insurance companies have been organized by employers, who are listed in groups, so as to offset in a measure the extra expenditure.

This would seem to create a potent reason why an employer, or any insurer, under a liability policy, should insist upon a form which covers both liability to employes under the Employers' Liability Laws and liability to employes under the Workmen's Compensation law.

The Question of Constitutionality.

It is by no means certain that this entire law may not be declared to be unconstitutional; in fact, several lawyers have expressed opinions that the law is unconstitutional because "it is class legislation," and "does not carry out the intention of the constitutional amendment authorizing it," namely, that employes in all hazardous work should be protected.

This contingency creates the greatest menace to the employer, because if he assumes that it is unconstitutional and does not insure his workmen against compensation liability, in the event that the constitutionality of the law is upheld by the courts, he is not only liable for workmen's compensation to the employes injured, but he is also liable for an added penalty of 50 per cent. of the indemnity for having failed to pay it when due. The new law provides that after July 1 any employer of labor who has failed to provide for insurance protection, of a nature acceptable to the Insurance Commission, will be subject to a fine of the pro rata premium charged for the State Fund for a period which he is without insurance.

If he insured in the State Fund, paid his premiums, the money has been paid out in claims and expenses, there is no possibility of getting it back, and he loses that. In addition, each injured employe can bring suit for damages based on negligence, the same as if the Compensation Law had not been enacted; and if damages and costs are recovered, the loss falls on the employer alone, because the State Fund can insure only workmen's compensation liability and affords no protection against damage suits as to either verdicts or costs.

If he is a self-insurer, he will be in exactly the same position as if insured in the State Fund, that is—he has paid money for workmen's compensation claims and now has to pay more to defend damage suits and to settle verdicts for damages and costs awarded in such suits.

If he is insured by an insurance company, his position may be equally grave. The stock companies and mutuals, in order to minimize their rates to compete with the State Fund, will have to charge a premium sufficient to cover only the workmen's compensation liability, which is all that the State Fund insures and charges for; a stock or mutual company, having charged rates barely sufficient to cover the workmen's compensation payments and having paid out the money in losses and expenses, will have small margin of premiums left to defend suits for damages and pay damages and costs awarded.

The mutual company will have to do one of two things: levy a sufficient assessment upon the employers to pay these damages and costs, in which case the employer would be paying double premium—or liquidate and leave each employer to pay the damages and costs of his negligence suits.

Strength of Stock Companies.

If the employer be insured in a stock company, it probably has a capital and surplus sufficient to pay the double loss, out of which it must pay the same. Consequently, unless the losses from the damage suits amount to enough, which would be unlikely, to wipe out the capital and surplus of the company, the employer would not suffer because he has paid the stipulated premium for full protection and cannot be called upon to pay assessments. A stock company must pay to the full extent of its resources, including capital and surplus, the full amount of loss, which thus falls upon the stockholders and not upon the employers.

Opinions are expressed that Section 55, providing that an employer who insures in the State Fund shall thereby become relieved from all liability for workmen's compensation, is unconstitutional, because "it discriminates against the workmen of employers who are insured in the State Fund, in that it deprives them of 'recourse to the employer' while it does not deprive of 'recourse to the employer' the workmen whose employers insured otherwise;" and, also because, "in the event that the State Fund should be exhausted by a catastrophe (which, during the first few years before it has accumulated a large catastrophe reserve, is a possibility), the workman of employers insured in the State Fund would, after its exhaustion, be deprived of any indemnity whatsoever, hence would be deprived of common law and statutory rights of action for damages, without consideration."

The difficulty as to this particular condition is that the point probably will not be tried out until the State Fund is exhausted by some catastrophe and is unable to meet the payments due disabled workmen and the dependents of deceased workmen. Then such claimants will bring suits against their employers for the balance of the indemnity, contending that this clause is unconstitutional, and if their contention is sustained by the courts, the employers will not only be obliged to pay the indemnity but will also have to pay the costs of the action, in addition to the premiums paid to the fund.

TAX SURVEYS IN CITIES OF NEW YORK STATE

Report of Committee on Taxation Delivered Last Week at Auburn Recommends Tax Maps and True Considerations to Be Given in Deeds.

THE following is an excerpt from the report of the Committee on Taxation delivered at Auburn, N. Y., on June 4th. The Committee consisted of the Hon. Lawson Purdy, F. H. Waldorf and George A. Brock:

The Committee on Taxation appointed at the last conference for the purpose of ascertaining the problems confronting the assessors in the various cities and to recommend such changes in legislation or administration as seem desirable, makes this report.

Edward L. Heydecker was made chairman of the committee and under his able supervision and direction a questionaire was prepared and sent to the assessors of each city in the State requesting prompt reply to the questions asked in as full detail as possible and requesting suggestions for improvement in the present system. Unfortunately, Mr. Heydecker was stricken down while this work was under way and the committee lost his valuable help. His death later made a vacancy and Mr. Lawson Purdy was substituted.

The questions dealt entirely with the assessment of real and personal property and the answers indicate that the work of the assessors in the cities in the State of New York is as good if not better than in any other State. It is gratifying to know that the difficult task of laying the burdens of taxation equitably is being conducted with so much intelligence under existing conditions. The committee does not wish to be understood as holding that all that might be desired is embodied in the administration of the assessment machinery in the various cities, and this report will point out some of the more important matters for consideration.

In some particulars improvements can be made by the assessors themselves—by changes in methods; in others the local authorities have it in their power better to equip the assessors, and in still other points legislation may be desirable.

The questionaire contained seventy-one questions, twenty of which dealt with the equipment of the assessors, such as field books and the method of using them, and tax maps and their use. Twenty-two questions dealt with real estate valuations and methods, and twenty-three dealt with personal property valuations and methods of assessing.

The assessors of forty-six of the fifty-one cities in the State replied, answering the questions frankly in so far as the desired information was available.

Tax Maps.

In twenty cities the assesors are provided with tax maps, one uses an insurance map and twenty-four do not have maps. The one question which seemed to be answered unanimously was, "Would a tax map help you in your work?" Forty said it would—one said probably it would. Not one answered otherwise. Some of the answers were "it would be a wonderful help," "could not get along without it," "a very great help," "most assuredly," "invaluable," "it is essential," "would not be without it," "certainly would." In the suggestions for improving the system, six offer tax maps as one of the improvements that should be instituted.

The State Board of Tax Commissioners admirably stated the reasons for tax maps in their report for 1911, as follows:

"There is a strong tendency toward the adoption of these maps in various localities throughout the State, and we believe that such course would accomplish a decided advance toward correct assessments. It would afford an official description by reference to such maps, which would greatly lessen the chances of mistake or error which exist when the local assessor is required to make the description, which is often based upon insufficient or misleading data. There are localities in which some lands have produced no taxes for years, for the reason that they have been overlooked by the assessors. This condition could not exist if maps were used, because every portion of the map would necessarily be accounted for in some manner. Many of the cities and incorporated villages of the State are now using maps."

"Another argument in favor of tax maps is that their use eliminates all question as to the sufficiency of a description. Many assessments have been set aside by the courts for the reason that the description did not properly identify the property assessed. Whether a particular description is sufficient can be determined to a certainty only by the courts. There would be no uncertainty if proper tax maps were issued.

"We have yet to learn of any locality which has established the use of tax maps that is not so thoroughly satisfied that there is no thought of returning to the antiquated plan which often produces long and inaccurate descriptions."

The Form of Tax Maps.

The form of tax maps depends somewhat upon the size and character of the city and upon the amount of money available for the preparation of the maps. For any system the city should be divided into sections, the sections into blocks, and the blocks into the separately assessed parcels of real estate, known as lots. The sections should be numbered consecutively from one up, and the blocks should be numbered consecutively from one up, or at least consecutively within each section. If the latter system is employed and the number of blocks in a section is less than one hundred the blocks in section 1 may be designated by the numbers from one up, and in section two the first block may be designated block number two hundred and the remaining blocks in the section numbered consecutively from two hundred. By using this system the number of the block will always determine the section in which it is located.

The boundaries of sections and blocks should always be of a permanent character, such as streets permanently located on the city map or waterways. The boundaries of sections and of blocks should never be changed unless the changes become absolutely necessary.

"If tax maps are not used, can you be certain that all real property is on the assessment roll?" was one of the questions asked. Twelve say frankly they are not certain; one was fairly certain; thirteen were certain that all property was assessed. The next question was "How do you know?" Of the thirteen who answered yes, four said they knew by visiting each parcel, six knew because they checked the roll from their field book, one knew because he had been the assessor before and had measured all of the lots, one depended on the registry of deeds, one did careful work.

Many who have tax maps and did not realize that they need not answer this question, said they were certain because they check off all property on the map.

Field Book.

In forty-three cities the assessors use field books; two do not; twenty-two note in more or less detail the considerations which appear in deeds, mortgages which are placed upon property, the rent of the property, and the asking and selling prices which come to their knowledge and any special condition surrounding the property. All of these facts are important, if not essential, to proper assessment work and it is to be regretted that in twenty-one cities the field book is used for no other purpose than noting, merely, the changes in the names of owners as they occur from time to time. Under Section Thirty of the Tax Law, as it now stands, in cities which have adopted tax maps, reference to the lot, block or section numbers on the map is a sufficient description of the parcel in the assessment roll. So that while changes in ownership should be noted, the best use is not being made of a field book where this is its sole purpose.

A field book should be arranged so as to show the name of the owner of the property, the size of the lot, the size of the house, the number of stories of the house, the number of houses on the tax lot, the house number and the lot number, while the heading should show the section and block numbers and the street. There should be two columns for land value, so that the values for two years may be before the assessor. There should be about six columns for the total assessments for as many years. There should be a column for conveyances, one for mortgages, and a further column for remarks.

In thirteen cities the assessors make up the assessment roll geographically either by lot and block system or consecutively along the streets. Thirty-two follow the alphabetical arrangement of the names of the owners of property in the city. As the assessment work must necessarily be done by proceeding consecutively along the streets, it would appear that thirteen cities have taken the easiest and most logical method of making the roll. All students of assessment work are agreed that a geographical assessment roll is the most logical. It makes comparison of assessments easier and tends to result in that equality which is the aim of all assessors.

Unit System.

Twenty-seven cities use the unit system in assessing lots; that is, the value per front foot in a given street is determined and then by simple mathematics the value of the various lots is determined by multiplying the width of the particular lot by the value of the front foot unit. Two other cities also use this method to some extent. Four cities use the value of a square foot as the unit. The assessors of the other cities do not report any rule. Here again students of assessments agree that the unit system is the best plan, as it is the only one which admits of convenient comparison of values throughout the city.

Eight cities of the State have lots of the uniform depth of one hundred feet, five either one hundred and thirty or one hundred and thirty-two feet, four—one hundred and twenty feet, and two—one hundred and fifty feet. Where these standard lots exist it is possible to use a rule for determining the value of lots which happen to be longer or shorter than standard by using a table worked out in percentages of standard size and computing the value of the longer or shorter lots by multiplying by the percentage. Fourteen cities use such a rule; two use the Hoffman-Neill rule; two use the Somers rule; one uses a combination of the various rules which were worked out after a consultation with the City Engineer and members of the Board of Assessors; three cities have worked out special rules which fit local conditions, and three cities do not state what their rule is.

The assessors of six cities keep records of the sizes of buildings; thirty-eight do not. Your committee recommends to the assessors of the cities of the State that they employ a system which will furnish them with ready information in this particular as soon as feasible. All buildings should be measured and the sizes recorded.

In the determination of value what can be a better guide than the knowledge of what is paid for property when sold? True there are forced sales which do not indicate at all the true value, and there are at times reasons why one man in a peculiar situation may pay more than a property may be worth, but taking it by and large there cannot be a better indication of the value of property than what willing buyers, who do not have to buy, will pay, and what willing sellers, who do not have to sell, will take for property.

It is safe to say that the great bulk of the transfers comply with the last condition. These actual prices, however, are hidden from the assessor under the nominal figures $1.00 and other valuable considerations. The assessor is charged with the duty of determining the values of property and is precluded from the best information possible to guide him in his work.

In their suggestion for improvement in the system, seven cities want the true consideration in deeds, or at least the information as to the actual consideration at the time of recording.

State legislation should be demanded to make it possible for the assessors to have this "best of all" guide to values.

Objection has been raised to such a law on the ground that the assessor will be misled if he takes the true consideration in every case. The committee has faith that the intelligence and sound discretion of the assessors will lead them to ignore the exceptional cases and give due weight to the evidence furnished by the actual considerations for transfers.

The State Board of Tax Commissioners in its report for 1911 has set forth very effectively the reasons for the requirement that true considerations be disclosed to the assessors, saying:

"The corner-stone of the structure is a correct valuation by the local assessors. The general range of sales in a locality is the best evidence of value. If an assessor is not informed as to the range of sales, how can he properly make a valuation? The custom of late years has become so general of inserting nominal considerations in conveyances of real property that an examination of those conveyances is of practically no benefit to the assessor. He must rely either upon such rare documents as give the actual consideration, or upon hearsay in the community. This hearsay is often most unreliable, and frequently is more of a deception than a guide, as often fictitious considerations are inserted for the purpose of misleading prospective purchasers.

"We earnestly recommend that a law be passed requiring the disclosing to local assessors of the actual considerations in any conveyance of real property, either at or before the time of recording. If necessary the assessor may be required to keep secret the amount of such consideration, if it is not disclosed by the conveyance itself."

The State Conference on Taxation held at Utica, January, 1911, adopted the following resolution unanimously:

"Since the actual value of real property is the sum for which it will sell under ordinary circumstances, and since the best evidence of such value is the record of actual sales under ordinary circumstances,

"RESOLVED, That the true consideration in every deed, mortgage and lease should be made known to the assessor before such deed, mortgage or lease is entitled to be recorded, and that the law should be amended to require such information."

AUCTION SALE WILL OPEN TRACT TO BUILDERS

SHOWING DEVELOPMENT OPPOSITE PROPERTY TO BE AUCTIONED.

WITH 291 lots in 69th street, between Third and Sixth avenues, and on Fifth avenue, Sixth and Bay Ridge avenues, to be offered at auction at the Brooklyn Academy of Music on Tuesday night, June 16, by the Jere Johnson, Jr., Company, the Fleet estate will dispose of its Brooklyn holdings, after an ownership of about eighty years. The sale will commence at 7.30 o'clock.

The outcome of the sale is awaited with interest and it is expected that the home-seeker will be as largely in evidence as the builder and investor, since Bay Ridge is principally a home community of small dwellings. The sale has attracted considerable attention to that part of Brooklyn.

Bay Ridge was formerly a section of the old town of New Utrecht. Its history dates back to the time of Peter Stuyvesant, who made the original grants to the thirty Dutch patroons who subsequently apportioned it among themselves. Practically nothing of interest occurred nor was anything noticeable in its development until about half a century ago. For many years it retained its old-fashioned, rural character and was known as Yellow Hook. The farms stretched along the old Gowanus road, and transit facilities comprised a stage coach, which started at Fulton Ferry and followed the old road to Van Brunt's lane, ending at Fort Hamilton.

Soon after, horse cars came into vogue and to these were added a small steamer which connected the district at the foot of Bay Ridge avenue with Wall street, Manhattan. Through all these years and up to 1892, real estate remained dormant. In that year the first important connection with other sections of the city was established when a trolley line began service from 25th street to Fort Hamilton avenue. The following year the Fifth avenue elevated was extended to Third avenue and 65th street.

Improvements followed in rapid succession and with each addition came an increase in population and rise in land values. Work is being rushed on the Fourth avenue subway, now in course of construction, and it is expected to be in operation by January 1, 1915. While the development of Bay Ridge has not been held back as have other outlying sections by lack of transit facilities, the establishment of such a line will probably strengthen real estate conditions throughout the section. In 1905 the first real estate boom was launched when a syndicate, consisting of Patrick J. Carley, John E. Sullivan, David Meyer, John J. McGowan and J. O'Rourke, purchased about $100,000 worth of unimproved property on Third avenue and in the immediate neighborhood.

Watching and waiting for the appointment of the Heights of Building Commissioners.

The Single-Taxers are planning a most insidious campaign for the coming fall throughout the State. They have the true militant spirit.

Washington Heights will never be fully developed until there is a rapid transit line along Fort Washington avenue to the Hudson Memorial Bridge.

Real estate interests never had a better cause to go to the polls with than the issue of over-regulation of buildings. It is an issue which, as Borough President Marks told the State Factory Investigating Committee, would carry any party into power against those responsible for the oppressive and conflicting laws. The President did not mention any names, but the administration at Albany has evidently seen a new light.

The "elimination" of some of the departments that have been plaguing property owners with violation notices is under consideration by the municipal administration, according to Counsellor Elkus of the State Factory Investigating Commission. If the State would eliminate some of the unnecessary laws with which it has worried real estate in this city of late years, and leave our purely local affairs alone, there would be a revival of the market for real estate.

It sends a strange feeling over property owners to be told officially that the present administration welcomes their representatives to the meetings of the Board of Estimate. Was it not Mayor McClellan himself who once challenged the introductory remark of a speaker, that he appeared as the representative of the Allied Real Estate Interests, by exclaiming: "It is our duty, sir, to represent the real estate owners of this city." The times change—and men change with them.

Is the U. S. Government Friendly to New York City?

Fortunately for his own reputation, the Secretary of the Treasury has withdrawn from the untenable position which he assumed in relation to the subway easement under the Post Office. Apparently the permit will be granted, in case the city meets a few reasonable and inexpensive requirements in the way of provision for handling the mails and insurance against possible damage. It is too bad that this fair and moderate attitude was not assumed earlier. The city would have been saved a delay in the construction of this essential link in the new subway system, which has probably already cost its taxpayers and its traveling public as much money as the Government of the United States ever invested in the existing Post Office. The most discouraging aspect of the situation is the implication which underlies all the negotiations that the Post Office is to remain indefinitely on its existing location.

Considering the buildings which the Government is erecting all over the country as post offices and court houses, the existing edifice devoted to these purposes in the largest city in the Union is a scandal and a disgrace, and the humiliation of it is very much intensified by the fact that the old rookery is situated on a piece of land which New York needs for the perpetuation and the increase of its own civic dignity. Until the apex of City Hall Park is freed from its present encumbrance, New York will always appear like a sordid second-rate town which lacked enough public spirit to keep the little piece of common land in front of its own City Hall free from exploitation. Yet there is small prospect that the encumbrance will be removed for the next twenty-five years. The Government is spending several hundreds of thousands of dollars in renovating a building which is a monument of practical inconvenience and architectural ineptitude, and the very increase of convenience in distributing the mails which will result from the construction of the new subway under the Post Office will act as a deterrent whenever the proposal to tear it down is renewed.

It looks as if this matter had not been very well managed by the city administration. When the question of getting rid of the Post Office was seriously considered eighteen months ago, a plan for its disposal and for the substitution of a new building was submitted to Congress. This plan was based on the general idea that Government ought to surrender its existing site and building and buy another one in some equally convenient location. No such action was even seriously considered in Washington, and any sensible body of men should not have expected that it would be considered. No doubt the plan could be defended on business grounds. The Government had enjoyed the use of city property for forty-five years, and might very well be asked to return it to the original donor. Other cities are not required to supply sites for Federal buildings. Why should New York? Such arguments sound well, but they ignore essential facts.

New York City had permitted the Federal Government to occupy part of its City Hall Park. The precedent had been established, and the Federal Government was in possession. If it was asked to surrender possession it would naturally demand some equivalent, but no equivalent was offered. If the city had promised to provide on or near the proposed civic center an almost equally central and an even more spacious site for a new building, Congress might well have listened favorably to its request. Now it is too late. The money is to be spent on the old Post Office. It will continue to be used for another ten or fifteen years, until the necessity of additional room for the transaction of postal business will bring it up again. When it is revived the city should profit from its past mistake, and offer Congress some compensation for the tearing down of the existing Post Office. It is New Yorkers who suffer chiefly from its presence. They ought to pay for its removal, and in the end they will have to do so.

Where Our Public Schools Fail.

Every New Yorker who is interested in the future of the city should read with care the address which the Mayor delivered at New York University on the new public school plan which the city administration is to have prepared. The news that the instruction given by the City of New York to its youth is to be profoundly modified in the direction of increased technical instruction is of the utmost importance and of the highest promise. The actual plan by means of which the proposed change is to be made has still to be worked out, but the scope and the purpose of the new system are clearly outlined and have been influenced by the best modern educational standards and ideals. The tendency of modern education is to make it more popular by increasing its value in the practical life of the pupil. The plain fact is that the vast majority of the boys and girls who go to public school leave it without having been trained in any respect or to any extent which will really help them in their life's work, and after they leave school their further training almost entirely ceases.

As Mayor Mitchel points out, the deflection among the pupils in the New York public schools is enormous. Some 86,000 enter in any one year, but of these not more than half survive even the period of elementary training. Of the remainder, only 21,000 enter the high schools, and only 4,000 of these survive as pupils to the end of the course. The 80,000 or more pupils who are dropped by the way take up their work in life more or less unprepared, and the degree of their lack of preparation is usually more than less. The ideal which the administration of the public schools of New York City should seek to realize is that of keeping the great majority of the 86,000 pupils at the desk throughout the high school course, and when they graduate these pupils should be fitted in the most definite and practical way for some special work. Of course it will take a generation or more to realize such an ideal as that.

In many cases the pupils are obliged to leave because their parents cannot afford to keep them, and even if the pupils could stay, the city could not afford immediately to assume such an enormous increase of its educational responsibilities. But until this standard is attained an adequate system of continuation schools must be organized, and the pupils who have gone to work in an unprepared condition must be compelled to continue their work—the compulsion being exercised, of course, with the assistance of their employers. All this will mean a largely increased appropriation in the city budget for educational purposes, but the taxpayers of the city will be abundantly remunerated for the heavier burden. The industrial efficiency of New York will be enormously improved. The prosperity of a city depends chiefly upon the productivity of its labor. Any amount of money which is intelligently spent in augmenting the productivity of the labor of New York will be returned many times over to its spenders.

But the advantages of a more popular, more thorough and more useful system of technical and vocational training is not limited to an increase in labor efficiency. The better laborers will become better citizens. Educational experts are coming more and more to believe that while technical and vocational training does not by any means constitute the whole of a liberal education, it constitutes the necessary foundation of a liberal education. A system of social discipline, whatever else it must do, must train the attention and the will of the pupil for the performance in a competent manner of his essential job—of the job whereby he earns his living and contributes to the necessary social work of the community. Such is the idea which in general lies behind the reorganization which the Mayor with so much insight and practical sagacity is proposing to bring about in the educational system of New York.

One More Burden for Real Estate.

Under the terms of the new Workmen's Compensation Law, sums of money for specified periods, in lieu of wages, are automatically awarded to workmen or dependent persons as compensation for injuries received in hazardous callings, whether through their own carelessness or otherwise. Once the law declared that the workman should accept the ordinary risks of his calling without recourse, and especially if personal injury should follow upon his own negligence. Virtually, the new law compels every employer to insure against accidents to his workmen, and it is estimated that during the first year the operation of the law will cost the employers of this State no less than $12,000,000 for insurance policies.

No men in the world are more willing to be fair and just to their employes than master builders and the manufacturers of materials used in the building trades. They have not uttered a word of protest against the principles, supposed to be humane, that are contained in this law. Apparently they have assumed that, as similar laws have recently been adopted in other States and countries, the Workmen's Compensation Law of this State must be one that is just and in accord with the spirit of the times. They are therefore philosophically paying the price, though probably with the hope that ultimately it will be returned to them. No doubt each individual citizen will have to pay his share of that insurance. He will pay part of it in his rent, or when he buys property or supplies of any kind. In other words, the cost of this additional insurance will be added by manufacturers to the price of their product, by builders to the cost of construction and repairs, and by landlords to the rentals of stores, offices and apartments.

Some people call legislation of this sort a form of paternal government, under which the governing power assumes a quasi-fatherly relation to the people and exercises an intimate supervision over their business and social affairs, upon the theory that they are not competent to manage for themselves. Incidentally, it is claimed that the rate of 66 2/3 per cent. which employers will be called upon to pay will amount in practice to more than the injured would have earned, and result in pecuniary gain to the victims; and some employers may even be tempted, when they think of the death benefits provided by the law, to employ only men who are unmarried or have no one depending on them. But these are questions apart. So far the building trades have merely expressed regret that this new burden on real estate interests should be imposed at a time when they are already weighted down with onerous laws.

A Mistake in the Labor Law.

Alfred R. Kirkus says a vital mistake has been made in the existing Labor Law in that no consideration has been given to the different classes of buildings and occupations included in the law. A building where one or more persons are employed at labor is legally just as bad as where one thousand or more persons are employed. An occupancy with highly inflammable stock and large numbers of excitable women is graded with an occupancy of heavy machinery and a few men. A mercantile establishment, 'any place where goods, wares or merchandise are offered for sale,' might be a 10x10 delicatessen store, or an H. B. Claflin Company wholesale warehouse, a newspaper stand or an Altman's.

—For every human being in the United States $11 was last year put into a building of some kind.

VICTORY FOR OWNERS.

Held Not to be Responsible for Locked Doors in Factories.

Owners of factory buildings in New York will be interested to learn of a decision made this week in the Court of Special Sessions of the Peace, Part I, in which a complaint made by the State Labor Department for alleged violation of the labor laws was dismissed.

The case was the People of the State of New York against John J. Radley. Justice Zeller presided, his associates being Justices Moss and Hermann. The State Labor Department through its counsel attempted to establish its right to compel an owner to carry out certain provisions of the labor law with respect to factories, which are technically known as "locked door" violations.

Radley's defense was that the order claimed to have been violated was distinctly an order which should be carried out by the tenant and that he was helpless in the matter. Mr. Radley's lawyer was George W. Olvany, who is also special counsel for the Real Estate Board.

The facts in this case are interesting. Radley erected a building at 617-621 East 18th street on leased ground. The entire building is rented to the American Foil Company and they in turn let the top loft to the Metal Sign Company. Mr. Radley also erected the adjoining building, 623-625 East 18th street, which is 50 feet front and 50 feet deep, on leased ground. The ground floor of which is occupied by a coal yard. The Metal Sign Company needing more room, leased the two upper lofts in 623-625 East 18th street, and cut an opening between the two buildings and put in a fireproof door.

There is separate door and entrance from the street to these two upper floors. The entrance to 623 and 625 East 18th street is entirely cut off from the coal yard and is for the exclusive use of the tenant of the two upper lofts, who controls the key. The Metal Sign Company did not wish to use that door as an exit and locked it and was using the other building as a means of exit.

In January Mr. Radley was arrested for having the door locked. Incidentally the door has since been made to swing outwardly and the key is in the door. When the case came up for pleading in the Court of Special Sessions of the Peace Judge Russell, who was then presiding, refused Radley's plea for a dismissal of the complaint and sent the case to Special Sessions for trial. The case was adjourned three times and came on for hearing on June 10.

The State claimed that the building was a tenant factory as defined by section 94 of the Labor Law, which requires that the owner or lessee shall comply with the certain provisions of law which they are responsible for. The attorney for the Labor Department tried to prove his case under section 79-c, claiming that the owner of a tenant factory building was liable for the carrying out of all its requirements, including stairways, windows and the keeping of doors unlocked.

Mr. Olvany in his defense claimed that section 79-c did not apply, as Mr. Radley was neither conducting nor operating the factory in the building, and that section 94 distinctly placed the duty of seeing that doors were kept unlocked upon the persons conducting or operating the factory.

Mr. Olvany pointed out not only the fact that the defendant was not liable under the law, but that it would be a gross injustice to penalize the owner for the action of the lessee, also that the owner could not control the action of the lessee in the locking of the door, that the lessee held the keys, and that the owner had not seen the building for six months.

In emphasizing the unfairness of the prosecution of Mr. Radley, Mr. Olvany said:

"If owners are to be responsible, under the labor law, for the actions of a tenant where the owner has leased the entire upper portion of a building to one tenant, it will be necessary for large property owners all over the city to employ watchmen continually to see that tenants carry out provisions of the law for which they, and not the owners, should be responsible.

"The dismissal of the case is of special significance because it applies to a number of parallel cases in which owners of buildings have received orders from the Labor Department to do certain things which tenants should be required to do. The decision also emphasizes the fact that the labor law as now existing is ambiguous and confusing in many particulars and to that extent is creating confusion among owners in working great hardship upon them, and that this chaotic condition is not in the interests of fire prevention and safety to occupancy."

Discouraging Real Estate Ownership.

The law-abiding property owner is never free from the visits of an inspector. Last year he may have made changes costing thousands of dollars; this year the Fire Department, the Fire Prevention Bureau, and the Labor Department appear again—we speak of actual cases—and demand a change in fire escapes, fire lines, stairways, etc., all of which conditions were passed perhaps by some of the very same inspectors six months ago. Happy the owner who has not from one to six notices of violations in his hand, all calling for changes within a week or fifteen days under severe penalties. Last year his building was an office structure; this year, because of some $60 a week tenant, it has suddenly become a factory. Then, just when these demands have been complied with, Mr. Marks' own men may come along to demand thousands of dollars for vault privileges, doubtless paid for a half-century ago, but for which the city is now demanding payment because its ill-kept books do not show the original transaction. . . . At present he cannot be blamed for believing that the city wishes to discourage ownership of real estate and to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs from which the city chiefly derives its revenues.—Evening Post.

Barge Terminals for Queens.

At the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, held Wednesday afternoon, June 10, at the club rooms in Long Island City, Hon. John A. Bensel, State Engineer and Surveyor, was the guest and spoke regarding the selection of barge canal terminals for the Borough of Queens. The Chamber has recommended that terminals be located on Dutch Kills Creek, Hallets Cove, Bowery Bay and Flushing Creek. A public hearing was held by State Engineer Bensel and Borough President Connolly on this matter on April 24, and since that time the State Engineer has had prepared a report on the various locations suggested for terminals, which will be presented to the State Canal Board for consideration.

Data has been compiled by the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce from estimates received from manufacturers throughout the borough, showing that in addition to over 2,000,000 feet of lumber, it is estimated that approximately 700,000 tons of freight would be received and shipped annually if terminals were located in Queens. When it is realized that the estimate of the total tonnage on the State Barge Canal for the first year of its operation is only 10,000,000 tons, it can be appreciated that if almost 7 per cent. of this will be received and shipped from Queens Borough, that it is necessary to locate sufficient terminals to handle this immense traffic.

Sewer System for Gravesend.

The Board of Estimate has authorized the construction of a system of sanitary and stormwater sewers for the Gravesend section, in Homecrest avenue, from Avenue S to Avenue U, and in 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th streets and between Avenues R and T, the estimate cost of which is $89,000.

SALE AT CITY LINE.

190 Lots Opposite Van Cortlandt Park to Go Under Hammer.

THERE is a real estate opportunity for the seeker of safe investments at the Broadway entrance to the greatest city in the world, in a tract of 190 lots which are to be offered at auction on June 23rd by Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies. The opportunity is created by the fact that the land, probably the choicest cheap cost residential property that has come to the auction block for disposal in many years, is within the reach of 5,000,000 or more inhabitants of the city, both from the viewpoint of prices and accessibility and because of its unique character and location.

"No simile, descriptive of the location and future of the lots, conveys an adequate idea more than the upper and nether millstones which are known to grind surely and fine," said Messrs. Davies and Day, "because the lots lie between the figurative giant millstones of population of two big cities, which is already forcing the use of sites intended for dwellings with huge apartments.

"Located at the city line the land has an alluring attraction that has convinced some of the best informed real estate men who bought property in this quarter. One commanding feature is in the fact that the surroundings in every direction are ideal. With Van Cortlandt Park at one side, and to the west the finely developed Riverdale section, where homes averaging $20,000 in cost have been built in profusion, great flats along Broadway a short distance to the south, where the West Side subway terminates and similar structures on their north, the lots conjure fanciful ideas in the mind of one who investigates the history of similarly situated localities.

"The evolution some places have undergone through the pressure of population upon them, such as the Plaza at Fifth avenue and 59th street at the entrance to Central Park and Columbus Circle, perhaps offer the best stepping stones to help in a vision of what now seems destined to come in due time at the Broadway city line.

"This important point of the city, which is even now showing the effect of the pressure of population from the south and north in the shape of large apartment buildings, is a veritable funnel through which the growth northward must follow as it forms the line of least resistance.

"Furthermore, the Broadway city line district has an advantage from the viewpoint of potential values or realty, in the strong probability of an extension of the subway to the city line plus the increasing importance of Broadway and Riverdale avenue as traffic arteries, more particularly Broadway, upon which millions of dollars have been spent and will be invested for theatres, business dwellings and other improvements to maintain the old prestige as the greatest and best known thoroughfare in the world.

"Transit facilities now surround the lots as do numerous buildings of every character of residential use, and both facilities are multiplying rapidly. More buildings are going up every day. The erection is spurred by the proximity of the section to convenient stations on the Putnam Division of the New York Central, connecting with the Sixth and Ninth avenue 'L' lines, and surface cars connecting with the subway at 242d street and Broadway.

"The lots are rolling land and all the streets have been conveyed to the city, thus insuring freedom from assessment. Of importance also is the fact that the lots front on Van Cortlandt Park, one of the most popular of the city's playgrounds.

"All of the 190 lots in the offering are high and dry and their rolling character assures perfect drainage. They will be sold at absolute sale to the highest bidders in the Vesey street salesroom."

J. P. MORGAN'S REAL ESTATE.

Held Title to Forty-Eight Parcels in This City and Elsewhere.

Not only was the late J. P. Morgan, master financier, a large lender on real estate, but he was a larger owner than was generally known. Some forty-eight parcels are found to have been in his name at the time of his death. Joseph P. Day has been retained to appraise the value of the real estate for both the State Comptroller and the executors. Some years ago Mr. Morgan gave title to the north corner of the block between 36th and 37th streets to his son. The south corner house, in which Mr. Morgan lived, designated as 219 Madison avenue, 65.10 by 129 feet 4½ inches, together with the lot adjoining on the north and the library at 33 East 36th street are all assessed at $1,323,000 for the land, and $1,578,000 for the land and improvements. The northwest corner of 38th street and Madison avenue, which Mr. Morgan bought from Edward Johnson, is assessed at $390,000 for the land, and $490,000 for land and improvements.

Mr. Morgan owned the Gill Building, at 9-13 Maiden Lane, valued by the Tax Department at $435,000 for the land, and $775,000 for land and improvements.

Another one of the most valuable properties held by him was the row of flathouses at 231 to 243 East 47th street and 883 and 889 Second avenue. The flathouses in East 47th street are valued by the city at $271,000.

Mr. Morgan also owned the following buildings: Highcliffe Hall, at 14 Park Hill avenue, Yonkers, taxed at $41,300; 13 and 15 East 38th street, taxed at $221,000; 104 East 35th street, appraised at $43,500; 33 East 35th street, at $62,000; 135 East 36th street, at $60,000, and 8 East 36th street, at $117,000.

His Camp Uncas, in Hamilton county, is taxed at $26,650. It comprises about 1,560 acres. His country place on the Hudson, known as Cragston, is taxed at $99,600.

At City Island, Mr. Morgan was evidently actuated in making his purchases by another motive than that of profit. He had a yacht anchorage nearby, and some of the cup defenders of which he was a part owner found a mooring place there. The value of the 35 City Island properties is not yet known.

Juan Mooyer has opened a real estate office at 22 Exchange place, while Russell Marston will continue the business at 477 Fifth avenue under the firm name of Marston & Co.

BROOKLYN BOARD RESOLVES.

Is Opposed to the Enactment of Any Form of Single Tax Legislation.

At a meeting of the Brooklyn Board of Real Estate Brokers held this week the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the Brooklyn Board of Real Estate Brokers is opposed to the enactment of any form of single tax legislation for the City of New York, because:

1. The value of land will be reduced in proportion to the increased tax levied upon it, thus taking from the owner a portion of the value of his property without just compensation.

2. It discriminates against land and in favor of buildings and personal property, notwithstanding that land requires an insignificant portion of police, fire, health and other governmental services for which the major part of the taxes is levied.

3. It aims not only to exempt from taxation all kinds of property other than land, but to increase the tax upon land to a point at which such property loses its selling value.

4. Excessive production of buildings, causing rents to fall, as claimed by the single taxers, will not occur, because lenders will refuse the risk of making building loans in excess of the normal and legitimate demand resulting from the growth of the city.

5. Rents will be increased, because when the value of land is impaired or destroyed by the single tax, lenders will insist that owners of property shall pay annually, in addition to what they already pay, a sum which will reduce the amount of the mortgage as fast as the building deteriorates by use, and this additional charge must fall eventually upon the tenant. Even if all land were owned by the Government, the same result would follow.

6. The credit of the City of New York will be impaired by reducing the value of real property, upon which its credit is based.

7. A premium will be placed on the extensive use of land, thereby creating worse congestion of population than now exists.

8. The burden of taxation will fall with cruel force upon the owners of small detached houses, who are now paying in taxes all they can afford.

9. The reduction of the tax on buildings to one-half the tax on land is a discrimination against the owner of the small dwelling house, because it will oblige him to pay a portion of the tax levied on large buildings.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Chester District.

The Local Board has adopted the following resolutions:

1224. Acquiring title to the lands necessary for Fowler avenue, from Pierce avenue to Neill avenue; Bogart avenue, from Sacket avenue to Bronx and Pelham Parkway; Muliner avenue, from Bear Swamp road (Bronxdale avenue) to Bronx and Pelham Parkway; Matthews avenue, from Bear Swamp road (Bronxdale avenue) to Bronx and Pelham Parkway; Neill avenue, from Barnes avenue to Radcliff avenue; Lydig avenue, from Barnes avenue to Bogart avenue.

At the meeting of this Local Board on May 19, 1914, separate petitions were presented for acquiring title to the lands necessary for:

342. Regulating, grading, setting curbstones, flagging the sidewalks a space four feet wide, laying crosswalks, building approaches and erecting fences where necessary in Rosewood street (Elizabeth street), from Bronx boulevard to White Plains avenue, together with all work incidental thereto. Total estimated cost, $6,950, or $107.75 for each 25-foot lot. Assessed value of the real estate included within the probable area of assessment is $446,830. (Estimate dated May 27, 1911.) Title vested January 14, 1913. Laid over indefinitely April 29, 1913, by Local Board of Chester.

1216. Acquiring title to the lands necessary for Bronxwood avenue, from Gun Hill road to Tilden street. This street is less than 500 feet long, and is laid out on Section 32 of the final maps, which section was filed January 9, 1911. There are no buildings on the land to be acquired, and there is no legal obstacle to approving the petition.

1180. Laying out on the map of the City of New York a reduction in width of Richardson avenue, from East 236th street to East 242d street.

1181. Laying out on the map of the City of New York a reduction in width of Matilda avenue, from East 236th street to East 242d street. Matilda avenue is about 4,100 feet long, and is situated about 400 feet westerly from White Plains road; the petitioners represent but three of the 130 plots fronting thereon.

National Real Estate Convention.

The real estate men of New York are expected to send a large delegation to the next convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, to be held in Pittsburgh, July 8 to 11 inclusive.

The programme will be the heaviest that has been undertaken at any convention of this association. The registration of delegates will begin at 8:00 A. M. on July 8, and the convention will be called to order at 10:30, following which there will be addresses of welcome on behalf of the State of Pennsylvania, the City of Pittsburgh, and Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, with suitable responses. At 1:00 P. M. a luncheon will be tendered to the officers, managers and executive committeemen, and at 2:30 will be held the oratorical contest for the silver trophy cup presented by the Chicago Board. At 8:00 P. M. there will be a Get-Together Meeting.

July 9 it is expected that there will be a series of half-hour speeches, each including an address on "Salesmanship" by Hugh Chalmers of Pittsburgh and concluding with an address by Secretary Roland B. Woodward of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce on the "Relation of a Real Estate Board to a Community." At 1:00 P. M. will be held the conference of secretaries from all the local boards. Fifty-five secretaries were present or represented at the Winnipeg meeting.

July 10 will be given over very largely to the special reports of committees on Taxation, City Planning, Ethics and to the Affairs of the new Investment Corporation, and "International Realty Associates." This session will conclude with an address on Subdivision Work by Mr. Wood, of the Wood-Harmon Company of New York.

On July 11 the programme will comprise another series of addresses, the topics including Rentals, Scientific Appraisals, and allied subjects.

The entertainment features of the convention have not yet been determined upon, but it will be noted that the latter part of each afternoon and evening is left free for committee meetings, special conferences and entertainment features.

Mortgage Extensions.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

(1) When the holder of a first mortgage desires to extend the time of payment, is it necessary for him to have a search made of the property to find out what liens have been put upon same subsequent to his mortgage, and is he required to obtain the written consent of subsequent mortgagees before giving his extension? If otherwise, would the second lien supersede the first mortgage? Or, in other words, would the second mortgage become a first mortgage and the first mortgage an after lien by virtue of this extension.

tice before he becomes liable to a personal tax and can the Bureau render him a bill for same where they claim notice was sent through the mails and did not reach the party intended, but was probably lost in the mails. Does he lose all his rights if he neglects to examine the personal tax books each and every year, even though he be in Europe at the time the books are open for inspection, and never receives actual notice, and would be exempt if he had taken advantage of the opportunity to swear off?

"A 20 YEARS' SUBSCRIBER."

Answer: (1) There is no need of making a search to save rights of precedence. It is usual, however, to make one in order to find out the conditions existing. Also, the extension releases the bond* accompanying the mortgage. No written consent is necessary from subsequent lienors.

(2) No notice need be served as to personal tax laid. Neglect to examine the books as to amount assessed until after the period for correction is passed cuts off the right of asking such correction, unless excused by the Tax Commissioners on good cause shown for the failure.

A Question of Responsibility.

On May 7, Justice Newburger rendered a decision of special interest. The case was brought by Thomas McGowan, who occupied an apartment at No. 742 Second avenue. Leonard Morgan was the agent for the building. It appears that in April, 1912, a summons and complaint was served on Mr. Morgan, claiming that Mr. McGowan fell while ascending the first flight of steps in No. 742 Second avenue and sustained a fracture of the left hip. It was claimed that no light was kept burning at or near the head of the stairs on the second floor, and also that the fixture was broken off.

The summons was forwarded to the Fidelity & Casualty Company, which insured the owner under a general liability policy in the sum of $10,000. The claim for damages amounted to $30,000. In answer to the complaint, Mr. Morgan set forth that he was not the owner, and was in no control of the property to the extent of ownership, and denied the other allegations. Notwithstanding this answer, no amendment to the original complaint was made. The plaintiff claimed that Mr. Morgan, as renting agent, was liable under the Tenement House Law, which required the light to be kept burning at certain hours.

The case was originally tried before Justice Hendrick, who decided the ownership in Mr. Morgan had not been proved, and he dismissed the case. An appeal was taken in January, 1914, and the Appellate Division adversed the lower court and ordered another trial.

Justice Hodgkiss, in writing his opinion, stated: "I think the term 'owner' in Section 76 of the Tenement House Act was intended to describe the person who was in such possession or control as proprietor of all or part of the premises, as to cast upon him the duty to light or care for the common hallways." The meaning of the word "owner" as used in the section is somewhat vague. Elsewhere the city speaks of "owner" . . . "A lessee of the house or other person having control of the tenement house." . . . "I think this evidence was prima facie sufficient to show that the defendant was owner of the premises within the amendment of Section 76, the above referred to." Presiding Justice Ingraham wrote an assenting opinion, which was concurred in by Justice Laughlin, the new trial taken on May 4.

In the course of the trial the defendant produced the deed of the property, showing the record title was vested in his name, also the original blank filed with the Tenement House Department, which stated who the owner of record was, and that Mr. Morgan was agent. The defendant also testified that up to the time of the serving of the original summons he had not heard of any accident having occurred on the premises; that to his knowledge the fixture on the second floor was not broken off. This was also testified to by his collector, William M. Demarest. The jury returned the verdict for the defendant.

The above decision is of considerable importance, as no doubt other cases of a similar character have been tried, and many others settled out of court. "Real estate agents, owners, casualty companies and the Bar Association," said Mr. Morgan yesterday, "should do everything possible to discourage such practices.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

The real estate market was enlivened this week by several important transactions, the most prominent involving a Madison avenue and 44th street corner, whereby a prominent downtown clothing establishment, for thirty years at Broadway and 22d street, joins the growing colony in the neighborhood of the Grand Central Terminal. Other interesting deals included the accumulation of a loft building site in West 38th street, a Division street business building and Bronx apartment houses which were in good demand.

Builders figured in a number of sales which will result in immediate improvement, showing a tendency to extend the building season into midsummer. This branch of the business was stimulated by reports of large loans placed this week which may indicate an improvement in the lending market. In Long Island a 700-acre tract passed into the hands of a development company which announces its intention to establish a residential community.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 25, as against 33 last week and 21 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 12, as compared with 3 last week and 7 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 13, as compared with 30 last week and 14 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 167, as against 171 last week, 17 having stated considerations totaling $578,475. Mortgages recorded this week number 96, involving $2,491,198, as against 83 last week, aggregating $4,513,550.

From the Bronx 15 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 4 last week and 12 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $415,634, compared with $989,442 last week, making a total since January 1 of $19,860,897. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $3,549,164, and the total from January 1, 1913, to June 14, 1913 was $29,052,346.

Brooks Brothers to Move Uptown.

Brooks Brothers, for 30 years at Broadway and 22d street and in business since 1812, figured this week in a transaction involving the plot 125.5x 110.10 feet, at the northwest corner of Madison avenue and 44th street, which will result in the improvement of the site with a ten-story structure for their own occupancy. The site is opposite the Hotel Biltmore, St. Bartholomew's Church, and within a block of the Grand Central Terminal. The Record & Guide of April 25, reported that a well-known clothing establishment was considering that immediate neighborhood for a new home, but at that time nothing definite regarding the character of the improvement could be learned. In the present transaction the eight buildings occupying the plot have been sold by Thomas B. Hidden to William Henry Barnum and William Everdell, Jr., who have engaged Irons & Todd to erect the building, which will be occupied by Brooks Brothers for a period of 21 years with the renewal privileges, the details of which will be found in another column. The rental for the first term is said to aggregate about $2,000,000. The deal was negotiated through the Douglas Robinson-Charles S. Brown Company.

Operators Buy Loft Site.

Frederick Fox & Co. have sold for Max Thorn, the five five-story dwellings at 223-231 West 38th street, located in the north side of the street about 225 feet west of Seventh avenue, forming a plot 102.10x98.9. The plot was assembled in 1910 from several separate owners and Mr. Thorn has been offering it at $275,000. The purchasers, Andrew J. Kerwin, Jr., and William H. Birkmire, have been prominently identified in the erection of mercantile buildings in the section between 14th to 34th streets. Their present purchase is made on a cash basis and the property will be improved by them with a twelve-story building in the near future.

Bronx Apartment Houses Sold.

John B. Haskins Estates bought from the Winnie Realty Construction Co., Maurice Muller, president, the four four-story apartment houses, 952, 956, 960 and 964 Kelly street, each on plot 38x100 and also the two five-story abutting apartment houses at 956 and 969 Tiffany street, each on plot 40x100. The buildings have been held at $225,000 and were built by the sellers. They were given in exchange for the large plot at Fordhad road and Creston avenue reported sold several weeks ago. The latter property will probably be improved with apartments since the New York Titile Insurance Company on Wednesday made a loan of $80,000 to the Winnie Realty Construction Co.

Big Long Island Acreage Sale.

The Sea Coast Realty Co. sold to a Philadelphia, Pa., syndicate a tract of about 700 acres near Long Beach, L. I., comprising Barnum Island, 450 acres, the Austin Cornwell tract of 90 acres, the Bedell farm of 31 acres, the Fitzgerald tract of 100 acres, the John Smith tract of 21 acres and another tract of about 30 acres. Title to the property was taken by J. Harry Meyers, the names of the members of the syndicate not being learned. The purchasers, it is announced, contemplate improving the acreage as a high-class residential colony.

Reported Division Street Deal.

Marx Ottinger is reported to have sold to Isidor Feilen, president of the Modern Cloak & Suit Co. the five-story building, 10-16 Division street, on plot 50x69.8, adjoining the northeast corner of the Bowery. At Mr. Ottinger's office it was said that there was no information to be given out at present and Mr. Feilen also refused to talk about the transaction.

West 57th Street Transaction.

L. Napoleon Levy bought from John W. Simpson, through William B. May & Co., the six-story building, 25 W. 57th street, on lot 25x100.5. In exchange Mr. Levy gave the Biltmore-Blenheim Apartments at 56-62 West 58th street, two seven-story structures on plot 100x100.5. Mr. Simpson acquired the 57th street property several years ago from George H. Howard.

Manhattan, South of 59th Street.

CATHERINE ST.—Rev. Vincenzo Jaunuzze bought for the Missionaries of St. Charles Borromeo, 64 Catherine st, facing the northwest corner of Catherine and Monroe sts, purchased earlier in the week. The new property will be used as a dwelling for the sisters of the order.

CATHARINE ST.—Lowenfeld & Prager have sold to the Rev. Dr. Vincenzo Jaunuzze for the congregation of missionaries of St. Charles Borromeo, 57 and 59 Catharine st and 3 Monroe st, three old buildings, on plot 47.9x99.7x irregular, forming the northeast corner. The sellers held the property at $70,000.

BARCLAY ST.—Alfred L Simonson is reported to have sold the 5-sty store and loft building at 28 Barclay st, on plot 44.5x101.10, adjoining the southwest corner of Church st.

14TH ST.—The Duross Co. has sold the 4-sty store and loft building at 252 West 14th st for R. G. Langdon. The property is 80 ft. east of the southeast corner of 8th av, which is owned by Vincent Astor. The building will be extensively altered by the new owner.

49TH ST.—William L. Levy has sold to a builder 145-149 East 49th st, three 3-sty dwellings, on plot 56.10x100.5, beginning 145 ft. east of Lexington av. The buyer, it is said, contemplates the erection of a 9-sty apartment house. The seller acquired the plot in 1912.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

A total of $150,275 was realized for 138 lots of the McDougall tract in Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, offered at auction last Saturday by Bryan L. Kennelly. The remainder of the 600 lots, scheduled to be sold, will be held until the subway is completed. Inside lots brought from $900 to $1,200 and corners about $2,000. The lot at 44th street and New Utrecht avenue, opposite the L station, sold for $4,750. Among the buyers were H. A. Tower, H. A. Murphy, S. V. Stuart, Ellen M. Daly, Joseph Geraghty, J. C. Halligan, E. A. Andrews, William Cole, A. De Martin, Lester Huber, Mrs. Catherine Autz and Frederick Aren.

At Monmouth Beach, N. J., on the same day, Joseph P. Day sold twenty-three properties, including the Casino, for $35,675. The Casino was purchased by the Monmouth County Fire Co. In the Manhattan and Bronx Exchange Salesrooms, plaintiffs and other parties in interest bought nineteen of the thirty-three offerings, nine sales were either withdrawn or adjourned, and only five went to outside bidders.

For the coming week the Jere Johnson, Jr., Company will offer at absolute sale 291 lots in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, owned by the Fleet Estate.

Section 1. Section 370a is hereby added to the regulations of the Municipal Explosives Commission, reading as follows.

Sec. 370a. No garage permit for the storing of motor vehicles containing volatile inflammable oil in their fuel tanks shall be issued for any building, shed or enclosure, unless that portion of such building, shed or enclosure in which such motor vehicles are stored is constructed of fire-resisting material; the provisions of this section to apply only to premises where no volatile inflammable oil is stored, and which are situated:

(a) Within 25 feet of the nearest wall of a building occupied as a tenement house, church, hotel, place of public amusement or assembly, school, wholesale drug store, premises where dry goods or other highly inflammable materials are manufactured or kept for sale, cleaning and dyeing establishments, or any premises where combustible fibres are stored.

(b) Within 50 feet of any premises where ammunition or fireworks are manufactured or stored; where inflammable or combustible mixtures, paints, varnishes, lacquers or matches are manufactured or stored in wholesale quantities; where nitro-cellulose products are used for further manufacture, or where inflammable motion picture films are manufactured or stored in quantities aggregating more than 10,000 feet.

VENTILATION OF LOFT BUILDINGS

By WILLIAM J. BALDWIN

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager For The American Real Estate Co.

SCIENTIFIC and thorough ventilation of loft structures in New York City is in its infancy, and up to the present time far from sufficient thought has been given by architects and others to this most important subject. This is particularly true of lofts used for manufacturing purposes, even those erected in the lower Fifth avenue section. The regulations in regard to factory laws relating to ventilation are "a joke." Few buildings are provided systematically with fresh air and none in sufficient quantities to be adequate. Dr. Elizah Harris, an advanced authority for his time and once president of the Board of Health, confounded the cubic space allotted to a person within a building with real ventilation.

Blinding the Public.

This conception of ventilation still pertains to the space in a tenement house and to the space on the floor of a school, but it is not ventilating. It is true that the floor space should be limited to some miminum for convenience and for other reasons, but any provision in a tenement house law, or in a factory law, or a school law, that does not provide for the systematic admission of uncontaminated air to closed buildings, only goes to blind the public, and the individuals who work in these lofts in our great cities.

Conditions are almost as bad in our office buildings. The City of New York is the first great sinner in this regard, as it builds great municipal buildings with hundreds—say probably thousands—of clerks to a floor without adequate or no ventilation, and the great insurance companies are also guilty of neglect with their employees, male and female, when they coop them up in rooms, with scarcely elbow-room and without ventilation.

Lower Fifth Avenue Conditions.

The handsome industrial buildings recently erected on lower Fifth avenue, which are nothing but factory lofts, mostly devoted to the making of clothing, are one of the first considerations for improvement. It is here, where hundreds of operatives are working with sewing machines, elbow to elbow, with less room between them than is allotted to children in public schools, that the first direct effort should be made.

These people are laborers and must come under factory laws and they are huddled together and crowded as no human beings ever were before in factories, on account of the great rent cost of floor space; and the necessity for having to turn out clothing and other products, in an area where rents are so relatively high, that the condition is forced on the manufacturer; and he in turn forces it on his laborers, because there seems nothing else to do.

One only has to go to Fifth avenue, south of 23d street, between the hours of 12 and 1 p. m., any working-day, to see the crowds of humanity that "bolt" their luncheon in about ten minutes, that they may have fifty minutes of fresh air on the sidewalks of Fifth avenue.

Machine Operators Need Air.

During the two working sessions of four hours each, when these people are at their machines, they are absolutely without fresh air, except through the convenient (or accidental) opening of a door or a window, and this is absolutely no ventilation, and by ventilation I mean a change of air, sufficient to keep the air of the room at some standard of purity fixed by law, and if the term is not suitable then at some standard of vileness and vitiation that is tolerable.

WILLIAM J. BALDWIN.

The cubic contents of a space allotted per capita can never be considered as having any bearing on the quality of the air in habitable enclosures, after the first few minutes of occupancy. The air space in an ordinary factory loft on Fifth avenue is vitiated beyond the health point in ten minutes.

Vitiated Air.

If we consider a floor space of 36 square feet per individual with a height of 9 feet we have but 324 cubic feet of space per capita, and this is more than the average condition. The air in this space is vitiated to the poorest conditions, tolerated in our schools under the law, in ten minutes, and at the end of a four-hour working session it is vitiated to twenty-four times the school standard, while at the end of a nine-hour day it is vitiated to fifty-four times the school standard.

A light-shaft with a few windows, or a whirligig of a wheel in a sidewall or window, simply deceives the public, and furnishes a pretense that satisfies the well-intentioned investigator who does not know what ventilation is or should be. The word "ventilation" as applied to buildings should mean nothing except an ample supply of good pure air, the best we can obtain from the outside, and the quantity should be fixed within some reasonable limit. The ordinary acceptation of the word is a misnomer.

The Closed Window.

Windows are not ventilators unless they are open, and such opening as can be tolerated in cold or wet weather rarely affects the quality of the air of these human bee-hives sufficient to be appreciable. It is argued that the common standard for the amount of oxygen in the air outside being 20 per cent., that even if it falls to 17 per cent. within the room, the person has only to breathe a little deeper, and still obtain the necessary amount of oxygen.

This is true to some extent, if it only relates to the oxygen in pure air, but the person who makes this argument rarely points out that the carbonic acid increases in about twice the ratio that the oxygen disappears. When he is reminded of this, his argument is that the carbonic acid in the air is neutral and that it has no greater effect on the individual than the nitrogen in the air. This might also be conceded if we were thinking only of an excess of carbonic acid in good air, but there is also the question of humidity to be considered, and what is this humidity but the vapor carried out of your neighbor's lungs and through his skin and added to the air of the room, to be breathed over and over again in the impure air of the room.

On a warm, damp day in summer the relative humidity may be 80 per cent. or more and this in itself demands a change of air to keep the percentage of moisture from increasing. A low relative humidity is absolutely necessary to keep down the temperature of the body.

There is also a fourth element in this question, which is the relative density of the air. At 80 or 90 degrees of the thermometer the density of the air has decreased so much from what it would be at 60 degrees that the lungs of the individual have not only to take care of an increased amount of air due to the diminution of oxygen and an increased amount of air due to the excess of carbonic acid, but in addition an increased quantity of air, due to the reduced density of the air so that the human lung is not able to accommodate itself for any great length of time to all these conditions, which always exist in an enclosed air space occupied by animals, let them be human or otherwise.

When Theory Does Harm.

The open-window theorist also inadvertently does harm often. He argues for natural ventilation, instead of systematic ventilation, and he cites the success in hospitals and other places from open windows, or from putting the patient out of doors on the galleries or on the roof.

From his standpoint he is correct, for where can we get better ventilation than out of doors? He forgets, however, that he is opposing systematic ventilation—at least indirectly—as he seems to see only the condition he has to deal with, forgetting that he cannot put a girl who runs a sewing machine in warm blankets on the roof, or out of doors on a hospital cot. Neither can all the windows in the workroom be opened in January, and the deficiency of temperature made up by wraps, if his young Fifth avenue tailor is to turn out a day's work equal to the young man or the young woman that works in a systematically well-ventilated and properly warmed factory.

An argument used against systematic ventilation is its cost in cold weather.

Ventilation costs money, and when it is realized how much systematic ventilation costs (when warmth is added), those who pay the coal bills either slow down the motor or turn off the heat, and look on the money saved as an entire economy—something saved without a loss.

This, however, is not the fact: there is a loss, and it will be found in the decreased amount of work the operative is capable of producing. It will be also apparent in the general standard of health of the individuals if compared with those in a well ventilated factory.

What can be done to remedy this condition? Where should the economy commence? And will it ever commence unless the people take it into their own hands and insist upon it? If they realized the condition under which they are living they would, and this applies equally to the 75,000 office employees of the city who work at desks in municipal buildings.

ILLUMINATION OF LARGE BUILDINGS

By H. B. PIERCE

PROPER illumination does not mean the mere application of light to make objects visible at minimum expense, but, rather, the most maximum comfort to the eye, at the same time producing an effect which is as esthetic as possible. The prime requisites in securing such illumination are adequate wiring, a knowledge of the purpose for which each room is to be used, and as much information as is available on the probable location of furniture and fixtures. In addition, the color of the walls, the ceiling and the floor should be known, as a darkly tinted room may require 50 per cent. more light than one with a bright finish. The architectural style of the rooms should be studied, in order that the illumination may be such as to carry out the effect which the architect desires.

In connection with these specifications it must be known to what extent economy is desired. Too often a good scheme of illumination has been ruined by a desire to reduce the electric light bill, whereas had the matter of economy been discussed in connection with the original design a more efficient, though perhaps less esthetic, installation could have been substituted.

Exterior Treatment.

The exterior lighting of large buildings, which is often completely omitted, deserves consideration from the advertising standpoint. Not many sights impress the imagination more strongly than does that of an inspiring piece of architecture at night. This emphasis may be secured by outlining the architectural lines of the structure by the use of cluster posts on the sidewalk, or by using luminous arc lamps placed at the curb line and at points of prominence on the building.

In the main lobby of the building, especially if it is a large hotel, the color of the light should tend toward the yellow or reddish tinges, and the effect should be that of brilliant lighting, even if good illumination has to be sacrificed to some extent in accomplishing this end. The cold, cheerless light from the older type of arc lamps, with their poor regulation, should not be tolerated. The public must be invited to enter, and there can be nothing which extends a more cordial invitation than cheerful, bright illumination.

In the lobby of a quiet family hotel the effect should be subdued but cheerful. The effect of the quiet light from the open fireplace is what is desired—not that of the mortuary chapel, which is too often found.

Determining Working Areas.

A description of the method used in making a detailed analysis of the lighting design for the lobby will illustrate the procedure necessary in all parts of the building. The first step must be a determination of the working areas of the room, the intensity of the light flux and the direction it should have over these areas. These factors can be obtained from an architect's plan and from a knowledge gained by experience in similar installations.

A dense opal globe will absorb 60 per cent. of the light which falls on it, or probably 70 per cent. of the total light flux of the lamp. Hence 40 per cent. of the total light flux generated, or 6,140 lumens, is absorbed in this fixture. The total flux required is now 15,355 lumens, to which is added 25 per cent. for losses due to the inevitable collection of dirt on walls, ceilings and fixtures. This gives a grand total of 18,945 lumens to be supplied from the nine light sources, or 2,105 lumens from each source. A 250-watt tungsten lamp burning at normal voltage will give 2,350 lumens, while the next smaller size, the 150-watt lamp, will give only 1,260. The 250-watt lamp is then the correct one to select.

Local Lighting.

For the local lighting a simpler means of computing the additional light required may be adopted—that is, the intensity of the light will vary inversely as the square of the distance from the source. Assuming, for instance, that brackets are placed at a height of six feet on the two front columns, a reading plane two feet above the floor and two feet out from the light source may be assumed for computation. The distance is then about four feet. If a lamp and reflector are selected which will give an intensity of 32 candlepower at 30 degrees with the vertical, the illumination will have been increased by two foot-candles. This could be done by a 23-watt tungsten lamp equipped with an efficient reflector, or by a 40-watt lamp with a less efficient but perhaps more attractive shade.

In the various other rooms of a hotel the use to which the room is to be put is a large factor in determining the nature of the illumination with which it shall be provided. In the dining room of a popular New York hotel three different intensities of illumination are provided. In the guest chambers cognizance must be taken of the fact that light must he available for reading and writing and provision made for ample illumination near the mirrors and dressing table. Lamps in hotel halls should be so placed that there will be no direct light glaring through the transom over the door into the rooms.

Efficiency in Office Buildings.

In office buildings the effect to be produced is not of cheerful welcome, but of clear-cut efficiency. The entrance should be brilliantly illuminated, with as few curiously designed fixtures as possible. Indirect lighting may be used to advantage on account of the neat appearance presented by the fixtures. The best effects in lighting the rooms of office buildings can be obtained by studding the ceiling with small lamps. The results of some valuable research work on office lighting by Mr. C. E. Clewell show that units should be evenly spaced on centers approximately seven feet apart.

It is in the halls of the modern office buildings the present-day illumination is shown to greatest advantage. The dimly lighted halls of the older office buildings have given way to cheerful, well-lighted passageways which impress a visitor with their business-like attractiveness.

SYSTEM IN MANAGEMENT.

Monthly Report Sheets Keep Building Managers Informed

By SPEAR & CO.

THE progressive business man is constantly seeking to reduce his business in terms of figures. Costs of material, labor and every possible expenditure that enter in the overhead charges are carefully tabulated, so that he can lay his finger at any moment of the day on any phase of his business.

This same principle is extended in our office to arrive at a detailed cost of management of each building.

As the care of business property is the very foundation of our business and not a mere side issue, the management department is the most important. Here all supplies and repairs are ordered and help engaged. It is apparent that the head of this department calls for an individual who is thoroughly conversant with every branch of the building trades; he must have a complete knowledge as to the value of the various supplies that are required in and about a building. His ability at arriving at a just estimate on contracts for repairs is a means of saving thousands for our clients every year. He makes the purchases for the office, and because these purchases are made in large quantities the individual owner receives the benefit of the lower prices that are obtained.

The System Explained.

The system that is followed in our office when supplies or repairs are made for any particular building is as follows:

A monthly report sheet is left at each building, which must be ready on the first of every month, signed by the engineer. This report, carefully kept during the month by the engineer, tells the building manager what supplies have been received and what are required; what repairs have been made, which mechanic did the work, how long it took him and what further repairs are needed; the amount of coal received, the amount burned, and the amount on hand; the readings of all meters, electricity, gas, and water.

The repairs which the engineer believes are required are passed upon by the building manager as to their absolute necessity. The letting out of the work must be done with an eye to economy; the building manager must see that the job is done properly and the right quality of material used. He must be careful to notice that no time is wasted by the mechanics doing a "time and material" job.

Results Are Tabulated.

The monthly sheet keeps the building manager informed as to the amount of coal consumed during the month, and if this amount varies to any extent from the average of previous months he immediately investigates the cause.

The readings of the various meters, electricity, gas, and water, carefully tabulated on the monthly sheet, must tally with the reports of the Edison Company, Gas Company, and Department of Water Supply.

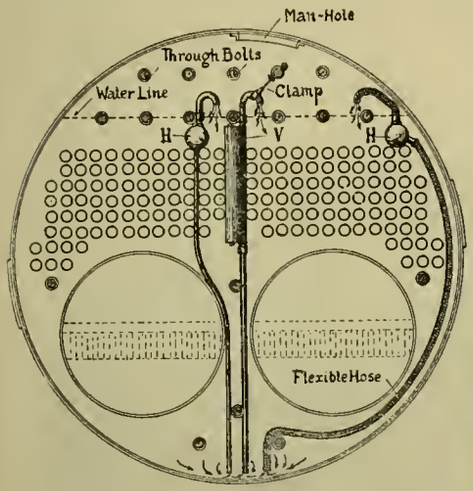
All bills are checked by three different department heads to see that they are absolutely correct before payment is made.

Every item of overhead charges is then entered on a card reserved for each building, so that each owner may know at any time what the expenditures for the year have been.

Unmarketable Real Estate Title.

A purchaser under a contract for the sale of real estate will not be compelled to take the property when he may be obliged to defend his possession by litigation, or to receive a title that is subject to probable claims by another, or that will not be reasonably free from any doubt which will interfere with its market value, or where a defect in the record title can only be supplied by resort to parol evidence and the title may depend on questions of fact. The New York State Court of Appeals has so decided in the case of Gustave Cerb, respondent, vs. Louisa B. Diener, appellant.

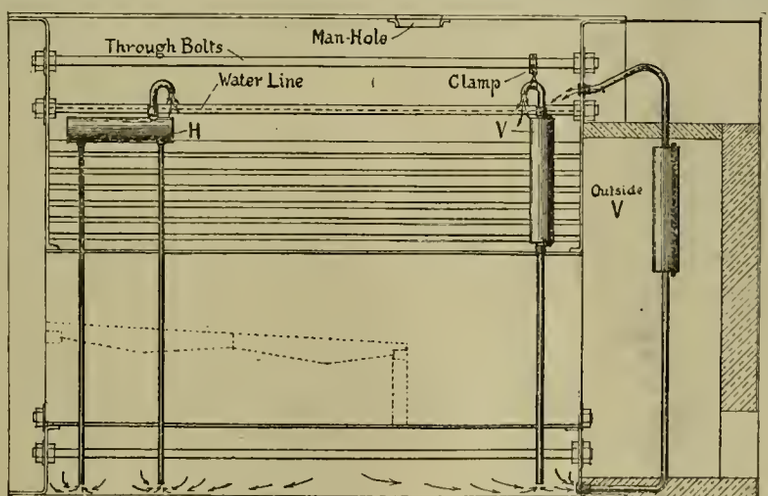
USEFUL APPLIANCES



Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

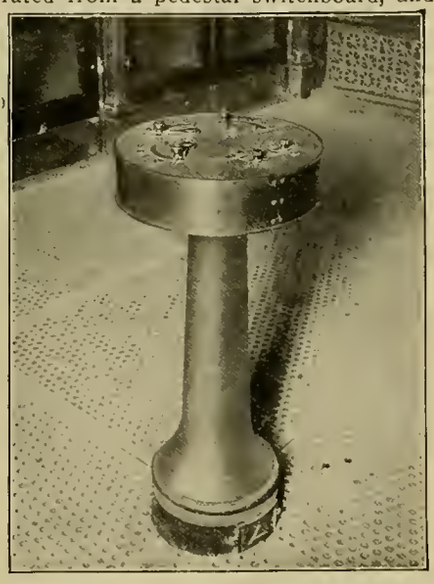
Prevents Cracking of Boilers.

EVERY building manager knows the serious consequences that result from cracked boiler shells and the fact that there is being introduced into this market a circulator that by a very simple operating principle insures equal temperature of water in all parts of the boiler should be of interest to any one concerned with the subject of boiler efficiency.



At the office of the Klein Circulator Company, 30 Church street, there is a model boiler which shows, through the agency of glass tubes, the operation of this device, which is as simple as it is effectual.

One cause of the cracking of boilers emanates from extreme difference in temperature of the upper and lower parts of the shell. The water above the fire always is hotter than that beneath it and the circulation takes this relatively cold water and automatically transfers it to the top, thus permitting the hot water to reach the bottom. This keeps the shell at an even temperature and prevents excessive expansion and contraction which produces the cracks.



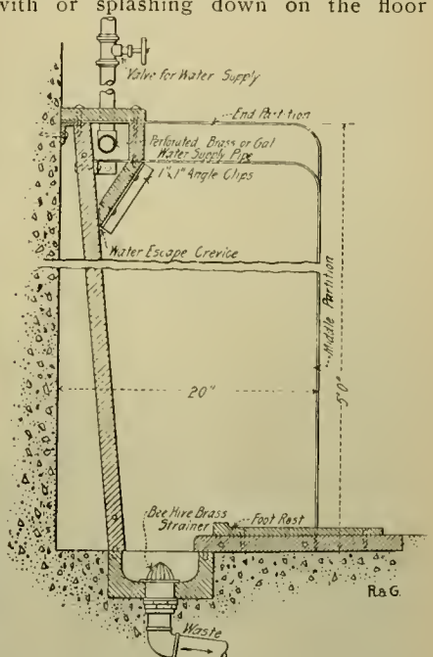
Incidentally even distribution of hot water in a boiler keeps down the cost of fuel.

The manufacturers claim for this device, which has been installed on some of the large ocean liners and on the Municipal ferry boats plying between Manhattan and Richmond, that a large quantity of water is saved, as it is not necessary to blow off the water to get the bottom warm; equalization of temperature is assured, preventing dangerous strains on the boiler shell; the repair cost is cut down and it offers no impediment to the cleaning or operation of the boiler. Once installed it requires no further attention, hence it has no maintenance charge and the first cost is merely nominal.

A New Electric Vehicle Call.

A NEW type of vehicle call has recently been installed in the department store of James McCreery & Co., for the convenience of shoppers. The feature of the call is that it is operated from a pedestal switchboard, and not from a panel in the wall as is generally the case with carriage calls.

The advantage of a pedestal form of switchboard is that it may be located in the center of the lobby where it will be in plain view of customers going out of the store. The wall type vehicle call was not considered for this installation as it is usually a source of delay to shoppers on account of the difficulty experienced in finding it.



The method of operating the switchboard, which was designed by the Western Electric Company, is extremely simple. When shoppers drive up to the store they receive a numbered check from the carriage man at the curb. On leaving the store, the check is surrendered to the switchboard man who moves the switch levers on the dial face of the pedestal to numbers corresponding to those on the check. This causes the numbers to be reproduced electrically on both sides of the vehicle call annunciator on the outside of the building.

The chauffeur or driver, who has received a duplicate check upon arriving at the store, can see immediately that he is wanted and drives to the entrance. If it is necessary to use the vehicle call after dark another lever switch on the switchboard dial can be used to light a bank of lamps which will illuminate the numbers.

Although the pedestal switchboard vehicle call has been in use only a short time, it is said already to have proved its value in the ease with which carriages and automobiles are moved.

An Improved Urinal.

THERE is on exhibition at the office of William G. Hill, 70 Wall street, a urinal stall of new and novel design. The claim made for it is that it is absolutely sanitary. Being made entirely of slate, it is practically everlasting. The essential feature of this device is that the water supply pipe is hidden above and behind the slate escape crevice, protecting the pipe from being tampered with or splashing down on the floor platform or footrests, thereby keeping them always dry. By this method the water flows evenly over the back wall and into the slate gutter. The flow of water is regulated by stop cock, or automatic cistern.

The general idea of the device is shown in the accompanying illustration. In outside appearance it looks like any other urinal, but the flow of water is so perfectly arranged that no part of the back wall can escape flushing as long as any water is admitted to the escape device set in above. No metal or material other than slate is employed in the stall, thus doing away with corrosion, with its unsanitary consequences.

Garbage Chutes in Buildings.

SO MANY inquiries have come to this department from architects and agents in charge of buildings as to whether there is any rule that prohibits the employment of garbage chutes in multi-tenanted buildings from two-family houses to apartment houses, that the following communication from the Tenement House Department, to which inquiry was made on this subject, is printed:

"There is nothing in the tenement house law specifically prohibiting garbage chutes, although the department believes them to be of an unsanitary nature, even under the best conditions. The department has made an inspection of a number of garbage chutes and has not found the condition sufficiently serious to advocate a change in the law in this respect."

The department, however, insists upon each chute having a positive automatic closing door, and that the chute be ventilated through the roof from the general receptacle in the basement to the door in the uppermost story.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

New Home of Automobile Club of America Designed to Meet the Requirements of Members—St. Bartholomew's Buildings.

WHILE many important buildings have been erected in New York during the last decade that are fine examples of architecture, and others of an ornate and individual character, yet none typifies more strikingly the modern spirit of advancement than the new building for the Automobile Club of America, which will be one of the most completely equipped garages in the world, and will be the last word in the proper housing and caring of automobiles for the members of the club.

The building has been designed by William H. Gompert, architect, in an appropriate style of French Renaissance architecture, it will cost $250,000 and cover an area of 25,500 square feet and will be four stories in height in 72d street and five stories in 71st street. The building is to be the pioneer of its type in America, and has been so designed that the automobiles will mount from floor to floor by means of ramps or inclines. These ramps have been designed to serve every possible requirement from a standpoint of safety and utility. Elevators will be entirely eliminated, with the exception of one elevator for the purpose of carrying disabled cars, and the ramps have been designed so that it will be possible for two machines to pass at any point with the utmost safety.

Every modern equipment possible for convenience and safety are to be installed in the building, and it is the aim of the club to furnish to its members accommodations and service which cannot be obtained in any other club or garage in the city. The building will be equipped in all parts with a sprinkler system, and every other precaution has been taken to eliminate the fire hazard. A compressed air apparatus will be installed with outlets in various parts of the building, so that automobile tires can be inflated without moving the machine from its assigned position. A vacuum cleaning system will also be installed with outlets in various parts of the building so automobiles can be readily cleaned by the most modern process.

Electrical outlets are to be located at convenient points to enable a mechanician to adjust or repair a car at its assigned position.

The property is owned by George M. Storm, and is leased to the Automobile Club for a period of twenty-one years. H. B. Anderson, president of the club, and Mr. Gompert, the architect, have spent considerable time in research and experimenting in order that the building and its equipment will meet with every requirement from the standpoint of utility. Since the Automobile Club now numbers among its members many prominent women, the new building has been designed to afford accommodation for women as well as men.

The New St. Bartholomew's.

Bertram C. Goodhue, architect, 2 West 47th street, has been retained by the vestry and building committee of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church to prepare the plans and specifications for their new group of structures, including a church edifice. It is proposed to erect these buildings on the site of the old Schaefer brewery, on the east side of Park avenue, from 50th to 51st streets, which the trustees recently voted to purchase. Mr. Goodhue has completed his preliminary studies, and they have been approved by the committee and vestry, but announcement as to the style chosen and exact number of buildings projected cannot be made at present. It is assumed, however, that the project will include the church, Sunday school, rectory and parish house, and possibly a parish school.

The northward trend of business has resulted in forcing many of the parishioners of St. Bartholomew's to seek new homes farther uptown. The completion of the Park avenue improvement and the erection of many fine homes and high-class apartments along the avenue and the adjacent streets has made this neighborhood the one selected as the new home of many families who have been connected with St. Bartholomew's parish for years. It seems quite fitting, therefore, that the church should follow its parishioners.

On account of the improvements in the Grand Central zone, the completion of the Grand Central terminal and the Biltmore Hotel, and the further improvement of Madison and Vanderbilt avenues with modern office and loft buildings and club houses, the value of the site occupied by the present church building at the southwest corner of 44th street and Madison avenue has appreciated greatly. The Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, rector of St. Bartholomew's, felt some time ago that it would be advisable for the vestry to sell its property at the market price. The money obtained for this site would in a large measure provide funds for the purchase of a new site and the erection of a group of new buildings. It was thought that there might even be a monetary balance to use as the nucleus of an endowment fund. When the opportunity to take over the Schaefer property was presented to the members of the vestry they quickly availed themselves of it, inasmuch as the new site is almost in the exact center of the present parish limits.

A Historic Organization.

St. Bartholomew's is one of the city's oldest and best known Episcopal churches. It was established in Broome street in 1835. Since the removal to the present site, at Madison avenue and 44th street, the work of the parish has greatly increased until the past year, when the budget called for an expenditure of over $250,000 to be used for the maintenance of its schools, missions and branch chapels and the extension of its social work. This social work in its parish alone directly reaches approximately 10,000 people.

Many of the works of art now standing in the old building will be incorporated and erected in the new scheme. The beautiful bronze doors, the gift of Mrs. Vanderbilt as a memorial to her husband, the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, will be reset in the new building. These doors, architecturally and for the beauty of their workmanship, are the equal, if not superior, of any of their kind in the city. The painting over the altar, "Christ in Glory," which was painted many years ago by Lathrop, and which has been admired by all who visit St. Bartholomew's, will undoubtedly be rehung. Statuary and tablets, the memorials of St. Bartholomew's prominent parishioners, will be reset in the new building.

There is no doubt that the selection of the new site will result in greatly widening the field of parish work and will enrich the city by the addition of a group of buildings which will compare favorably in architectural beauty with the best and newest of their kind, namely, St. Thomas's, Cathedral of St. John the Divine and the Chapel of the Intercession.

Small Decrease in May Building.

Reports to Bradstreet's Journal from 137 cities of the United States show total building expenditures of $76,338,749 for the month of May, as compared with $74,748,875 during April and $80,776,267 in May a year ago. There is here indicated an increase of 2.1 per cent. over April, but a decrease of 5.4 per cent. from May, 1913, with 77 cities showing decreases and 60 showing increases as compared with the latter month.

New York City shows something like a turn in the tide, reporting, as it does, the first increase in expenditure over the same month a year ago reported for the last 15 months. In this city (four out of five boroughs reporting) the expenditures in May were $15,809,427, or about one-fifth of the entire country's total—a gain over April of 9.2 per cent., and an increase over May last year of 15.4 per cent.

The Tower Building Was Sound.

The investigation made by the Bureau of Buildings when the Tower Building, at 50 Broadway, was in process of demolition resulted in disclosing no unusual feature. No instance of corrosion of metal sufficient to impair the strength of the building was uncovered, but there was the usual formation of rust between contact surfaces, extra probability of corrosion near the ends of beams resting on brick or stone work, and of improperly cleaned iron under the paint, and the excellent protection afforded by cement mortar in close contact with the metal.

As linseed oil paint in contact with cement becomes dry and incohesive, it is considered immaterial by Superintendent Miller whether steel thoroughly incased in cement mortar or concrete is painted or not.

The building, which was about 159½ feet deep and from 21½ to 39½ feet wide, had cast iron columns. The floor beams and girders were wrought iron I-beams with bolted field connections, and although the outer walls of the lower five stories were supported on wall beams at each floor, the floor beams in the upper five stories were wall bearing, thus making the building conform only partly to the cage type of construction. The foundations were double rows of wooden piles driven to hardpan. The flat side-bearing terra cotta floor arches were sprung between the webs of floor beams 4½ feet apart, and did not incase their lower flanges. The building was erected in 1889 from plans by Bradford L. Gilbert.

Our Modern Frontiers.

In the history of every city the principal area of activity for original building operations is always on the outskirts of that city. Year after year the demarcation between city and country is steadily advanced, as tracts of land are opened to intensive improvement by builders. Every year the building contractor and mechanic seeking this new work must go farther afield to find it.

Thirty years ago there were three distinct movements in speculative real estate on Manhattan Island. One was centered on the West Side, near 72d street, one was in the Yorkville section of the East Side, and the third principal field of operations was in old Harlem, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, 126th and 133d streets. These were the frontiers of that era. In each of these movements a different class of construction was in hand, and the projects in each were conceived and carried forward mainly by operators and builders of the immediate locality. Landing places for brick and other materials of construction were close by in most cases, and the job was not far from the shop.

But now the seats of original building operations are numerous and are miles away from the center of the city. Within the decade our brick builders have finished with Washington Heights for the time being and have reached the Inwood section. Soon there will be no frontier left for Manhattan. In other boroughs the seats of original building development have followed the lines of rapid transit until in some directions they have reached the city line. Were it not for a following wave of improvement real estate developers in central sections would be left with nothing to do. Every succeeding generation, however, sees a new building campaign advancing over old ground.

Dr. Paterno Selects Architect.

Gaetan Ajello, of 1 West 34th street, has been commissioned by Dr. Charles V. Paterno, president of the Paterno Construction Company, to design plans and specifications for the improvement of his recently purchased plot at the northwest corner of Broadway and 84th street with a fourteen-story apartment house of the highest type. The site comprises about six city lots, having dimensions of 102.5x133.5x140.7x102.2 feet. The Ajello System of reinforced concrete floor construction is to be employed in this building for which The Building Improvement Co. (Burchartz American Floor Systems), of 17 Battery place, recently contracted with Mr. Ajello for his patents. On account of the adoption of this system which reduces the floor thickness a saving of four feet over the total height of the building is effected which is to be utilized in the height of the first story stores on the Broadway side. It will be recalled that Dr. Paterno recently sold to Benjamin N. Duke, the tobacco manufacturer, his twelve-story apartment house at the southwest corner of Seventh avenue and 58th street, on plot 100x100 feet. The building which was held at $1,300,000, was completed last autumn, from plans by Mr. Ajello, and has a total rent roll of about $125,000 a year.

Hotel McAlpin Annex.

Announcement has been made that an addition to the Hotel McAlpin, on the southeast corner of Broadway and 34th street, will be erected on the property adjoining the hotel on the east which was recently acquired by the Hotel Company. The site takes in numbers 46 and 48 East 34th street, which was part of the Floyd estate. It is proposed to erect an addition which will contain two hundred additional bed rooms as well as extra public space. No plans have been prepared as yet and the full details have not been decided upon, except for the fact that the addition will harmonize with the original building and in fact become an integral part of it. The building is owned by the Greeley Square Hotel Company, Chas. A. B. Pratt, president, and operated by Merry and Boomer, proprietors.

New Trinity Chapel Seems Assured.

An Alternative Route.

The Public Service Commission has adopted an alternative route, called the Spruce Street Route, which may take the place of a portion of the Park Place, William and Clark Street Route in Manhattan. The route will run north of, instead of under, the United States post office property. The route, as it formerly stood, left the Seventh avenue subway at West Broadway and ran east through Park place, under the New York municipal subway in Broadway, and thence under the northern end of the post office property to Beekman street, through Beekman to William street, and down William street to Old Slip and the proposed tunnel under the East River. At the time the old route was laid out, Congress, at the request of the commission, passed a special act permitting the construction of a subway underneath the post office property. Last winter the commission forwarded to the Treasury Department a form of deed for the proposed easement. Since that time the commission has been negotiating with that department for the necessary easement.

Will Repave West Fourth Street.

The Local Board of Greenwich has adopted a resolution for repaving West Fourth street, from the west side of Fifth avenue to the south side of 13th street, with wood block pavement by substituting sheet asphalt. Petition of the St. John's Park Realty Co. The cost of paving with sheet asphalt is $3,595. The cost for wood was $5,565. This is one of the cases where the work of repaving must be done by assessment, for the reason that no trace of the original assessment for paving the street can be found.

Commerce Board Orders Form of Freight Bill.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has approved a new form of freight bill, agreed upon by shippers and carriers, who have been in conference with the commission on this subject.

In the past, freight bills in many instances have not sown sufficient information to enable the consignee to determine either the name of the shipper, the point from which shipped, or the proper rate to apply on the goods covered by the freight bill. This has led to a great deal of complaint, and The Merchants' Association has taken up numerous instances with the carriers for the purpose of securing enough information for members who have complained, to enable them accurately to check the charges.

Another cause for complaint against the incomplete freight bill is that frequently merchants in the country will return goods to dealers in the city without giving any notice that the goods have been returned. When such goods arrive, city merchants have not been able to identify them by the freight bill. This has been the cause of a great many annoying differences in accounts.

In disposing of this matter the Inter-State Commerce Commisison has ruled that the freight bill should show:

1. The point of origin.
2. Date of shipment.
3. Weight of shipment.
4. Route by which the shipment moved.
5. Proper car number.
6. An adequate description of the property.
7. The correct freight rate.
8. Complete information regarding any charges in addition to the freight rate.
9. The name of the consignor, and date of arrival at destination.

The new form provides space for all this information to be shown, and as the ruling of the commission is in line with the views of the carriers, it is quite probable that when the new forms come into general use, causes for complaint in this respect will be greatly reduced. Wherever the freight bills are rendered showing incomplete information, the Traffic Bureau will be glad to take the matter up with the carriers at fault.

TRADE LITERATURE

Brascolite Installation.

MODERN construction and equipment are exemplified in every way in the Lathrop Building, just being completed in Kansas City, Mo. From the viewpoint of building managers and superintendents, one of the most interesting features is the lighting system installed. Having in mind the beauty and utility of the fixtures, as well as economy of installation and maintenance, the owners, after careful investigation, selected the Bascolite System for the entire building—lobby, corridors and offices.

The Brascolite fixtures chosen for the lobby are known as type MA, handsome cast bronze units, hand-chased, with white enamel reflectors and inverted white glass bowls of artistic design.

For the rooms and corridors type AB Brascolites were selected—these all-glass fixtures having the white reflector fitting close to the ceiling and the ornamental white bowl suspended from it on short brass spindles.

The use of Brascolite meant economy of installation. Fewer units were required to secure maximum lighting efficiency—the light rays being diffused through the suspended bowl and also reflected by the depolished white plane above the lamp. Photometric tests have proved Brascolites 50 per cent. more efficient than indirect lighting, according to the manufacturers, yet with all the eye-comfort and diffusive benefits of the indirect system.

Economy in operation is brought about by the reduced current consumption and the fact that a hole in the bottom of the bowl perfects the ventilation and increases the life of the lamp 30 per cent. over that of lamps enclosed in glass balls. Brascolites are made by the Luminous Unit Company of St. Louis.

Engineers' Hand Book.

The literature dealing with many branches of heating and ventilating is extensive and complete, but that relating to fans and blowers is exceedingly limited—at least that which treats of these subjects outside the realm of technical terms. Busy men have little time to spend in discussing the theories of which the practical results are known, or in following the derivation of formulæ which no one disputes. The treatise on fan engineering published by the Buffalo Forge Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., under the title given above, should be of interest and help to engineers and architects.

In this volume of 581 pages we find first a brief description of the composition, properties and physical characteristics of air; then, after a description of the application of the fan to heating, ventilation, air conditioning and mechanical shaft, the author takes up in succession the apparatus used in connection with fan engineering. Finally discussing several miscellaneous problems, the book closes with a brief but excellent index. It constitutes a practical, concise and fairly exhaustive exposition of the subject.

In each chapter sufficient tabulated data, curves and illustrations are presented to enable the user to understand the subject and make necessary calculations without reference to other text books. This data is standard and may be used with any standard make of equipment. The book may therefore be used as a guide in the selection and application of fans, heaters and kindred apparatus.

A Victory for Indirect Lighting.

When the owners of a building as large as the magnificent Trianon Theatre at New Orleans decide that, from the standpoint of art and utility, indirect lighting justifies the banishments of the old form of direct lighting, it is time for theatres and moving picture theatre proprietors to take notice.

After an examination of the various systems now in use, the owners of the Trianon decided that their requirements were most satisfactorily met by the Frink and J-M Cove System of Lighting.

This system consists of lamps set in specially designed Frink reflectors, placed in the coves behind the cornice. In this way large auditoriums are perfectly lighted without a lamp being visible. A powerful light is thrown on the ceiling, and from the ceiling it is reflected into the theatre.

The best results are obtained by the use of J-M Linolite lamps in connection with Frink reflectors. These lamps are tubular in form, measuring about one foot in length by one inch in diameter. On account of this small diameter they can be concealed in a much shallower cove than would be required by ordinary bulb lamps. When joined, end to end, J-M Linolite lamps produce a continuous "line of light" which eliminates the "spotty" effect caused by standard bulbs. The contract for this work was placed with the New Orleans branch of the H. W. Johns-Manville Co., who will be glad to send free to anyone interested an illustrated booklet on the subject of theatre, church, bank or store lighting.

Cost Accounting on Construction.

The paper read by Leslie H. Allen of the Aberthaw Construction Company, Boston, before the Boston Society of Civil Engineers, March 25, 1914, on the subject of cost accounting, is being reprinted and will be mailed gratis by the Aberthaw Construction Company to anyone who asks for it. This paper is believed to be the first which has been presented on the principles and methods of cost accounting on construction work. It has been prepared with the idea of showing just how this procedure can be made to conserve the interest of both contractor and owner, particularly under the rapidly increasing use of cost-plus-profit form of contract. It is at once flexible and extremely accurate, and should conserve the best interests of all concerned.

Gas Machines for All Uses.

In presenting its latest catalogue of gas machines the Alexander Milburn Company, of Baltimore, Md., calls particular attention to the wide range of installations possible with the "Homegas" machine. The catalogue emphasizes the guaranty of the company against any defect in workmanship and general efficiency. The fact that there are now over 75,000 Milburn machines in successful operation is mentioned in the catalogue as proof of the entire safety and feasibility of gas making machines for urban and suburban use.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

COMMERCIAL AGENCIES VERIFY RECORD AND GUIDE'S PREDICTION OF IMPENDING IMPROVEMENT IN BUILDING CONSTRUCTION

Foundry and Steel Making Pig Iron
Demand Holds Firm—Brick Production

VERIFYING what was predicted in the Record and Guide several weeks ago regarding the tendency toward improvement in building construction and purchase of materials, the leading commercial agencies show an actual gain for New York. Bradstreets gives the percentage of building gain as 10.9 over last May with only two boroughs, Manhattan and Bronx reporting, while Dun's Review computing all five boroughs reports a gain of 16.5 per cent. over the totals for the corresponding period last year. The value of new buildings reported for May, 1914, was $14,380,496 against only $12,339,100 for Greater New York, May, 1913.

Incidentally, seventy-seven cities reporting to Dun's show a total expenditure of $69,876,927, a decrease of only 0.1 per cent. as compared with the $69,948,660 covering the same number of cities in the same month last year. Bradstreets, reporting ninety cities, shows a gain over those of April at identical cities.

The expenditures for May this year, according to Bradstreets, aggregate $54,801,577 as against $51,924,194 in April. In May last year this agency reported a total expenditure of $57,535,802. There is here shown a gain of 5.5 per cent. over April, but a decrease of 7.9 per cent. from May last year. Newark, however, showed a decrease of 52 per cent.

Reports showing the movement of building materials throughout the country do not yet fully corroborate the more optimistic tone contained in new building plan filings, but in some sections there certainly has been a change noted for the better, however slight. Here in this market basic commodities have been in better demand and in some cases quotations have drawn back nearer to list. That is to say, shading has not been so free, especially in brick and cement. Hardware and hardwoods are being quoted closer to list than formerly, window glass is firmer on quotation and so is pig iron and steel. On the other hand, vitrified sewer pipe was sharply reduced in price on June 1 and crude oil at the wells is reported to be seventy cents a barrel cheaper. Sand, crushed stone and similar concrete ingredients, lumber and slate are all being held more rigidly to base, especially on contracts calling for late third-quarter deliveries.

Plan filings for new buildings in the five boroughs this week compared with those of last week follow:

	Week Ending
	No.	June 4	No.	June 11
Manhattan	8	$ 571,000	4	$ 225,500
Bronx	8	680,150	22	658,950

Queens	144	679,250	165	598,985

National Radiator and Railroad Supply Company in Iron Market.

THE "Iron Age" and the "Journal of Commerce" continue to report improvement in pig iron purchases and in the demand for steel. The former in its current report says that encouragement has come to the steel trade from several directions since the first of the month, and cites orders for 10,700 cars, taking more than 100,000 tons of plates and shapes to Pittsburgh mills; more pipe line buying than has been reported in months and a great improvement in bar buying. A better inquiry from implement manufacturers has developed. The latter reports the National Radiator Company in the market for foundry iron and also the Gould Coupler Company.

The significance of these two reports rests in the fact that lines dealing in basic commodities affecting largely the general welfare of the country are noting the change for the better. Continued evidences of returning confidence manifested by further placing of iron orders by railroads and equipment and implement manufacturers will have a stimulating influence upon prospective builders who already are showing signs of again coming into the market for basic building materials.

METROPOLITAN BRICK PRODUCTION.

Government Report Shows Result of Back to Brick Campaign.

THE Hudson River region produced 1,025,308,000 brick in 1913, valued at $5,636,061, according to a statement by Jefferson Middleton, of the United States Geological Survey. Large as these figures are, they show a decrease of 207,879,000 brick and $1,497,116 in value compared with 1912.

New York City is the leading market for common brick in the United States, hundreds of millions of brick being used here annually The principal source of this supply is the Hudson River region, extending from New York to Cohoes on both sides of the river. Bergen County has also contributed largely to this market, and within the last two years the Raritan River region, located in Middlesex County, has sent the larger portion of its output of common brick to the New York market. Connecticut also is at times a factor in the New York brick market. The water transportation enjoyed by the Hudson River yards and those located in the Hackensack and Raritan districts, however, gives them a great advantage, and it is only when prices are high—say $7—that Connecticut brick can profitably enter New York City market. As prices were usually low in 1913, few if any Connecticut brick were shipped to New York during that year.

The principal use of the brick made in the Hudson River region is and probably always will be the building industry of New York. Notwithstanding the fact that the expenditures for building operations in New York City decreased about 35 per cent. in 1913 compared with 1912, the number of brick marketed decreased less than half as much, thus showing that the use of brick in building is expanding and that they are also being used more extensively than ever before for other purposes, such as sewers and subways.

The "Back to Brick" campaign is apparently having its effect, not only on the demand for common brick, but also on that for the higher grades of building brick and other clay products, such as hollow building brick, tile and terra cotta.

The average price obtained from brick in 1913 was $5.50 a thousand.

EQUIPMENT.

Radiator Companies Buying Iron—Larger Demand for Pipe.

HARDWARE interests are the most optimistic among the equipment companies. In this line there has been a good export business ever since the new tariff went into effect, and the new system of imposts have not interfered seriously with the supplies in which this trade is interested. Of late, according to Henry R. Towne, the president of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company, there has been a slight improvement in the inquiry for building grades of hardware, but whether it is due to a general change for the better in this line of business or only an indication that the 1914 building season is at last getting under way, he was not prepared to say. "At any rate," he said, "purchasers of hardware are in the market, and, furthermore, seem to be providing themselves with articles of domestic manufacture in preference to foreign makes, as they have always done. That alone is encouraging."

In the pipe department, there is unquestionably a change for the better, according to an official of the National Tube Co. "This is doubtless due to the change in price that was recently made, but unquestionably there is a bigger and steadier buying movement under way. Radiator companies are buying pig iron more freely."

COMMON BRICK.

Demand Spotty—Arrivals and Sales Compare With Last Year's.

THE week developed a gain in unloading of common brick over last week's total, but no change in demand or prices. The wholesale barge movement is comparable with that for the corresponding week last year. The market is a little more optimistic than it was at this time in May, but buying is still spotty throughout the metropolitan district.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, June 11, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

SAND LIME BRICK.

Marked Increase in Production of This Building Material.

SAND lime brick as a building commodity is gaining in favor, according to the annual report of the U. S. Geological Survey by Jefferson Middleton covering this industry, just published. The year 1913 was a record-breaker, the total output reported being valued at $1,238,325 or $12,556 more than in 1907, the year of maximum value prior to 1913.

Michigan continued to be the leading State, the value of its product constituting 26 per cent. of the total value of all sand-lime brick produced in 1913. New York was second in 1913, as in 1912, reporting 11 per cent.; Minnesota regained third place, from which it was displaced by Florida in 1912, and Florida was fourth in 1913. Eight States—California, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin—showed increases in 1913 over 1912, and three—Florida, Idaho and Indiana—showed decrease.

The average price per thousand for common sand-lime brick was $6.27 in 1912, compared with $6.46 in 1912 and $6.09 in 1911; for front brick it was $10.61 in 1913 and $10.41 in 1912.

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

NEW YORK, JUNE 20, 1914

UNFAIRNESS OF THE COMPENSATION LAW

Employers Unanimous that Compensation Rate is Excessive—Cost of Insurance in Stock Companies Announced.

EMPLOYERS who believe in a workmen's compensation insurance law on general principles charge the New York State law with being unfair. It is unfair, for one reason given, because the rate of compensation fixed by the law is excessive, when compared with the rates paid in other States and countries.

By July 1 every employer in the so-called hazardous trades must be insured, unless the State shall permit him to carry his own insurance. The employers affiliated with the Building Trades Employers' Association will for the most part insure with the stock companies, but a couple of mutual companies are being organized.

The standard stock company rates for insurance policies approved by the State Superintendent of Insurance were made public this week. Figured upon the cost for every $100 of insurance protection, the rate for masonry work, for example, is $6.16, and for carpenters doing construction work, $4.28. The rates for other trades are annexed hereto.

Under the Workmen's Compensation Law the employer must pay something for every disabling accident (with rare exceptions) to an employe, either doctors' bills or compensation, or both. And in some cases the compensation payments will extend over a long period of years—possibly fifty years or more. The owners of apartment houses and hotels come under the law as well as manufacturers and contractors.

Risks of Not Insuring.

An employer who does not insure runs two risks: (1) He can be sued by an injured employe for "damages" under the common law (the Employers' Liability Law), and, if sued, cannot avail himself of the defenses of "contributory negligence" or "assumption of risk" on the part of the injured employe, and the old "fellow servant" rule (or defense) is also taken away; and (2) such employer becomes liable to a suit by the State commission for other penalties.

The scale of compensation for this State is, generally speaking, two-thirds of the employe's average weekly wage for the year previous, but not less than $5 per week, nor more than $15 per week, except for the loss of hand, arm, foot, leg or eye, where the higher limit is $20 per week to workmen who have earned more than $30 weekly. Payments must continue until disability ceases.

For permanent total disability, every workman who is in receipt of wages of $22.50 per week or over when injured will be entitled to the maximum weekly payment of $15, or an annual pension of $780 for life. What will be the average cost of such pensions is an actuarial question. But foreign experience indicates that those drawing permanent disability pensions have a surprisingly long life expectancy. Consequently, such pensions may frequently run for sixty years or more, so that an aggregate of $46,800 in a single case may not be unusual. And the employer's liability will continue long after he has retired from business, or it may be a charge upon his estate.

A Possible Case.

P. Tecumseh Sherman, former Commissioner of Labor, who has criticised the law as containing many unjust, uncertain and defective provisions, has given the following case to illustrate what, under certain circumstances, may be the cost of an employer's liability:

WORKMAN KILLED—AGED 24—WAGES $20 PER WEEK.

	Annual Pension.	Duration in years.	Total.
Wife, aged 22 years...	$300	50	$15,000
Child, aged 1 month...	100	18	1,800
Child, aged 2 years....	100	16	1,600
Mother, aged 45 years..	150	25	3,750

The following table will illustrate the excessive compensations provided for by the New York State law, in comparison with the compensations that are being paid in other States. For example, the State of Michigan requires an employer to pay a workman for the loss of an eye weekly sums that will aggregate $1,000; Ohio allows $1,200; Connecticut, $1,040; New Jersey, $1,000, and New York, $2,500.

Illustration of Death Benefits.

If a young man or woman 20 years and 11 months old, earning regularly $15 per week, be killed, leaving as sole dependent a widowed mother, aged 45, totally dependent, then the death benefits under the laws of the following States and countries respectively are as follows:

New York.....	Annual pension of $117 to mother for life.
California	Weekly pension of $9.75 to mother, until aggregate of $2,340 is reached.
Ohio.....	Weekly pension of $10 to mother for 313 weeks, aggregating $3,130.
Connecticut	Weekly pension of $7.50 to mother for 312 weeks, aggregating $2,340.
Michigan	Weekly pension of $7.50 to mother for 300 weeks, aggregating $2,250.
New Zealand...	A lump sum of $1,946.60.
British Columbia.	A lump sum of $1,500.
Great Britain...	A lump sum of $1,459.95.
France	Annual pension of $54.24 to mother for life.
Germany	Annual pension of $99.60 to mother for life.
Austria	Annual pension of $97.44 to mother for life.

Possibly a Source of Profit.

Employers in some of the building trades said this week that a compensation rate of 66 2/3 per cent. of the average wages of a workman in the year preceding the receipt of his injury might conceivably amount to more than he would actually earn during the rest of his life if not disabled. A compensation rate of 66⅔ per cent. based on wages earned in the busy year of 1906 would be in excess of what the man would have earned in a dull year like 1913, for instance. A life pension for the loss of the use of an arm (not necessarily of the arm itself), based on the earnings of a boom year, when employers were paying a bonus for good labor, might be a source of profit to a workman.

The Feeling Among Employers.

The Record and Guide made an effort to learn the feeling among employers with which the new law is regarded. It was found that the prevailing sentiment is not opposed to the principle of compensation for injuries, but that there is a deep feeling that a great injustice is being done to employers by the high rates of compensation fixed by the law.

President Francis N. Howland of the Association of Manufacturers and Dealers in Building Materials (also of the Candee, Smith & Howland Company) expressed this view: "While a compensation law would seem to be called for under present conditions, it ought of necessity to be a fair one; and this present law is not so and will be a hardship to building interests. It will add greatly to the cost of construction. The rate of 66 2/3 per cent. is not considered a fair one."

President Frank E. Conover of the Master Builders' Association characterized the compensation rate as excessive when compared with the rates in other States, and said that this will be one more reason why manufacturers will want to leave New York when circumstances will permit.

Lewis Harding of Lewis Harding & Co., contractors for carpenter and cabinet work, chairman of the Industrial Improvement Committee of the Building Trades Employers' Association, remarked: "A very large percentage of the men employed in the building industry believe in workmen's compensation, but the opinion seems to be unanimous that the rate of 66 2/3 per cent. is too high. There seems to be no good reason why the industry in New York State should be taxed double what it is in other States. In my opinion the ultimate effect will be that the cost of labor connected with building construction will be increased about 5 per cent."

They Believe in Compensation.

Alexander M. Bing, of Bing & Bing and the Speedwell Construction Company, said: "We believe workmen's compensation to be absolutely fair and necessary and infinitely preferable to the system which it will supersede. The rate seems to be considered a little high. We are not prepared to state whether or not this is the case. Another objection seems to be the very great length of time during which liability might continue to the widow, etc. It would seem that some fair amendment might be made which would conserve the interests of the widow and children, and shorten the length of time during which the matter would be pending. The cost of construction will undoubtedly be materially increased, but it is surely better to have the buildings cost a little more and have injuries properly compensated. In the long run the community will be much better off, it seems to us, under the new system."

Edwin Outwater, vice-president of the Building Trades Employers' Association, said that while the cost of construction would undoubtedly be raised through the operation of the law, yet it would eliminate the gambling on the chance of accident, which in itself will be a factor in the increased cost of construction. And workmen would be benefited, as the law eliminates many causes which had in the past worked a hardship against the person injured.

Frederick T. Youngs, of Jacob & Youngs, builders, said: "The building interests are in favor of a rational workmen's compensation law, but they do not consider the compensation at all fair, when it is understood that a single accident to one person may cost over $32,000, while no other State awards over $5,000, and in most of them from $3,000 to $3,500. Proportionately unreasonable awards are made for loss of limbs, eyes, etc., as well as for disability."

Wright D. Goss, president of the Empire Brick and Supply Company, 103 Park avenue, stated:

"As to what is thought of the fairness and necessity of the law by the building interests, I am not prepared to state, except that in general conversation I find that practically all of the industry are of the opinion that the requirements of the law which will come into operation on July 1st are harsh in many of its features. While most men approve of the principle of the compensation insurance, it must be conceded that the rates of the compensation and other general conditions should be fair and liberal to all interested and ought to conform to the conditions and rates established in States adjacent to New York State. To my mind the rate of compensation of 66 2/3 per cent. is not fair when compared with the rates in other States."

NEW BOROUGH FIRE LIMITS DECIDED ON

Will Be Contained in a Separate Ordinance to Be Introduced Next Week in Board of Aldermen—A Hearing Next Friday.

ATTACHED are the outlines of the fire limits of the several boroughs as they will probably be reported by the Committee on Buildings. The committee expects to make a report to the Board of Aldermen next Tuesday, and to give a public hearing on the subject on the following Friday at 2 p. m. The ordinance which will fix these fire limits will provide that no frame structure, except such as may be provided for in other ordinances, shall be erected within the limits given. It will also prohibit the erection or enlarging of existing frame structures, and will prohibit the reconstruction of frame structures damaged or in need of repairs to more than 50 per cent. of their value exclusive of the foundations. It will also prohibit the moving of frame structures from without to within the fire limits and from one location to another within the fire limits. The enforcement of the ordinance will rest, as heretofore, with the Superintendent of Buildings in each borough. The penalties remain the same as now provided in the Building Code. The ordinance will go into effect immediately.

EMPHASIZES CITY'S NORTHWARD GROWTH

Choice Plots at North City Line to Be Sold at Absolute Auction to Highest Bidder—Property in Growing Section

SOMETHING of an innovation in real estate is embodied in the coming sale by auction of 197 lots, fronting on Broadway, opposite Van Cortlandt Park, at the line between the cities of New York and Yonkers. They are unique in character and in a section that should forcefully appeal to the homeseeker.

The nature of this land quite readily lends itself to picturesque improvements such as homes atop hillocks and knolls amidst settings of beautiful trees and views. The development which these lots are susceptible of is to be taken in at a glance in the Van Cortlandt Terrace property immediately to the north, which is similar in topography and where homes exist that cost on an average of $20,000.

The lots, which are to be offered on Tuesday by Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies, who have been instructed to sell regardless of prices developed by the public bidding, have, however, possibilities of development along the high-grade apartment houses, which, even now, is a strong probability, because of the fact that close by is the terminus of the Broadway subway which connects with the Yonkers trolley cars to Getty Square and also because the improvements of that type, which have invaded many sites along Broadway, north and south of the lots and well into Yonkers, are not lacking for tenants.

FANSHAW AVENUE, NEAR PROPERTY TO BE SOLD.

ELLSWORTH AVENUE, ADJOINING NEW YORK CITY LINE.

The northern growth is apparent even to the casual visitor and is confirmed by the annual report of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. The ticket sales at 181st street station far exceed those at the 157th street station which up to the year 1913 was in the lead.

Ten and twelve-story, high-class apartment houses along Broadway and the adjacent side streets have been and are being erected even in the present scarce-money market and it will be only a few years before the Broadway City Line property will have on it similar houses, as the City of Yonkers has already grown southwest to it and the City of New York is fast building up to it. This section contains the residences of such people as Frank Hedley, vice-president and general manager of the Interborough Rapid Transit System; George W. Perkins, Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the New York Life Insurance Company; George B. Cortelyou, president of the Consolidated Gas Company, and John Ross Delafield, and the trustees of the Horace Mann School, have decided to build the new school in the section just south of Broadway City Line property.

More buildings are going up every day, due to the transit facilities which surround the lots and the proximity of the section to the surface cars connecting with the subway at 242d street and Broadway and the Caryl station. All the streets in the property have been conveyed to the city so that there will be no future assessment for this purpose.

"Everyone now knows, or should know, that transit facilities create real estate values," said Messrs. Davies and Day yesterday, "and those who buy lots at this sale will gain, for they have excellent transit facilities, for trolley cars and automobiles pass them in steady streams at all hours of the day. Present conditions of Broadway in the upper part of the city clearly reflect the future of this property in the substantial improvements that have been made there since the subway was brought to its present terminus and which at no distant day, will be extended to the Broadway City Line.

"All of the 197 lots are to be disposed of without reserve to the highest bidder and any one with a few hundred dollars will be able to buy at least one of these lots on next Tuesday, and they need not have any fear as to the future value of their property as it should increase from 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. in value per annum."

Floaters.

There are a lot of people living in New York City fitly termed "floating tenants," campers out, who pay four to five months' rent during the year for twelve months' occupancy. First they get a bonus of a month's rent free on payment of the second month's rent; then beat out the third month's rent; they are then dispossessed at an expense for dispossessing and redecorating with three months' occupancy and with only one month's rent to the landlord.

A possible cure for this may be to make the contents of the apartments responsible for the rent. Why should the installment furniture men or the fake bill of sale be favorably treated? Confirmed beats move out with furniture often worth $1,000 and the landlord has no recourse.—Real Estate Board's Bulletin.

MILLIONS INVOLVED IN NEW OPERATIONS

New Structures Being Erected On Fifth, Sixth, Seventh and Madison Avenues; also in the Thirties and Forties.

DURING the last few months there has been an awakening of the building market and a number of operations involving large sums of money have been commenced or are projected for the near future. Fifth avenue has come in for its share, the notable improvements including the new structure for the Rogers Peet Company, at 41st street, with an outlet in 42d street: also the Anderson property at No. 415 Fifth avenue, with frontages in both 37th and 38th streets. These two buildings will involve an outlay of upwards of $1,000,000. At the southwest corner of Fifth avenue and 37th street, owned by Robert Goelet, a ten-story structure is projected, while at Fifth avenue and 27th street, through to Broadway, the Johnson-Kahn Company is improving the site of the one-time Hotel Victoria with a twenty story office, store and loft building, at an estimated cost of $1,250,000.

One of the largest operations now in progress is the twelve story building owned by the National Cloak & Suit Company, in the west side of Seventh avenue, between 24th and 25th streets, which has been estimated will cost about $2,000,000. At the present time the builders are up to the twelfth tier of beams. The Madison avenue frontage of the block owned by B. Altman & Co. is being improved with a twelve story addition, 197x275, the cost being placed at $1,000,000.

In addition to the above named operations, the major portion of the new structural activity is confined to the Thirties and Forties, the twelve story type predominating. The accompanying table shows the various operations of size now under way or projected and gives the location of the property, the owner, number of stories, size, estimated cost, architect, general contractor and the condition of the improvement.

LONG ISLAND ARCHITECTURE.

Great Advance in Recent Years—Influence of the Trolley Lines.

A SALIENT circumstance in connection with the upbuilding of suburban Long Island as a home center is the variety and scope of the architectural design. The demand for homes in the territory has caused architects who make a specialty of suburban work to produce their very best in plans of houses with attractive exteriors as well as very modern interiors. At East Rockaway and at Floral Park, for example, houses have been built that are free from interior defects, such as numerous juts and breaks in room harmony. Houses nearer the sea are enclosed with shingles that have been well treated with preservatives that keep them immune from the influence of salt air and the houses are well sheathed against invasion of high winds. Few houses are covered with clapboards, nowadays, the shingles covering being the more popular.

The typical suburban house nowadays is built without a parlor. Parlors are considered to be superfluities and the space that formerly was devoted to them is utilized in the area of the living-room; and it has proven to be an attractive economy. It is part of the utilitarianism of living. Suburban house improvements have progressed so rapidly that the $1,500 a year salaried man who now lives in the suburbs resides in as comfortable a manner as the $6,000 man did a decade ago. The cheapest suburban home now contains every modern improvement, such as a modern bathroom and toilet, hot water or steam heat, electric lights and gas and a gas range for cooking. The suburban communities that lack these facilities do not grow rapidly; and Long Island is fast losing its provincial communities. Another ten years will witness all of the easily accessible parts of Nassau County built up as solidly with homes as the Oranges and other parts of suburban New Jersey are now; and land values on Long Island are steadily advancing because of the improved structural appearance of the territory and the constant accretion of transit facilities.

Trolley roads are proving to be strong factors in the race for growth, especially in Nassau County, where sparsely settled areas have been brought together solely by the presence of trolley roads. The great level area was the first to feel its beneficent influence and as a result hundreds of new homes have been established in the great level area lying between Hempstead and the sea, where Rockville Centre, Lynbrook, Floral Park, Valley Stream, Oceanside, East Rockaway and other growing communities are situated.

New Queens Traction Line.

Work on an important traction line in Queens will soon be under construction. The New York & Long Island Traction Company will connect its present lines in the Jamaica section with the elevated extension on Liberty avenue, Jamaica. A certificate of extension was filed last week with the Queens County Clerk. The company will extend a line from the Rockaway Plank road to Liberty avenue at Ozone Park, where connection will be made with the new elevated line, and will add a loop on Ocean avenue.

Extension of Sixth Avenue.

The Committee on City Plan of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment will hold a public hearing in Room 16, City Hall, Borough of Manhattan, on Friday, June 26, at 3 p. m., on a petition for the extension of Sixth avenue southerly to Varick street, Borough of Manhattan.

SITUATION IN THE PLATE GLASS WAR

Companies Making Strenuous Efforts to Eliminate Present Conditions and to Re-Establish Business on a Substantial Basis.

By NELSON D. STERLING

OF various factors which combine today to cause anxiety for the future of the plate glass business, and tend towards the elimination of a margin of profit therefrom, rate cutting and increased cost of replacement stand out most prominently. Throughout a very large territory rates are absolutely demoralized. Agents are becoming discouraged. Companies that are trying to underwrite on a safe and sound basis are besought by their agents from all points to accept business at such figures as will enable them to compete with their rate-cutting rivals, but which incidentally spell loss. The agent expects the company to help him retain the business of clients who are frequently purchasers of other lines as well, and though the companies are willing and anxious to do so as far as practicable, they cannot entirely disregard their obligations to their stockholders. Indeed we do not believe that our own agents as a class would contend that simply because certain so-call underwriters of companies of limited resources engage in the pastime of building up volume without regard to selection or rate, we should feel obliged to follow suit.

The Plate Glass Underwriting Association will hold a meeting at the office of the Fidelity & Casualty Company on June 24th at which time a final effort will be made to adjust the rate and commission situation in Greater New York. It was thought that the association had disposed of the matter at the last meeting, held on June 9th, when every company was elected to membership, each company subscribing to the rates and commissions. Since that time one of the companies receded from its position. It is hoped that the company will reconsider its stand and come back into line.

Many Companies Formed.

Since 1903 numerous small companies have been organized and operated in limited territories that have ignored all sound underwriting principles, and their activities have resulted in continuous reduction of rates throughout the country, so that even now conservative underwriters are compelled to accept business at ruinous rates, in order to protect their agency connections. It takes the maximum of tact and diplomacy to convince an agent that loyalty to his company demands that he maintain adequate rates even at the sacrifice of his business and his commissions to competitors representing cut rate companies.

The argument that such companies cannot continue writing at ridiculous rates and remain indefinitely in business is borne out by facts. Unfortunately, however, after a disastrous experience such companies are able to procure reinsurance, and not only to secure it in responsible companies, but to sell out at favorable commission rates. The inconsistency in such transactions is that often the reinsurer assumes in bulk business written at ruinous rates which it prohibited its agents from competing for when the risks individually were in the market.

The only remedy for this condition would seem to be an agreement among leading companies to decline reinsurance of such concerns in the hope that thereby cutthroat competition will be eliminated, and the business distributed among such companies as stand for sound methods.

The problem before the companies is a serious one. Ten years ago a 50 per cent. loss ratio in any State was almost unknown. Now it is not unusual for a company to have loss ratios running from 50 to 60 per cent. in several States. The current premium manual is based upon a glazing price list that has been discarded since March, 1910. At that time the plate glass dealers published a new list (the first in twenty-five years) with new discounts, the net result of which was a 47 per cent. increase in cost of replacements. Had the same co-operation obtained among the companies as among the manufacturers the result would have been the promulgation of a new manual with a commensurate increase in premiums.

Instead of doing this, however, the newcomers in the business continued hammering the existing rates downward. In May, 1914, the dealers issued another revised list that in some brackets increased the price of glass 15 per cent., and yet we are as far today from convincing these radicals of the value of co-operation as we were in 1903 or 1910.

How Demoralization Develops.

Here is an example of the way in which this demoralization develops. We know that in order to secure a working margin of profit our loss ratio should not exceed 40 per cent. Take, then, a State in which the company year after year on a volume of $10,000 sustains a loss ratio of 45 per cent., and that on a rate of manual plus 20 per cent. Enters a company wholly inexperienced and establishes a rate of manual less 25 per cent.; thereupon another company, already entered, which may have a small volume and, therefore, little to lose, meets the competition of the newcomer.

This second company, having a better organized agency force, becomes more of a factor than rate-cutter No. 1. Almost immediately the local agents of Company No. 3 cry out for a like concession, backed by the demands of its general agent, who claims that refusal to meet competition on plate glass rates means disintegration of its agency force, because local agents will seek companies which allow them to cut rates and thereby protect their other lines. The result is that Company No. 3, with its $4,000 or $5,000 of volume, follows suit. Thus does rate demoralization begin. Multiply this experience in one State by twenty-seven, and you have the problem to be solved. There is only one solution—the formation of local associations where permitted.

The Only Remedy.

The influential agent of recognized standing is the medium through whom order can be brought out of chaos. He should exert all possible influence in a city or town to bring about that condition which the home offices have failed to establish. In doing such work he would be fulfilling the highest functions of an agent. Every agent would serve his own interests as well as those of this company by arranging with two or three friends in the business to wait upon the other local agents and induce the formation of local associations wherever the law permits this to be done. It is our firm belief that every other agent would be found just as anxious for the restoration of sane and sound prices as the one who originated the reform.

There is no time like the summer in which to do this missionary work, and it devolves upon agents to take the initiative. Some one must do so. It means automatic increase in commission if right rates are adopted.

INTERBOROUGH PARKWAY.

To Run on the Crest of the Hills Connecting Brooklyn and Queens.

At the last meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, the Borough Planning Committee, of which John C. Brackenridge is chairman, was authorized to appear at the public hearing before the Board of Estimate on June 26th, and favor the extension of the roadway connecting Forest Park with Highland Park, so as to give a continuous parkway on the crest of the hills connecting Brooklyn and Queens. This road will be known as the Interborough Parkway. Highland Boulevard is a continuation of Eastern Parkway in Brooklyn. The proposed extension will carry this boulevard from Highland Parkway through Cypress Hills Cemetery, connecting with the present beautiful winding roadway in Forest Park and connecting directly with the Queens Boulevard. Alrick H. Man, of Richmond Hill, has been asked to speak for the Chamber in favor of this improvement.

Tentative maps were then prepared by the Engineers of the Board of Estimate and submitted to the cemetery officials for their approval with the request for a price per square foot for the land necessary to make this roadway. Negotiations have progressed since that time under Charles O'Malley of the Comptroller's Office, and maps and surveys have been made by the Park Department and the Topographical Department of Queens. Borough Presidents Pounds and Connolly have always favored the roadway and been active in advancing the matter. President McAneny, Chairman of the City Planning Committee of the Board of Estimate, has taken a very active part in securing this improvement.

The cemetery portion of the road is only a little short of 50 per cent. of the whole, but the remainder is entirely on City property. The total distance through the two cemeteries is 4,874 ft. The road, will be 100 ft. wide, so that the land to be taken will be approximately 487,400 sq. ft., or 11.2 acres. It is proposed by the City Planning Committee of the Board of Estimate to place 50 per cent. of the cost of the improvement upon the entire city, and the other 50 per cent. to be paid by the Boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens.

Fifty-one million dollars asked by the Metropolitan Commission for the construction of a sewage disposal system. Public works are planned on an expensive scale nowadays.

The hearings of the State Factory Investigating Commission will be resumed next Monday morning at City Hall. It is important that real estate and allied interests should be represented and stoutly defended at these hearings, which will continue all the week.

For uncertainty of application and expense of administration, for unfairness of treatment and injury done to local industry, the workmen's compensation law will take high rank among the unwise class legislation of the State, in the opinion of insurance and real estate men.

The State factory inspection laws were once aimed solely at owners and lessees of factories, regardless of whether they owned the buildings or not. Since the owners of buildings have been made equally responsible, the sins of lessees have been charged up to landlords to such an extent that the courts have at last called a halt. For the crime of locking factory doors landlords are surely not responsible.

"The buying power of the country was exhausted by the great boom in 1906-7," says a Wall street authority in trying to account for the depression on the Stock Exchange. But there has been no loss of buying power in the real estate auction market, judging from the invariable success which attends large lot sales. There is a big market for real estate amongst people of moderate means. The problem is to meet their needs at the price they are able to pay.

The Advantages of Madison Avenue.

THE removal of Brooks Brothers from 21st street and Broadway to 44th street and Madison avenue, is interesting in several respects. Of the scores of retail houses which ten years ago were situated in the vicinity of 23d street and Broadway, only Brooks Brothers and one or two other large shops remain. Their removal has obviously been only a question of time, and the wonder is not that it has taken place, but that it has been delayed so long. The desertion of Broadway and 23d street by the retail trade has had a disastrous effect on property values in this particular neighborhood, and, so far as the Record and Guide knows, it was anticipated by comparatively few students of the drift of business in Manhattan. There never has been any cause for the change, which apparently could not have been prevented. The shops which have removed have been, with few exceptions, those which obtain their patronage from comparatively well-to-do people, from the inhabitants of the more expensive parts of the East and the West Sides. During the last ten years a small proportion of this class of people have moved farther uptown, but the shifting has not influenced enough people nor has it covered enough territory to make it any less convenient for them than it used to be to do their purchasing in 23d street.

Thus, for the first time in the history of the city, a comparatively stationary center of well-to-do population has been surprised by a violent shift in the location of the better class of retail business houses, a shift more violent and more disastrous to property interests than any which has taken place in the past. In all probability the shift could have been in some measure avoided, provided proper precautionary measures had been taken. The building of so many loft buildings on lower Fifth avenue and its vicinity and their occupation by the manufacturers of clothes made the neighborhood undesirable for shoppers, both on foot and in vehicles. The roadways were blocked with trucks. The sidewalks were, during certain hours of the day, swarming with manufacturers' employes. Broadway and 23d street were not directly affected by these adverse conditions, but they were indirectly affected, because many merchants who did not occupy stores on lower Fifth avenue were induced to move by the contagious force of so many examples.

If the zone system had been in use, and if certain kinds of manufacturing business had been excluded from the vicinity of the retail stores, the present condition of lower Fifth avenue and Broadway might have been very much more satisfactory to local property owners. They would undoubtedly have suffered somewhat from another cause, but in all probability not to the same extent.

One reason for the shifting of the better class of retail trade farther uptown has been the increasing congestion of vehicular traffic. At the very time when the improvement in and the cheapening of automobiles made it more easy for rich people to trade at remote places, this increasing freedom of movement was checked by the breakdown of the street system. So many more vehicles began to use them that they interfered more and more with each other. At the present time it would take an automobile longer between the hours of 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. to travel on Fifth avenue from 70th street to 23d street than it would for a carriage and horses twelve years ago. The congestion of traffic has also worked in favor of locations for retail stores farther uptown, and it might have been avoided by the laying out of another diagonal or longitudinal avenue some ten years ago. Traffic experts predicted the present congestion and its depressing effect on the value of certain classes of property; but no one would listen to them. At the present time the damage is irretrievable, in so far as the old retail district is concerned.

In the meanwhile the new retail district is one of the few parts of Manhattan which is doing something more than holding its own during the prevailing depression. Two large shops are being built, one on the corner of 37th and the other on a corner of 41st street; and now Brooks Brothers have selected a location on Madison avenue and 44th street. The selection was wisely made. The rent will be very much smaller than it would have been on Fifth avenue, and the location for an established business like Brooks' Brothers, will be almost as advantageous. Considering the large difference between the level of values, which prevail on the two avenues, the Record and Guide has never been able to understand why Madison avenue, at least, from 42d to 50th street, has not proved more attractive to retail business. It has the disadvantage of being a narrow avenue and for the carriage trade of being occupied by trolley cars, but it is very accessible, it is entirely eligible in its associations and it is comparatively cheap. It may be confidently predicted that other firms will follow the example of Brooks Brothers and that in the course of time Madison avenue, north of 42d street, will come in for a certain share of the best Fifth avenue trade. The available part of Fifth avenue is so small in area and so high in price that many A1 excellent retail houses will be obliged to seek another location, but in the same neighborhood. Madison avenue will suit their needs admirably.

East Side Opportunities.

There has been more real estate activity of a better kind during the last week or two than has prevailed throughout the early part of the season. Particularly interesting was the sale of the Chapin Home property in 66th and 67th streets, east of Lexington avenue, to a builder for improvement with a nine-story apartment house. Whatever may be the case with other parts of Manhattan and with other types of buildings, there has been no over-construction in side street apartment houses on the East Side. The percentage of vacancy in this class of improvement is comparatively small. A very large demand exists for apartments which rent from $18 to $28 and which are eligibly situated on the East Side, and they can never be supplied in very large numbers, because of the difficulty in piecing together available sites. It is always hard to find three or four adjacent property owners all of whom are ready to sell at a fair price, and a builder is constantly forced to go ahead and put up a building on a plot which is not really large enough for a series of advantageously planned apartments.

Such is not, however, the case with the Chapin Home property. The site is exceptionally large for this class of improvement, and it ought to be possible to lay out a convenient and comparatively spacious group of apartments which will rent for a moderate price. It is interesting to note that the erection of private dwellings has almost entirely ceased even on the East Side. It has long since ceased on the West Side and indeed all over the city except in suburban districts, but now even on the East Side well-to-do people are coming more and more to prefer apartments. Of course, the preference for apartments is intensified at the present time because so many people, and particularly so many well-to-do people are feeling poor. The depression in banking and brokerage circles in Wall street brings with it a depression in expensive residential property on the East Side. As soon as a period of good business supervenes private houses will be in greater demand, and the movement to replace the old brown stone houses with American basement residences will be resumed. But it will never again attain the proportions which it reached early in the twentieth century. Well-to-do people are living a larger proportion of the year in the country and do not want the burden or the expense of a town house. Slowly, but surely, apartment houses are superseding private residences all over the city.

The Real Estate Board and the Inspection Laws.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

The Real Estate Board of New York wishes to emphasize its position with regard to the labor laws, and to do it so particularly at this time because, beginning Monday of next week and continuing throughout the week, the State Factory Investigating Commission will hold public hearings on the recodification of the labor law.

Since last fall the Real Estate Board, practically alone, has undertaken the serious study of these laws and has analyzed them for the benefit of its members. At the last session of the Legislature it secured important amendments to certain features of the laws that were working unnecessary hardship on owners of low buildings.

Especially during the past three months this board has been looking into these laws with the definite purpose of securing such changes as would, while fully protecting the occupants of buildings, make the labor law a fair, workable instrument. It has made intelligent representations to the Industrial Board. For weeks it has been working in order to be able to present to the State Factory Investigating Commission, at the hearings next week, not only its recommendations for the recodification of the labor law, but definite, constructive suggestions as to how the law should operate, what the board considers proper definitions of a factory, etc.; what it considers, in certain respects, a fair interpretation of the law; what, in certain respects, owners ought not be asked to do.

As the result of all this work, the Real Estate Board will present next week, not only a brief containing its recommendations and suggestions, but oral arguments supporting its position. This will be done through Mr. George W. Olvany, who presented this board's amendments to the last Legislature, and has since been advising this board in labor law and fire prevention matters.

Quite recently a committee of this board has conferred with a joint committee of other organizations, including the Merchants' Association, and it may be stated as a fact that the position of the Real Estate Board with respect to the labor laws is concurred in by such other organizations as have given thought to this matter.

The purpose of this letter is to make plain this board's position; its interest in the general welfare of the real estate owner and all who occupy buildings coming under the jurisdiction of the labor and other departments; and particularly, on the eve of these public hearings to stir up the interest of real estate owners, of manufacturers, and of others who should properly be interested in these hearings, so that all concerned may be fully alive to the necessity of attending these hearings and getting an intelligent understanding of what is going on.

RICHARD O. CHITTICK,
Executive Secretary Real Estate Board of New York.

A Question of Priority.

Editor Record and Guide:

Is there not some inconsistency in the control which houses of worship possess over neighboring real estate under the statutes, and which control sometimes depreciates the value of the realty so situated?

Specifically, why should the trustees of a congregation have the right to select a site for a new edifice on a main artery of the city, and by so doing prevent the use of premises within a prescribed distance as a theater or otherwise to the best business advantage?

I have in mind a man who has owned a piece of property on a certain street since the year 1881. It is a street which is given over to business, and largely to amusement purposes. In the year 1906 a house of worship was built on the land adjoining the premises referred to, and now, when an improvement most natural for the neighborhood—namely, a motion picture theater—is contemplated, the owner is restrained from so developing his property by the objection of the trustees of the house of worship.

Should not the fact that he was in possession of his premises before the church came give him a certain right of priority? And as under the Constitution a man may not be deprived of his property without due course of law, I cannot understand how in this case he can be deprived of a part of the value of his premises (which would follow upon its development to the best advantage) without having recourse to the courts to obtain compensatory damages.

NON-SACRELIGIOUS.

"Home Rule" the Battle Cry for Amendments to the Labor Law.

Editor Record and Guide:

The Merchants' Association of New York, through its Fire Prevention and Insurance Committee, has been holding conferences with various other organizations, with the view of simplifying and unifying the objections or amendments to the Labor Law to be presented at the hearings of the State Factory Investigating Commission to be held in this city next week.

It was the consensus of opinion that co-operation with the commission and its counsel is most desirable, and that it is essential that such assistance be given them for amendments to the law not inconsistent with the recognition of "home rule."

The City of New York and other cities having building codes and the necessary departments must be exempted from the provisions of the law relating to the construction of new buildings, the maintenance or alterations of existing buildings; also as regards fire prevention and sanitation; and the enforcement of the Labor Law must be through the city departments where such exist.

The counsel for the State Factory Investigating Commission has expressed a desire for assistance in revising the law where necessary, and calm and proper consideration should be given to his request. The slight attention that was given to the work of the commission when it was preparing the present law is largely the cause of some of its objectionable features; but the publicity given to the matter during the past year should have prepared every one interested to present careful and proper suggestions for amendments before the next meeting of the Legislature.

The present city administration is willing and desirous to assist in every way to this end, and they and the Board of Aldermen will undoubtedly be ready to pass such ordinances and provide such means as may be requisite to protect the workers covered by the Labor Law, but it must be through this means—that is, through the city authorities and departments, that it must be done. A State department must not attempt or be allowed to encroach upon the powers already delegated by the Legislature to this city, and if this fact is recognized by the State Factory Investigating Commission in its work, harmonious action will be had and approval given by all interests now affected.

It would be absurd to have our Building Department prepare, and our Board of Aldermen adopt, a new building code if it is to be superseded by a labor law code. It would be useless to have a sanitary code and a board of health for this city if the Labor Law is to take precedent in our factories, mercantile and office buildings.

The people have been more and more strenuously demanding, and the Legislature recognizing, "home rule" as expedient and necessary in large cities, and no backward step must be taken. At the same time the working people need protection, and there are various sections in the Labor Law that are not taken care of by the city authorities, and these should be left under the present jurisdiction. Also, in many places in the State there are no adequate building codes, etc., and the Labor Department should there have jurisdiction.

The commission should also consider the rating or classification of factories and factory buildings under the law, and make different requirements for highly inflammable occupancy or totally non-inflammable; a congested occupancy or a small one; a low building and a skyscraper; a modern fireproof building and a dilapidated non-fireproof one.

It is to be hoped that at the various hearings before the commission in this city these general lines will be followed by all, so that all can work in harmony and avoid cross purposes.

Chairman Sub-Committee on Revision of Labor Laws, Merchants' Association of New York.

A Mutual Company Organized.

There has been organized and chartered the Metropolitan Mutual Building Trades Insurance Company, with offices at 84 William street, New York City, by those in the building industry who believe that their interests will be best conserved in a mutual company. This company has in its employ one of the best known and oldest established firms of underwriters and actuary, and its business will be limited to the least hazardous risks, not only in the building trades, but in other industries, such risks being accepted only after careful scrutiny by a board of directors numbering twenty-one, representative of the different branches of industry that this company will cover with insurance.

Mr. B. D. Traitel of the Traitel Marble Company, who is interested in the new mutual company, says that with conservative management as thus outlined, it seems to him that a mutual company should return to its policyholders at least as substantial a dividend as the stock companies may return to its stockholders; hence it seems apparent that the interests of the insured are with a mutual company.

"Next, their interests would be with a stock company rather than a State," continued Mr. Traitel, "for the reason, as you know, that the State must accept all hazards, however great, such as manufacturing of explosives, sub-surface work, etc.

"It is astonishing to find that even up to this time of writing a great number of employers in the trades covered by the Workmen's Compensation Act have not yet determined whether to cover by State, stock or mutual company. Some of them seem to be waiting for lightning to strike them, not realizing the risk of damage suits and heavy penalties that their carelessness may bring to them.

"As far as I can observe, with those that have given the matter serious thought, they seem to be equally divided in their consideration of mutual and stock companies . . . Many of those that are now considering stock companies, or have gone into them, say, 'We favor the mutual company but will wait for six months or a year to see how they work out.' This is the situation as nearly as I can describe it."

Staten Island Illustrated.

The Staten Island Chamber of commerce has issued a handsomely illustrated magazine setting forth the residential and business attractions of the island. A number of colored pictures are reproduced from hand-tinted views in the possession of Cornelius G. Kolff. The compiler is Darby Richardson, and the photographic views were made by E. H. Seehausen of West New Brighton. The other contributors are Edward C. Delevan, Jr., William S. Van Clief, Lewis Nixon, Travis H. Whitney, William A. Boylan, T. S. Oxholm, Dr. J. T. Sprague. The magazine constitutes one of many evidences that the Staten Island Chamber of Commerce is a highly efficient body.

SUCCESSFUL NIGHT SALES.

Holdings of the Fleet Estate in Brooklyn Brought $353,000 at Auction.

Heirs of the Fleet Estate realized a total of $353,100, or an average price of about $1,210 per lot, for the 291 parcels in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, offered at auction last Tuesday night at the Brooklyn Academy of Music by the Jere Johnson, Jr., Co., with Frederick B. Snow acting as auctioneer. The lots have been in the same ownership for nearly eighty years, and are located on Fifth, Sixth and Bay Ridge avenues, and in 68th street, between Third and Sixth avenues.

The auditorium of the big theater was taxed to its capacity by one of the most representative gatherings of bidders ever present at a similar sale in Brooklyn. In the crowd were builders, investors, operators and homeseekers, who participated actively in the bidding, which became so fast and spirited that the entire tract was disposed of in about four hours, which was at the average rate of four-fifths of a minute for every lot.

The highest price paid for any single offering was $8,000, by Thomas R. Farrell, Brooklyn commissioner of jurors, who bought the southeast corner of Fifth and Bay Ridge avenues. The same purchaser bought the adjoining lot for $5,000.

The largest individual buyer was Arthur Selinger, the builder and operator, who purchased lots in 68th street. He paid about $1,150 each for lots between Fourth and Fifth avenues, $1,025 for others between Fifth and Sixth avenues, and about $900 each for lots west of Sixth avenue. Fifth avenue lots brought the highest prices, averaging near $5,000. Inside lots on Bay Ridge avenue, at Stuart lane, went for $925, ranging gradually higher in price towards Fifth avenue. The average for Sixth avenue lots was about $1,000.

The detailed report of the sale, giving correct locations and descriptions of the lots, names of buyers and prices, will be found elsewhere in this issue of the Record and Guide.

HIGH COMMENDATION

For the Real Estate Board by the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests.

The following resolutions were adopted Friday, June 19, 1914, by the Executive Committee of the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests:

Whereas, The Real Estate Board of New York has for several months given close attention to the Labor Laws with a view to obtaining such modifications as will make it a workable instrument with particular reference to its application to New York City, and has obtained from the Legislature of 1914 certain amendments, and

Whereas, The Real Estate Board through counsel and its Industrial and Building Codes Committee has made an exhaustive study of the recodification of the Labor Laws and is presenting for the consideration of the State Factory Investigating Commission at its hearings to be held June 22 to 26 definite, constructive suggestions for recodification and probable further amendments.

Resolved, That the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests commend the work of the Real Estate Board of New York in connection with the Labor Laws, and be it further Resolved, That other organizations represented in the Advisory Council be urged to support and cooperate with the Real Estate Board in this work.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

At the meeting of the Local Boards held June 16 the following resolutions were adopted:

Van Courtlandt.

Chattel Mortgages.

The word chattel is of French origin, and means goods of any kind. Chattels were originally divided into chattels, real and personal chattels. Chattels real carried property annexed to or concerning real estate, as a lease for years for land. Personal chattels were such things as were movable, as animals, jewelry, grain, machinery, goods, and such property of like kind. Chattel mortgages were not in use as early as real estate mortgages and the reason is at first all property of value was in the land. The first use of personal property as security for the payment of a debt was by putting the property up as a pledge, in which case the creditor held the property and returned it to the owner when the money was paid.

The mortgagor is the one who owns property and the one who signs the instrument. The mortgagee is the one to whom the mortgage is given and the one to whom the debt is due.

A mortgage is a conditional sale of chattels, and operates to transfer the legal title to the mortgagee, to be defeated only by a full payment of the money and a performance of the conditions.

A chattel mortgage is an instrument in writing in the nature of an absolute conveyance as a security for money, the fulfillment of some obligation or the performance of some act by which the holder acquires a specific and paramount lien on certain personal property or chattels therein described, with a condition for the redemption from satisfaction of such lien, and the release of such security upon payment by the mortgagor or the performance of the act therein mentioned.

The National Real Estate Journal gives the following as a good form for a chattel mortgage:

"Know All Men, That I, John Doe, of the County of .... and State of ...., party of the first part, for the consideration of .... Dollars, do hereby sell, grant and convey to Richard Doe, of the County of ...., and State of ...., party of the second part, the following described personal property, to-wit. One bay horse, six years old, named Fred; weight, about 1,100 pounds; star in forehead; wire cut on left hind leg; owned by me and now kept on the southwest corner of Section 15, Township 83, Range 30, west of the Fifth principal meridian, in the County of ...., and State of .... And I, the said party of the first part, hereby consent to and covenant with said party of the second part that I have good right to sell and convey said property; that it is free from all incumbrances and liends, and I will warrant and defend the same against the lawful claims of all persons whomsoever. Upon condition, however, that if the said party of the first part shall pay, or cause to be paid, to the said Richard Roe or order the sum of .... Dollars, with interest on all of said money until paid at the rate of ...., etc.

Chattel mortgages must be construed according to the law of the place in which they are entered into. If valid where executed, they can be enforced in sister States. In construing a mortgage the court will ascertain the actual meaning of the parties, or as nearly so as possible, and will conform the mortgage to this meaning as nearly as the words used will permit.

Subway Trains on Queensboro Bridge.

The plan suggested by Clifford B. Moore, engineer in charge of the Topographical Bureau of Queens, for the running of subway trains across the Queensboro Bridge without the narrowing of the bridge roadway, is receiving favorable attention from the Bridge Commissioner.

Mr. Moore is confident that his plan for putting the tracks of the subway line on the shelves outside of the main trusses is practicable and that it can be carried out without involving delay and at a smaller expenditure than that needed in the present reconstruction plan.

President Connolly has recommended the plan in a letter to Commissioner Kracke and is interested in the proposition of saving the bridge roadway from reduction as to its width.

New Bridge Over Newtown Creek.

The Commerce Committee of the Queens Chamber of Commerce has taken up the matter of the construction of a new bridge across Newtown Creek at Meeker avenue and Laurel Hill boulevard, and urges that a bridge be built of the "Askew Lift" type similar to that across the creek at Vernon avenue, and that no abutments be placed in the center of the stream. The Bridge Department has commenced surveys this week for a new bridge at this point to replace the present "Penny Bridge." The bridge is favored by Commissioner Kracke, as it will increase traffic facilities between Brooklyn and Queens, give better trolley connections between the two boroughs, and also provide for the Crosstown Rapid Transit Route of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co., which will run north and south from Astoria to Coney Island. It is estimated that the cost of this bridge will be $300,000.

When Tenants Move.

Landlords who take no particular pains to give enquirers the present address of former tenants can get an idea from the signboard on which Vincent Astor has had painted the name and present address of each one of the tenants who occupied the old buildings that have given way to the new office and loft buildings he is putting up in 33d street, opposite the Waldorf-Astoria. The board containing the names and new addresses has been posted in a conspicuous place on the site.

Real Estate in Southern Nassau.

That well located property on direct lines of transit is a growing asset is proven by the steady growth of population and of building in the southern half of Nassau County. The population of the county is 75,000, two-thirds of which is in the communities of the south side. Taxable values are increasing in greater ratio here than in any other suburban county at this time because Long Island has been linked to both uptown and downtown Manhattan. Home sites in Nassau County during the recent winter season were in stronger demand than real estate developers there anticipated. With a constantly improving railroad system connecting Long Island and Manhattan it is only logical that Southern Nassau with its transit points of contact should grow apace. Because this territory is adjacent to the easterly line of the city its destiny is suburban rather than urban.

suburban life the greater city must divide with the suburbs the monopoly of opportunities for good real estate investments it has long held. The electric train service through suburban Long Island is bringing it into as easy traffic reach as the elevated railroad brought Harlem in the seventies and eighties; and the service on Long Island is more modern than it was to Harlem then.

The significant circumstance in connection with Nassau County real estate is that the demand for it is greater than when New York City began to grow northward a generation ago. The home area of New York has reached beyond its own borders. Another new era of great real estate activity is imminent on Long Island. All of the substantial land developments in this territory are within easy access of railroad stations and that means marketable property. And that is the lesson for the small investor, to stick to the line of quick transportation and as close to the center of growth as his pocketbook will allow.

Home colonies are active at Floral Park and Hempstead on the electrified part of the main line of the Long Island Railroad—at Oceanside and East Rockaway on the Long Beach division; at Lynbrook, Valley Stream and adjacent places on the Montauk division, and at various places along the north shore.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

DESPITE the prevailing opinion to the contrary, the money market as affecting realty, is in a favorable condition for both borrower and lender. Reasonable loans upon well-located properties are readily obtainable, though in the instances where builders or others desire monies in excessive amounts difficulty is encountered. In a few cases these latter loans can be obtained, but only by paying the maximum interest rates, together with large commissions and fees.

Loaning institutions as a whole have been operating on a conservative basis during the last couple of years and today show no tendency to loosen the purse strings, for they do not wish to encourage a building movement of size at this time, for fear of hurting the market as a whole. Careful appraisals are made when renewals are desired.

One of the factors that influence the loaning institutions is the fear that they may have to acquire the property at foreclosure in the event of the principle and interest not being met on the due dates. These concerns do not wish to be the owners of realty but simply desire to have a safe and sound method of investing their surplus funds.

Money can be obtained in amounts under $100,000, at five per cent, but should a lower rate of interest be desired, the property must be gilt edged. Larger loans are harder to procure. In Manhattan the mortgage extensions show an increase over last year, the amount being $54,000,000, as against $39,000,000 in 1913.

Good applications for building and permanent loans have been received during the last few weeks and there is every likelihood that many of these will be accepted. The mortgage market should improve, according to the opinions of several men who make the lending of money a specialty.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 20, as against 25 last week and 28 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 7, as compared with 12 last week and 8 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 13, as compared with 13 last week and 20 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 187, as against 167 last week, 17 having stated considerations totaling $372,520. Mortgages recorded this week number 91, involving $3,144,022, as against 96 last week, aggregating $2,491,198.

From the Bronx 13 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 15 last week and 9 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $569,628, compared with $415,634 last week, making a total since January 1 of $20,430,525. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $3,012,078, and the total from January 1, 1913, to June 21, 1913, was $32,064,424.

Chapin Home Sold to Builders.

Bing & Bing, have purchased, through Pease & Elliman, from the Chapin Home for the Aged and Infirm, Mrs. Emma Fox, president, the south half of their property in the north side of East 66th street, 170 ft. east of Lexington avenue, size 150 x 100.5. The buyers will erect two nine-story apartment houses. This property was originally obtained by the Chapin Home in 1869, under a 99-year lease from the city at the rental of $1 a year. In 1909 the trustees purchased a large tract of land on the outskirts of Jamaica, L. I., and erected several new buildings for the use of the institution. They also bought at that time the property which had been under lease to them, and a portion of this now figures in the present deal. The Chapin Home trustees still own 150 x 105.5 in the south side of 67th street.

The Welcome Man The One Who Delivers The Goods

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the subject of installing heating systems, of any kind or make, properly in the situation upon which they are to perform their duties.

No system ever brought forth, or that ever will be invented, will in itself make up any lack of capacity in boiler, piping or radiating surfaces, or poor workmanship in erection.

We Guarantee Our Work.

We design complete heating plants, furnish working plans and specifications and co-operate with owners, contractors, and architects solely to insure the perfect operation of our product.

Light Your Halls

Twenty inspectors have recently been detailed by the Tenement House Department to see that hallways of apartment and tenement houses are lighted at night in accordance with the law.

The law reads that there shall be a light at night in the lower hall and one in the hall on the second floor. Many owners and occupants of tenement buildings unconsciously violate these provisions because of an inadequate method of controlling the light.

If you feel that the hallways of the buildings you own or occupy are inadequately lighted or the lighting improperly controlled we shall be pleased to render you any assistance in our power.

Write us and one of our lighting experts will show you how electric light will not only protect you against law-violation, but he will prove to you that it's the most economical form of lighting for hallways.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Out of thirty-two offerings at the Manhattan and Bronx Exchange Salesrooms this week, nineteen went to plaintiffs or other parties in interest; seven sales were either withdrawn or adjourned and the remaining six properties went to outside bidders. Among the latter was Samuel A. Berger, who paid $86,625 for the 5-sty casino at 8-12 Avenue D, and Katie Graf, who bought the tenement at 78 Stanton street for $13,975.

For the coming week, the most important sale will involve 197 lots opposite Van Cortlandt Park, to be offered by Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies. Mr. Day will also sell half-a-dozen parcels in Greenwich Village to close the estate of Henry Corse. Large holdings of the Ellen M. Hennessy estate will be sold at the stand of the same auctioneer as a result of a partition suit instituted by Mary B. Averill et al against Forbes J. Hennessy et al.

Saum's Preservative
The Saums Brush Mark
Makes CONCRETE Floors as Indestructible as Granite
Saum's Preservative prevents or stops disintegration. Concrete so treated resists acids, alkali, and is water, sun and wind-proof. Horses' feet, wagon wheels, hand trucks do not scrape or wear concrete floors after Saum's Preservative has been applied.
Easy to use, economical, efficient and lasting. Write for book of evidence. Our engineers will call upon request.

AN OLD SECTION IN A TRANSITION STATE

By LEON TANENBAUM, of L. Tanenbaum, Strauss & Co.

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager For The American Real Estate Co.

ONE of the interesting studies in the real estate market has been that section of Broadway, south of 23d street. A few years ago when the big uptown loft building movement started many well-known firms moved, leaving the older structures vacant. In some instances tenants have been found for these buildings, but in many cases concessions in rentals were given by the owners. The result of the change of tenants has created a diversity of occupants which will work beneficially for the section. The situation is here explained at length by Leon Tanenbaum, who has made an intimate study of the district.

THAT section of Broadway between Chambers and 23rd streets has been in a transition state for the last few years, and it is difficult to forecast its future. Many brokers and property owners have made a special study of this district and their opinions are at variance, though practically all agree that an entirely new class of tenants will occupy the lofts and stores in the future. It cannot be denied that a large number of concerns once settled in this section of Broadway and the adjacent side streets have moved to other sections where new loft construction has taken place, but it is only a question of time before new tenants are found for the district which was being depopulated.

Present conditions in the district mentioned constitute simply one phase of the general condition of real estate in New York City. The over-production of loft buildings in the district north of 14th street has glutted the market, and under the economic law of supply and demand values and prices are bound to fall until the demand approximately equals the supply.

In the competition thus produced the older loft buildings have necessarily suffered. Many of them are insufficiently improved, particularly in regard to electric elevator equipment, plumbing, automatic sprinkler systems, fireproof stairways and elevator shafts, lighting, heating and ventilating apparatus. The advantages of the new buildings in these respects are enhanced in many cases by superiority in comfort, appearance and general construction. In consequence there has been a marked change in the character of the occupants of the older buildings. The foreign drygoods and woolen commission houses, lace and embroidery importers and manufacturers, silk and ribbon manufacturers, garment manufacturers and allied trades have moved uptown and have, to some extent, been replaced by new classes of tenants, such as manufacturers and jobbers in toys, metal goods, leather goods, cigars, domestic drygoods, woodenware, paper, hardware and lithographic and printers' inks and many other lines of trade.

Diversity of Tenants.

This increased diversity of tenants is in itself an encouraging feature, in as much as it prevents the district from relying upon a narrow range of industries for occupancy. The general exodus of the past few years can hardly be repeated, but until the old occupants are much more largely replaced by the new than they are at present, owners of loft property between City Hall and 23rd street will be in a distressing situation.

Other difficulties have been added to those created by the erection of new buildings. For several years individual and institutional lenders on mortgage have not only refused to make new loans in the locality in question but have also in many cases insisted upon the reduction of long-standing loans, and in some instances they have advanced rates of interest. More liberality would not only relieve the present embarrassment but it would also, by furnishing capital for much needed improvements, go far towards establishing better conditions in the future; and in my opinion conservative loans based upon present values in the district would be absolutely safe.

Still another source of embarrassment to owners and of decrease in values lies in recent legislation and its enforcement by the various city and State departments. The cost of alterations and "improvements" ordered to be installed is in many cases out of all proportion to the income or the value of the buildings affected—even to the extent of destroying the equity. The injustice of this is enhanced by the fact that the owners concerned have frequently spent large sums in complying with other recent requirements. Not only have owners frequently received no return for such outlays in the past, they have no assurance against the imposition of further costly changes in the near future.

High Taxes Hurt the District.

Again, the district has suffered in the matter of tax assessments, through the pardonable inability of the Tax Department to keep pace with the kaleidoscopic shrinkage of values there and the increase of values elsewhere during the past few years.

Insurance rates in the district also need readjustment. Policies are issued to practically any applicant who will pay the premiums, with the result that many who are not entitled to protection receive it, and legitimate insurers are compelled in consequence to pay double and triple the former rates.

A remedy which has often been suggested for the conditions set forth above is the demolition of the older buildings and the erection of fireproof structures in their place. I do not agree with that proposal. There are many vacancies among both the older and the newer fireproof lofts already erected, and in a large percentage of them rents have fallen. In my opinion, it would be folly to increase a supply already too great for the demand of the present or immediate future. I believe that it will take at least five years of business prosperity to absorb the surplus space now existing, and that as a first means of remedying present conditions, we should call a halt in the construction of new loft buildings except in cases of special demand.

The positive remedies required are suggested by what precedes; in brief they are: greater liberality in the placing and extension of mortgage loans; lower insurance rates and more careful selection of risks by insurance companies; readjustment of tax assessments; cessation of oppressive and conflicting regulations by the city and State departments; and modernization of defective loft buildings in the district.

Remedy in Alterations.

Many of the older buildings could be altered and improved to meet present-day requirements at a moderate expense. Owners contemplating such alterations, as well as those erecting new loft buildings, would do well to consult practical and experienced renting agents familiar with the demands of tenants. This is particularly true in regard to interior arrangements and construction, which are too often sacrificed even by well-meaning and otherwise competent architects for impressive front elevations or other considerations.

Objections to High Buildings.

Thus modernized, many of the buildings under discussion can be leased at prevailing rents. The more modern buildings, on account of their great height and numerous occupants are disadvantageous for many tenants on account of the lesser proportionate elevator service and the greater congestion on adjacent sidewalks and streets. Other tenants suffer by their comparative loss of identity in the larger buildings. Still others are influenced by the superior shipping facilities in the older district.

Many of those who joined the exodus have already learned that the increase in their business, due to the new location, has not been commensurate with the increased rental paid—especially when the latter is compared with the favorable terms now obtainable in the older district. In particular instances the former fee and rental values of the properties under consideration may never be re-established. But it is my opinion that with the gradual absorption of surplus loft space and the improvement of general business conditions which is doubtless approaching, there should be a great advance on present values in the district.

Why a Big Hotel Failed.

DANIEL OLMSTEAD, the hotel man, speaking of the close relationship that exists between the building manager upon whom rests the responsibility for making the investment pay, and the architect who designs the structure, said that he would like to be able to tell every person in the country who is contemplating the erection of a hotel to avoid making mistakes in designing like the following:

Using more than 80 feet of valuable street frontage for the hotel bar, when only the lobby entrance of the bar was used; making the main dining-room face an alley, while the lobby, barroom and cigar stand take up all the street frontage; placing bathrooms on the outside with windows the same size as those in adjoining rooms, allowing only one window for each of the latter; placing kitchens so far from the restaurant or dining-room that food was cold before it was served; making the rooms so large that the amount of floor space covered necessitates such a high rate that rooms are vacant most of the time; making the bathrooms too small, necessitating the use of very small tubs and leaving only little space beside; putting in too few elevators and greatly impairing the service thereby; lack of clothes closets when every room should have one, and the failure to provide proper ventilation, which, in a hotel, is very important, and is sometimes overlooked by architects. The lighting feature is another matter not properly treated as a rule.

—The need of a restriction against indiscriminate building construction is getting general recognition. Under the new building code adopted for the city of Wilkes-Barre the height of fireproof buildings is restricted to sixteen stories, or two hundred feet, but the height of no building may exceed four times the width of the street. Seven classes of structures are specified.

A Novel Fire Detector.

PRACTICAL tests made under actual fire conditions by the engineers of the National Board of Fire Underwriters were made a few days ago on a new automatic self-adjusting thermostat, operated on the principle of rapid rise of temperature, and called "The Ideal Fire Detector." The test was made at the factory of the Van Gleckland Manufacturing Co., 121 Lafayette street, Newark. The illustrations depict one of these detectors closed, and one cut in, showing the hot air compartment enclosed in sensitized copper, with the electric wires attached thereto. The other illustration shows the type of fire detector used for installation behind walls.

The detectors were placed on the ceiling of the loft (30x90 feet), about ten feet apart lengthwise, because there were iron beams on the ceiling about 24 inches high, forming deep pockets. In each pocket a detector was placed in the middle and connected to a number of an annunciator.

One of the tests was made in the following manner: Two tin pans, each 12x24 inches, containing a thin sheet of asbestos paper, which was saturated with alcohol. The tin pans were placed on the floor near the open elevator shaft and as far away as possible from any detector on the ceiling. The alcohol was lighted, and in ten seconds an automobile horn was making a terrible noise, and the number on the annunciator dropped, indicating the location of the fire detector which made the contact. A few seconds later another number dropped, and a third, and a fourth dropped, showing that the heated air caused by the fire, overflowing the deep pockets on the ceiling, had caused the detectors in the neighboring pockets to operate. Immediately after the fire had died out, one after the other of the detectors compensated to normal.

Several other tests were made in different parts of the loft, with the same results, the alarm being given in from nine to fifteen seconds after the fire started.

One test was made by lighting about ten or twelve sheets of newspaper laid loosely on a sheet iron platform. The alarm came in in about twenty seconds after lighting the paper on one corner (the paper burning very slowly for the first ten seconds).

Another test was made with four square feet of alcohol fire, as in the previous tests in the rear of loft, with all the doors and windows on all sides wide open, producing a strong draft. The alarm came in this time in twenty-five seconds from the time the match was lighted.

The detector consists of a copper cylinder 1¾ inches long and 1⅛ inches outside of diameter by .012 inch wall, closed at one end, containing about 1.25 cubic inches of air. On the other end, or top, is soldered a threaded brass ring to receive the diaphragm, a die casting made of type metal, melting at about 500 degrees F. Over the lower end of the diaphragm holder is fastened a specially treated gold-beater-skin diaphragm. In the top of the diaphragm holder is screwed a base molded from condensite, which, according to the tests made for the manufacturers, is the most durable substance known today. This condensite base carries the contact device, consisting of a sheet brass bridge screwed down solid with brass screws on the brass inserts molded in the condensite base. In the center of this bridge is a silver-pointed contact screw, which can be adjusted, and locked in any desired position by means of a brass lock nut. The base also has fastened to one of the inserts a silver contact spring. A small brass rod with a button on its lower end rests normally on the gold-beater-skin diaphragm. It will press against the silver spring and make the electric contact when the air contained in the copper cylinder expands and presses against the diaphragm, on account of the sudden rise of temperature of the air surrounding it, which will take place when a fire starts in the room where the detector is located.

Unique Waterproofing Job.

WATERPROOFING concrete walls under a water head pressure of 40 feet in cramped quarters without making structural alterations is the feat that recently was performed by a London firm for the Charing Cross and Hampstead railway at its Embankment station.

The problem was to so free the walls from water which percolated through the concrete interstices that it would be possible to apply to the interior surface a lining of tile on a concrete plaster bed. When the lining had been applied before, it was forced off by the water pressure. The walls were those of an escalator shaft and made the station especially unsightly. Finally the railroad's consulting engineer decided to apply a metallic composition of secret formula which had been used with considerable success by the British and Colonial governments, with the result that the walls were entirely dried and the tile-lining was put on.

The illustration shows the simplicity with which the material is applied even under such head pressure. The composition being in liquid form, it was applied quite simply with a brush. The preparation becomes incorporated with the grain of the brick or concrete. It is manufactured by S. Thornley Mott & Vines, 1 Victoria st., London, S. W.

NOTABLE IMPROVEMENTS IN BROOKLYN

About $2,000,000 Expended in Financial and Shopping Districts—New Clubs, Theatres and Mercantile Structures Enhance Appearance of Entire Section.

DURING the last few months an amount of money totaling over two million dollars has been expended in the improvement of Brooklyn's shopping and financial districts, and additional improvements in the form of new buildings and improvements to existing structures are contemplated which will no doubt reach a like amount.

In the section known as the "shopping district," which includes lower Fulton street and the adjacent streets from Borough Hall to Flatbush avenue, are found department stores which vie in equipment and conveniences with all but the newest of Manhattan's world-renowned department stores. Specialty shops for gowns, suits, lingerie, millinery, boots and sundries, where only the price is different, and that largely in favor of local shoppers who are not required to pay Fifth avenue prices. Theatres, while not so numerous as on Broadway, still with every convenience, and booking the best productions at rates generally lower than Manhattan prices.

This section during the last few months has shown a decided activity in real estate transactions and along building lines. New projects have been completed in the office building and financial sections whose success for years to come is assured, and many buildings which will benefit these sections are now in course of construction or contemplated.

That lower Brooklyn is alive to its opportunities can best be shown by citing briefly a few of the newly completed buildings and others contemplated for this section.

The Terminal Building, at the southwest corner of Court and Joralemon streets, erected at a cost of more than half a million dollars by the John H. Parker Company, 315 Fourth avenue, New York City, is twelve stories in height and is the most modern and completely equipped office building in the borough. It is the new home of the Nassau National Bank and the Brooklyn League. The Young Women's Christian Association Building, recently completed, at the cost of $500,000, at the corner of Schermerhorn and Nevins streets. The new clubhouse for the Brooklyn lodge of Elks, now under construction in the west side of South Oxford street, 125 feet south of Hanson place, planned by H. Van Beuren McGonigle, and which is being erected by the Tower Construction Company.

The Brooklyn University Club is planning to erect a building in the neighborhood of Lafayette avenue and South Oxford street, the plans for which will be prepared by Ludlow & Peabody, architects. This operation is not definite at the present time, although the club's building committee is active. The Apollo Club, Brooklyn's foremost musical society, purchased the property at the corner of Greene and Carlton avenues and are altering the two old buildings and erecting an extensive addition, for clubhouse purposes. While some of these buildings seem to be on the frontiers of the districts in question, they will have a very direct interest upon the life and growth of the sections.

Along Fulton street many improvements to buildings have been made, and numerous others are contemplated. Oppenheim, Collins & Co. are having plans prepared by Buchman & Fox, architects, for the erection of a modern department store, five or six stories in height. This building will be located at 481 to 485 Fulton street, 396 to 402 Bridge street, running through to 147 to 151 Lawrence street, and will be thoroughly complete and modern in its appointments. Julius Brody, manufacturer and dealer in women's wear, purchased 446 to 448 Fulton street and contemplates extensive improvements to the building for his own occupancy.

The old Central Branch of the Y. M. C. A. property, with a frontage in Fulton street running through from Hanover place to Bond street, and covering an area of 20,000 square feet, has been sold to Jason S. Bailey of Boston, manufacturer of articles for five and ten-cent stores. Parfitt Brothers, architects, will prepare plans for extensive improvements to this property, altering it into lofts and stores. The new Central Branch of the Y. M. C. A., which will be located in Hanson place, from Fort Green place to South Elliott street, and to cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000, will be the last word in convenience and equipment for buildings of this type. Trowbridge & Ackerman, architects, 62 West 45th street, Manhattan, have prepared the plans, and the Whitney Company, 1 Liberty street, has the general contract for construction of the building.

Livingston street, which formerly was only known as the back door of Fulton street's department stores, has become an avenue of high-class shops and offices. The newest project for this street is the theatre to be erected by Frank A. Keeney, at a cost of $200,000, from plans by William E. Lehman, architect, of Newark, N. J. This building will occupy a plot 164x187 feet in Schermerhorn street, with an entrance in Livingston street, about opposite the present Montauk Theatre. This theatre will have a seating capacity of 2,450 people. John H. Parker Company, New York City, has recently received the general contract for its construction.

In the heart of the financial and office building section, further to the east of the shopping district, the Arbuckle Memorial Building for Plymouth church is being erected at the northeast corner of Orange and Hicks streets, at a cost of $100,000. William Kennedy Construction Company, 215 Montague street, has the contract for this work. At the northeast corner of Montague street, through to Clinton and Pierrepont streets, the new home of the Brooklyn Trust Company will be erected. Plans are being prepared by York & Sawyr, architects, 50 East 41st street, New York City, and the contractors for general construction are Marc Eidlitz & Son, 30 East 41st street.

Two or three years ago the Brooklyn Daily Eagle started a campaign, the central idea of which was to "Boost Brooklyn" for the purpose of making it a better, brighter and bigger borough. The campaign was taken up by other Brooklyn papers, civic and trade associations, and much publicity was given to the movement. For a while considerable interest was taken in the project, and through the co-operation of the workers results became apparent. The residents of Brooklyn began to take notice that their borough was a real place, after all, and that it was not impossible to receive the same value for their money that they obtained elsewhere, no matter whether the money was spent for the necessities of life or upon luxuries and recreation. Interest is lost in most movements of this kind, sooner or later, however, and Brooklyn's boost idea was no exception; but the results of the short campaign can readily be noticed and will be more apparent as time wears on.

ELECTRICAL DEVELOPERS ELECT.

Society Plans National Campaign to Extend Use of Electricity.

At the meeting of the Society for Electrical Development, held in Philadelphia early this month, the following officers were elected to serve one year: President, Henry L. Doherty; first vice-president, W. H. Johnson; second vice-president, A. W. Burchard; third vice-president, W. E. Robertson; fourth vice-president, J. R. Crouse; fifth vice-president, Ernest Freeman; general manager, J. M. Wakeman; acting secretary-treasurer, James Smieton, Jr. The following were elected to serve as the executive committee during the following year: H. L. Doherty, Ernest Freeman, A. W. Burchard, J. H. Strong, Gerard Swope, L. A. Osborne, W. E. Robertson, J. H. Crouse and W. H. Johnson. Mr. Johnson was elected chairman of the executive committee.

One of the purposes of this society will be to develop the use of electrical energy by the general public, thus increasing the market of all engaged in the industry, leaving the question of defining the channels through which, and the methods by which, the increased market shall be reached. J. M. Wakeman, general manager of the society, reported that the funds necessary to begin active work had been pledged and the best men available to carry it on had been secured.

Rumored New Skyscraper.

According to current reports a newly formed corporation has purchased through Herbert J. Spyr, the American Bank Note Company property on Trinity place, between Thames and Greenwich streets, for about $1,300,000, and contemplates the erection of a thirty-two story office building. Francis H. Kimball and Frederick Rossa, architects. 71 Broadway, are preparing sketches for the proposed building to be erected on this site at an estimated cost of $4,000,000. As proposed the project will cover the plots 78-86 Trinity place and 111-123 Greenwich street. This gives a frontage of 124.6 feet on Trinity place and 178.1 feet in Greenwich street. It is said that most of the space in the proposed structure has already been leased for twenty-one years to large industrial corporations and railroads. Architectural details of the project have not as yet been fully determined except for the size and number of stories and it is not expected that active operations will be started for quite some time. The complete details of a project of similar nature for the same site were given in the Record and Guide, September 27, 1913, when Howells & Stokes, architects, filed plans for the building at that time contemplated by the American Bank Note Company.

New York State Work.

The following items which were included in construction bill No. 12 recently passed by the Legislature were approved by the Governor. Work on these items will be accomplished during the coming year. A number of the items in the bill were vetoed and will remain in abeyance indefinitely.

For armory commission repairs, improvements, and betterments of the State arsenal, camp grounds, rifle ranges and emergency repairs, improvements and betterment of the armories throughout the state $75,000. For the construction of an armory and stable in the city of Albany $65,000. For the construction of the southwest wing of Danamora State Hospital and additional repairs and equipment, $70,000. For miscellaneous repairs and improvements, emergencies and equipments at the various State hospitals, $150,000. For the construction of one dormitory building at Rome State Custodial Asylum, Rome, N. Y., $150,000.

Three Apartments for E. W. Browning.

Buchman & Fox, architects, 30 East 42d street, are preparing plans for three apartments to be built by Edward W. Browning, 110 West 40th street. The buildings will be erected in the same neighborhood on property recently purchased by Mr. Browning. One will be at 42 West 72d street, another at 118 West 72d street, and the third at 126 West 73d street. Each will cover but one city lot, 25 x 100, and be thirteen stories in height. They will be similar in general design, built of limestone and terra cotta, and are expected to cost about $60,000 each. These structures will be the first tall buildings to be erected in 72d street between Central Park West and Columbus avenue, and in 73d street between Columbus avenue and Sherman square.

Hotel McAlpin Addition.

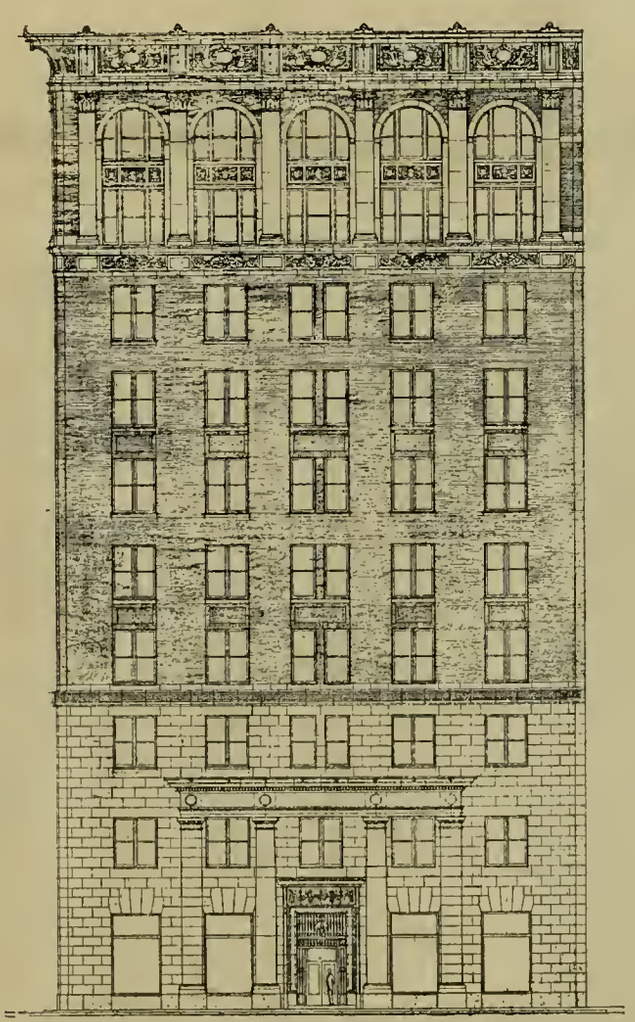
Warren & Wetmore, architects, 70 East 45th street, have been selected by by the Greeley Square Hotel Company, Charles A. B. Pratt, president, to prepare the plans and specifications for an addition to the Hotel McAlpin. This addition will adjoin the present building on the east, occupying Nos. 46-48 East 34th street, which the company recently purchased from the Floyd Estate. The addition will be exactly the same in height as the present hotel, and the treatment of the facade will be similar. About two hundred additional bedrooms will be provided by the improvement, as well as extra dining rooms and public space, making the McAlpin by far the largest hotel in the city. The management of the hotel is under the direction of Merry & Boomer, proprietors.

Architect for Central Y. W. C. A.

Don Barber, architect, 101 Park avenue, has been retained by the building committee of the Young Women's Christian Association, Mrs. J. S. Cushman, president, to prepare the plans and specifications for the new Central Branch building. This building will be erected on Lexington avenue, at the southwest corner of 53d street. Although the details of construction have not been definitely decided upon, it is expected that the project will cost in the neighborhood of $600,000, and will include every device and convenience for the health and comfort of the women who will make this building their home.

Subway Contract Awarded.

The contract for the construction of Section No. 7 of Route No. 5, the Lexington avenue subway, extending from 43d to 53 street, was awarded this week. This subway is now under construction north of 53d street. Section No. 7 does not include the diagonal connection which is to be built across 42d street, which will be made a separate section. The plans call for the construction of a four-track underground railroad, and the work must be completed within 31 months from the delivery of the contract. The Rapid Transit Subway Construction Company was the successful bidder, at $1,915,164.



Schwartz & Gross Selected Architects.

Schwartz & Gross, 347 5th avenue, have just been commissioned by Mayer & Mayer, Inc., to prepare plans for a twelve-story apartment house to be erected at the northeast corner of West End Avenue and 84th Street, on a plot 100x133 feet. The structure will be of the highest type, having suites of 5, 6, 7 and 8 rooms. The cost is placed at $600,000.

BROOKS BROTHERS' NEW BUILDING

OPERATIONS will soon be started on the new building to be erected on Madison avenue at the northwest corner of 44th street, from plans by La Farge & Morris, 101 Park avenue, and Clinton & Russell, 32 Nassau street, associated architects. The building is being erected by William Everdell, Jr., and William H. Brown, owners, who bought the property recently from Thomas B. Hidden.

Brooks Brothers, manufacturers and dealers in men's clothing, for thirty years at the southeast corner of Broadway and 22d street, have leased the new building for a term of twenty-one years with renewal privileges. This move will bring Brooks Brothers in close proximity to the present retail section and the heart of the hotel and club districts.

TO BE ERECTED ON MADISON AVENUE AT 45TH STREET.

The new building will be ten stories in height and will cover a plot 85 x 120 feet. Brick, limestone and terra cotta are the materials to be used in construction. The façade has been designed in a dignified yet simple manner in the style of the Italian Renaissance and which will harmonize beautifully with the Hotel Biltmore, diagonally opposite, and the new Yale Club being erected on Vanderbilt avenue. In interior layout and arrangement the building will be a model of convenience and equipment, and will have all the modern devices for comfort and safety of patrons and employes. Show cases and fixtures will be specially designed and lighted for the display of garments and haberdashery. The general contract for the erection of the building has been awarded to Irons & Todd, 101 Park avenue. The building will cost about $750,000 and will be, in every particular, the equal of any of the buildings recently erected for showroom and department store purposes.

Motor Cleanliness

In many plants it is necessary to keep the materials which are worked upon, clean and free from dust. Individual electric motors mean the highest factor of cleanliness. Ordinarily, dirt rises to the ceiling where it settles on the belts and shafting; but with individual motors, the belts are no higher than the middle of the machine and everything is kept clean.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

FURTHER PRICE CUTTING MAY BE CHECKED BY OPERATION OF WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW EFFECTIVE JULY 1

Adds to Over-Head Charges—Suburban Building Increasingly Active.

DEALERS in building materials are beginning to feel a little more encouragement with respect to the current season's demands. Instances were cited this week by some distributors in the outlying sections of the city and in East Jersey where building operations which had been deferred for some time were about to get under way and in the central section of the district some steel contracts were being figured that had not been looked upon as live prospects.

The purchase ot southern iron by leading pipe and supply interests has served to stimulate interest in pig iron. Sales both north and south are reported to bc slightly better, but there are still instances where the gain in sales has been made at the cost of list prices. Building orders are improving, but steel that is being sold within a dollar a ton of the quotations given late in 1911, since when wages have increased, does not allow of very liberal profits and incidentally indicates that those who are holding back construction work for more attractive quotations than those now being made can hardly expect to realize their hopes.

The disposition among dealers here is to hold to list quotations as rigidly as possible. Not one was found who was willing to say that the time was propitious for shading even for desirable business because the profit was too narrow already, and with the Workmen's Compensation act becoming effective on July first, additional overhead charges would be piled up against the heavy burdens already carried by handlers of building materials in this city, it will become almost suicidal for a dealer to attempt to shave the prices any closer than they already have been. Furthermore the supply is not over-ample.

In the meantime manufacturers of commodities entering into building construction are following conservative policies with regard to output. In many cases, such as common brick, steel, cement and equipment of one kind or another, outputs are being kept down to between 50 and 60 per cent.

"This is not because we have no faith in the signs of impending improvement," said a brick man, "but because we want to prevent flooding of the market with supplies until the demand unquestionably warrants it. There is not going to be any sudden reaction to prosperity. Whatever recovery there is will be slow and spotty, a condition that above all discourages speculation and rampant output, a chance that there will be a market for it. Manufacturers have done too much sacrificing of profits during the last seven years to be led into any more traps. Increase of manufacturing output for some time will be rigidly controlled, at least until the present policy of hand-to-mouth buying among dealers has passed."

This significant factor in the trend of the building material market comes from the pig iron blast furnaces: "In the last ten weeks orders for foundry and steel making iron have been about equal to those placed during the corresponding period last year." Says the Journal of Commerce: "From the first of January to the first of June this year merchant furnaces booked orders for 2,000,000 tons of pig iron, while during the corresponding period last year contracts aggregated only 1,425,000 tons."

This is interpreted as being the most encouraging feature in the market, for it presages late summer and early fall activity among steel and other materials entering into construction of one kind or another. If this favorable start is increased, or even maintained, it means active construction later on this year.

Plan filings for new buildings in the five boroughs this week compared with those of last week follow:

IRON AND STEEL.

Current Building Orders Not Quite as Active as Six Months Ago.

BUILDING steel orders have not shown the activity that seemed to have been promised a few weeks ago. Orders booked by fabricating shops since the first of June have been relatively at the same rate as in May, although the inquiry has been stronger. May tonnages for the country showed a decrease of about 31 per cent. from April. Estimating the country's entire capacity at about 172,000 tons a month, May orders ran about 98,000 tons, which is considerably higher than other reports issued early in the month. The variance in estimates is based upon different methods pursued in making calculations. All reports, however, show a decreased tonnage in May. The encouraging sign, however, is the continued inquiry for railroad equipment.

Steel building trade shows a tonnage of about 15,000 for structural shapes for commercial buildings, manufacturing plant extensions and bridge work for the week closing Thursday. Much of this steel is for subway work, but 2,200 tons was scheduled for the Bonwit-Teller Store, which will be supplied by Post & McCord. The Authentic Realty Co. have been taking bids on the loft building at Long Island City, calling for 650 tons and the pending steel order for the Museum of Arts calls for about 1,800 tons. The Guelet Estate loft building will take about 2,000 tons and one of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. buildings will require about 1,000 tons. The Motordome at Sheepshead Bay will need about 4,000 tons. Bids were opened by the Central Railroad of New Jersey for small lots of structural steel.

The spotty condition of the steel market is shown in the prices quoted at the opening of the Jersey Central bids. They indicate that the smaller shops are still aggressively in the market for business.

The following quotations are interesting as showing the character of competitions still prevailing. For an extension of the third floor of the express building at Jersey City, calling for little more than 85 tons of shapes, the Lackawanna Bridge Co. and the Eastern Steel Company submitted tie bids of 1.80c per pound for fabricated material delivered, shipments to be completed August 10. The price is for delivery to the Jersey Central lines, and the work is likely to go to the Eastern Steel Company as being the closer to the point of construction. Bids were also received by the same road for a part of its terminal buildings at Jersey City calling for less than 100 tons of steel. The lowest bid submitted was that of Levering & Garrigues, which was 2.26c, and the time of delivery August 22. The next lowest bid was that of the Lackawanna Bridge Company, which was 2.30c delivered, to be completed August 10.

PAINTS AND OILS.

Good Jobbing Demand for Former—Oil Prices Greatly Depressed.

CONTRARY conditions rule in the paint and oil departments. In the former jobbing trade is reported to be good while the volume of painting contracts going ahead this season is considered to be below normal. The retrenchment of railroads has had much to do with the depression of this market, but dealers have found a steady call for goods. In fact, whenever there is a depression in building construction the small shop demand usually is larger, and this seems to be the case so far this year.

Paint ingredients are spotty. White lead, dry and in oil has held rigidly to list prices. Consumption of this material is reported as being satisfactory, but smaller packages rule on sales showing comparatively few building operations nearing the finishing stage. Prices now seem to be scheduled to stay low for the remainder of the summer at 7½ cents for 100, 250 and 500 pound kegs. English lead is quoted at 9 and 10 cents. Red lead is slightly firmer on demand and is being offered by leading sellers at 7¾ cents for 100 pound kegs. The jobbing trade in litharge is quiet. Dry colors are weak. Ready mixed paints are in heavy stock on jobbers' shelves, but manufacturers have only moderate supplies. Prices are kept fairly steady.

Linseed oil is showing signs of firming. Prices run here at 54 and 55 cents. Turpentine has fluctuated considerably on price and are slightly higher than a month ago. The price is now near fifty cents a gallon. Recent advances have checked buying to some extent.

Crude petroleum is decidedly depressed. The price reached $1.75 at the wells this week.

PROPOSED N. J. LIEN LAW.

Commission Submits Its Recommendations to Legislature After Long Study.

WITH a view to correcting the weak spots in the Mechanics' Lien Law as it now exists, the commission, appointed sometime ago by the New Jersey State Legislature to draft a new statute, has finished its investigations and the Legislature is expected to act upon it at an early date.

The commissioners and the interests they represent are Frank H. Genung, of 16 Jersey street, Newark, president of the Mason Material Dealers' Association of New Jersey, and brother of the president of the New York Building Material Exchange; William A. Tuttle, of Westfield, N. J., lumber dealer and Congressman; James G. Blauvelt, of Paterson, N. J., the counsel representing the Building Trades Union; Arthur A. Quinn, of Perth Amboy, representing the labor unions; James M. Reilly, of Newark, secretary of the Mason Dealers' Association of New Jersey, was secretary of the commission. The law was prepared by Edward J. Luce at the suggestion of the commission and the bill was submitted to the Legislature as drafted.

If this measure is passed the State of New Jersey will have what is generally considered to be a model law of its kind. It is known as the Mechanics' Lien Act of 1914.

COMMON BRICK.

Better Movement to Jobs—Wholesale Market Unsteady.

HUDSON common brick showed a slight gain in unloading movement this week, but the wholesale price situation remained weak. Manufacturers are not satisfied with the market conditions here and are not shipping heavily, hence the fact that sales exceeded arrivals at the docks does not indicate strengthening. Raritan brick is still steady. Newark yard movements are sluggish.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, June 18, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

LUMBER.

Hardwoods in Greater Demand—Building Grades Are Sluggish.

ALTHOUGH no difficulty is experienced in placing orders for any hardwood stock the volume of current business shows an increase. Demand for hardwood flooring is said to be satisfactory and the number of inquiries received indicates considerable volume of business coming out in the next few months. The manufacturing and yard trade is not carrying any surplus supplies, and a great deal of the going business is for mixed cars,

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

RELIEF ASKED FROM INSPECTION PLAGUE

The State Commission Hears Pleas From Real Estate and Commercial Interests—Injustice of Factory Laws Pointed Out and Changes Asked For.

THE Real Estate Board, which is composed of the owners or representatives of seventy-five per cent. of the factory buildings in the Borough of Manhattan, has protested to the State Factory Investigating Commission against the enactment of labor laws to apply to New York City which affect the construction or alteration of buildings, or the regulation of the Health and Fire Departments and Building Bureaus. The board advises the immediate repeal of all present labor laws which affect New York City in the foregoing particulars. The board does not feel that the Department of Labor was created to have jurisdiction over these matters, but that they should be regulated by the City Departments in New York City, which have had jurisdiction over them for years.

This appeal and advice was the embodiment of the suggestions most often heard at the series of hearings given by the State Commission at City Hall this week. The commission is engaged in "recodifying" the labor laws, among which are included fire prevention and building laws. A tentative revision has been prepared with the aid of the Legislature Bill-Drafting Bureau of Columbia University, and copies have been distributed. At the outset of the hearings the Lieutenant-Governor said:

A Promise of Fair Play.

"The Factory Commission is interested solely in securing safe and sanitary working conditions. We desire to accomplish that result with the least possible expense and inconvenience to property owners and employers. We, therefore, welcome any suggestion having this end in view.

"It is the desire of the commission to recommend to the next session of the Legislature a revision of the Labor Law that will accomplish the purpose for which it was intended, and, at the same time, be fair and reasonable in its operations."

The Real Estate Board was represented by special counsel in the person of George W. Olvany, former Deputy Fire Commissioner. The presentment which he made virtually constitutes the case of all real estate interests against the State. Mr. Olvany early in his remarks reminded Lieutenant-Governor Wagner, who was presiding, and the counsel of the commission, Mr. Elkus, that the Legislature last year passed a home rule bill in order that the people of the cities might have a voice in their internal affairs, and therefore there should be no objection to allowing the largest city in the State the right to regulate the construction of its buildings and the matters appertaining thereto. He added:

"New York City should not be burdened with the additional expense of that portion of the Labor Department, to say nothing about the annoyance, whose functions are exactly the same as those of the already existing City Departments. The only work which can be done by this additional portion of the department is to cause a needless double inspection of buildings and create a chaotic condition in real estate, because it is impossible to ascertain what the requirements of a building now are, in view of the many departments having jurisdiction over the same matters.

A Plea for Self Government.

"We therefore appeal to your commission, and ask that the recodification of the Labor Laws be drafted to allow New York City to govern itself in all matters over which its departments have had jurisdiction for many years past and thereby relieve its real estate from the terrible yoke of oppression which has been throttling it for some years past.

"Having made our general objection to the present and proposed Labor Law, we wish next to specifically call your attention to our objections to the proposed recodification of the Labor Laws, viz:

"The term 'factory,' as defined by the present Labor Law, is, in our opinion, entirely too broad and drastic, and unnecessarily burdens real property owners in many particulars.

"The object of the Labor Law is to protect persons employed in factories, but under the present definition of a factory it is necessary to protect persons who are not employed in factories or mercantile establishments if they are in the same building; for instance, if one person were employed at labor upon the ground floor of an office building, ten stories in height, it would be necessary for the owner of that building to comply with all the provisions of the Labor Law. This is unquestionably unreasonable and absurd.

Defining a Factory.

"We would suggest that the term 'factory' include any mill, workshop, or that part of any building used for the employment at manufacturing of fifteen or more persons. And that the term 'factory building' include only that part of any building which is used for a factory.

"And that the term 'mercantile establishment' include any place where goods, wares or merchandise are offered for sale at retail, and more than fifteen persons are employed. It seems to us that it is unnecessary to include wholesale mercantile establishments within the provisions of the Labor Law, because the character of employment is generally of a high character and conditions are vastly different from those which exist in retail mercantile establishments. As a general rule wholesale mercantile establishments are places where goods are sold by samples, and the business conducted practically upon the lines of an office.

Building Classification.

"We are of the opinion that buildings in New York City should be classified in accordance with their construction and occupancy. A building which is fireproof and which has a small non-hazardous occupancy should not be placed under the same requirements with a fire-trap and a large occupancy.

"On page 94, line 21: we ask that the word 'engineers' be inserted after the work 'janitors.' A great many small factories, in cold weather, employ a day and night engineer, and it is usual for the night engineer to remain on duty on Sunday. The law requires a licensed engineer in these buildings, and if the engineers employed during the week are not allowed to work on Sunday it would be necessary to employ an additional licensed engineer for Sunday work. It has been the experience of the owners of those buildings that it is impossible to employ a licensed engineer for one day, particularly on a Sunday, and we therefore feel that this exception should be made, so that the prohibition against Sunday work will not apply to engineers."

Construction Reforms.

Other changes in the tentative code recommended by Mr. Olvany may be summarized as follows:

Eliminate the prohibition against hoisting lumber and timber on the outside of buildings, in the same way that steel beams are. The definition of terms relating to the construction of buildings, as contained in sections 180 to 189 inclusive, should be left to local authority. The allowable openings in walls (page 148) of new buildings is insufficient. The underwriters allow openings of 8 x 10, and such an opening is required in many buildings for heavy trucking. The allowable distance between two such openings should be twenty instead of forty feet. Section 191, subdivision one, should be made to conform to the law passed this year.

For Six-Story Buildings.

Make the provision for stairway enclosures apply to six instead of five-story buildings, in cities of the first class; and to five-story buildings in other cities. This change is asked for because the Fire Department of New York is amply able to protect a six-story building in case of fire, and because additional requirements are therefore unwarranted. The responsibility for compliance with the provision requiring passageways to be kept unobstructed (section 192) should not be placed upon the owner of the building. To compel the owner of a tenant factory building to supervise passageways within the several factories, which are in control of the tenants, is unreasonable and unenforcable. The same objection applies to locked doors and windows opening on fire-escapes.

Sections Nos. 190-197 inclusive, relating to the construction of factory buildings, stairways, doors, partitions, shafts, exits, fire-escapes, inspection of buildings and the limitation of the number of occupants, should be amended so that the requirements for a building should only extend to providing safety to the parts used as factories and not to the rest of the building, irrespective of its use; and the construction should be left to local authorities in cities of the first class.

Fire-escape stairways should not be built to roofs from which there is no possible means of escape to an adjacent building. A ladder should be allowed from the top balcony to roof, and from lowest balcony to ground, because of the fact that in many cases it is impracticable to provide stairways. The Tenement House and Fire Departments in this city countenance the use of ladders.

Sprinklers.

The use of any "approved" automatic sprinkler system should be permitted (page 172, sub-division 4). Fire-resisting partitions should be permitted, as they are satisfactory for all purposes. It should not be necessary to install fire alarm signal system in any other parts of a building than those actually used for factory purposes. Responsibility for unlocked and unobstructed openings should be definitely fixed upon the occupants using the same. Smoking should be allowed in an enclosed room approved of for that purpose.

Divide Responsibility.

Changes in a number of sections are recommended so as to divide responsibility between landlord and tenant fairly. The term "owner," as used in the law (page 197, line 3), should not include "the agent in charge of the property," who may be merely the collector of the rents without authority to spend a dollar.

The penalties provided in section 370 are too severe and should be modified.

Among the important witnesses on the first day of the hearings were Rudolph P. Miller, M. S., formerly Superintendent of Buildings, who is now engaged in aiding the Board of Aldermen in drafting a new Building Code for New York City; G. Richards Davis, of the Allied Real Estate Interests; Alfred R. Erkus, representing the Merchants' Association, and Julius Franke of Maynicke & Franke, representing the New York Chapter of Architects. The remarks of the latter were unusually brief, and also to the point. He said:

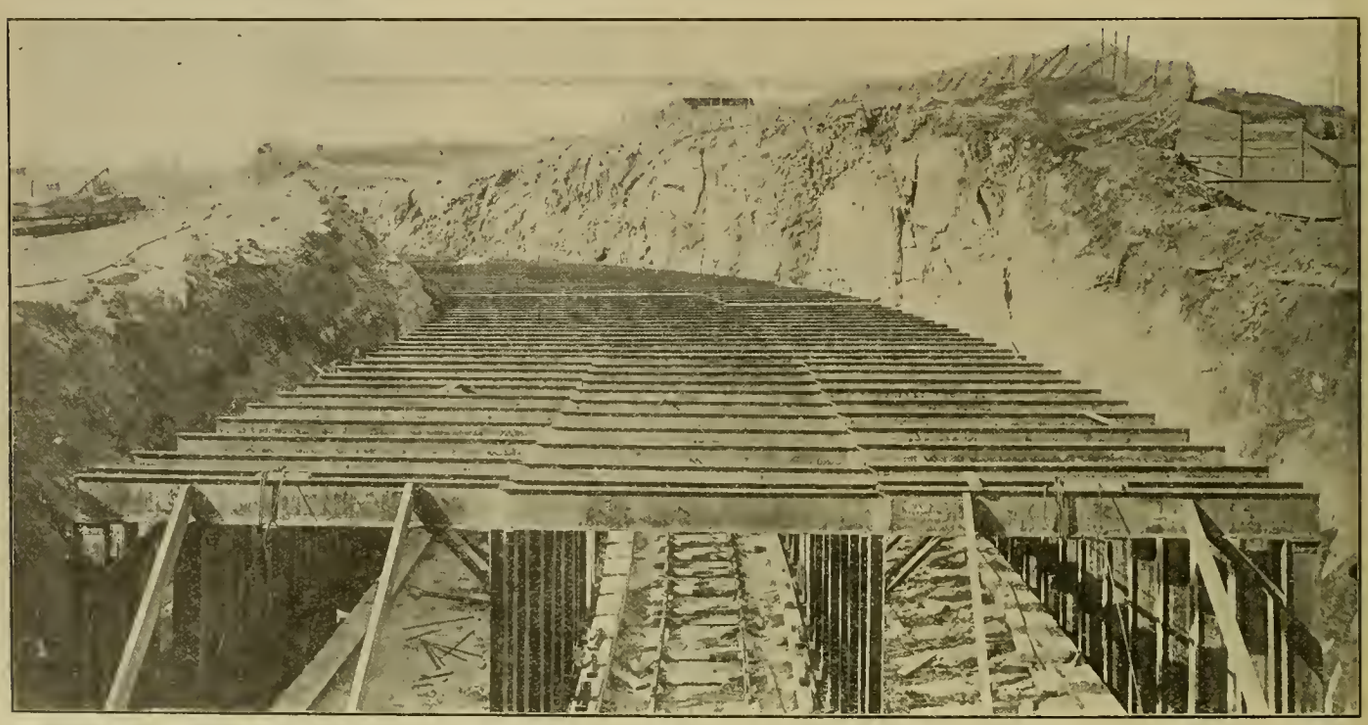
Where the Architects Stand.

"The architects feel that the administration of the various laws affecting the building industry is cumbersome and expensive, both as affecting the property owner and from the standpoint of municipal economy; and we, therefore, recommend that there be but one department to have charge of the administration of all laws and matters affecting buildings, and that a system of inspections be instituted to bring all building matters under one head in this department."

Mr. Miller advised that the State Labor Law should be enforced in this city by the municipal authorities. The institution of a Department of Safety to exercise all the police powers of the municipality, as in some other cities, was recommended, as explained by Mr. Miller himself in the Record and Guide of recent date.

Maurice Wertheim, member of the Industrial Board, recommended (1) that the Labor Law should be revised and made to contain only general principles, leaving the details to be put into an industrial code; and (2) that the salaries of the members of the Industrial Board be raised to $3,000 and that the board be given power to modify the provisions of the code:

"The law should be flexible, and we should have more power than we have at present. We have no power to correct mistakes in the law, and when we want changes we must go to the Legislature. Make the Industrial Board an important body, or wipe it out."



Henry S. Lion of Rouse & Goldstone, architects, advised the consolidation of the Building Tenement House, Fire Prevention, Labor and portions of other departments having to do with building inspection.

The president of the United Real Estate Owners' Association Henry Bloch, blamed the agitation of the Factory Commission for the great depression he said existed in the real estate market.

JEROME AVENUE SUBWAY CONSTRUCTION

Contractors' Forces Marking Out Positions for Piers for the Elevated Structure and Starting Excavating—Fulfilling Long Expectations

JEROME AVENUE, the main thoroughfare of the West Bronx, has at last been reached by the subway builders. The construction forces of the Oscar Daniels Company have begun work there by staking out with red flags the positions for the foundation of the piers for the elevated structure which is to extend up the avenue to Woodlawn road from a connection with the Lexington avenue subway in Manhattan. Excavating has also begun and property owners throughout all the great section to be served by the new rapid transit line are elated. There will be a connection also from the West Side Elevated road so that the Bronx people will have their choice of two through routes downtown. The stations on the Jerome avenue line will be at Mott Haven (138th street), 149th street, 161st, 167th and 170th streets, Belmont street, 176th street, Burnside road, 183d street, Fordham road, Kingsbridge road, 200th street, Mosholu parkway and Woodlawn road.

SUBWAY WORK ON THE JEROME AVENUE BRANCH—THROUGH FRANZ SIEGEL PARK.

All the Lexington avenue work north of 43d street is now under contract. The connection with the existing subway, which will include the diagonal station under 42d street, is yet to be awarded. During the last week the Public Service Commission awarded the contract for the construction of Section No. 7 of Route No. 5, the Lexington avenue subway in Manhattan, to the Rapid Transit Subway Construction Company, the lowest bidder, for $1,915,164.50. This subway is for operation by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, and will be connected with the existing subway south of 42d street. Section No. 7 covers that portion of the line in Lexington avenue between 43d and 53d streets.

The commission has also awarded a contract for the construction of Section No. 1 of Route No. 12, the Eastern Parkway subway in Brooklyn, to the Cranford Company. This subway is to be operated by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company as an extension of the existing subway, but in this section, which lies between the subway terminus and St. Marks avenue, the structure will provide for a six-track railroad.

125TH STREET AN IMPORTANT ARTERY

Values Well Maintained Despite Sluggish Realty Market—Vacancies Few and Well Located Properties in Demand—Harlem's Principal Thoroughfare.

PROBABLY the most important river-to-river thoroughfare north of 42d street, and appropriately called the geographical center of Manhattan, is 125th street. A street that 35 years ago was lined with stately residences set amid extensive lawns and flower gardens is today the chief business artery of one of the most thriving districts of New York City. Practically every industry characteristic of a large and flourishing community may be found in Harlem, and they concentrate their activity on this broad thoroughfare. With its unusually large quota of shops, theatres, banks and markets, 125th street takes a leading position among the important cross-town streets.

Besides the transit lines which cut the avenue longitudinally, and which today include surface cars, elevated roads and subways, there is a ferry connection across the Hudson to Northern New Jersey. A station of the new Lexington avenue subway, now in course of construction, will also be located at 125th street. For a long time agitation has been under way for an extension of the lines of the Union Railway Company across the Willis avenue bridge through 125th and Manhattan streets to the Fort Lee ferry. This matter is now pending before the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and will be considered when the Franchise Committee of the Board will make its report. The granting of this franchise will add considerably to the great shopping crowds in Harlem, since thousands of Bronx residents will take advantage of the one fare and patronize the high-class theatres and stores in 125th street.

Future of 125th Street.

"Today 125th street has greater possibilities than at any other time in its history," said George W. Short, of Porter & Co. "A street which 15 years ago had one or two banking institutions, one theatre, two or three restaurants, is now maintaining half a dozen banks, the same number of theatres, and perhaps fifty restaurants and lunch rooms, all indicative of a surrounding population to support them.

"In Harlem generally the older buildings are being superseded by newer and more modern types of construction. The best example of this new era is the new Theresa Hotel, at the southwest corner of Seventh avenue and 125th street, which is a high-class fireproof apartment hotel. Plans have been filed by Patrick McMorrow for a nine-story multi-family structure in West 123d street, and other similar buildings are contemplated for nearby streets.

The Southwest End.

"The district is supported by unexcelled transit facilities of every kind, even including a stage line on Seventh avenue and a station of the New York Central at Park avenue. If the movement for the Bronx car line extension is successful, the people of that borough will be drawn here, with all the attendant beneficial results which increased patronage means to any growing section. This location will respond as quickly as any other in the city when general business conditions improve."

Patrick H. Lynch, a real estate owner and operator for many years in this section, said this week: "I believe that Harlem, especially the southwest end, bounded roughly by Madison avenue, 110th street, Morningside avenue and 130th street, is due for advancement in values. Harlem has been one of the few localities which has steadily maintained its residential character and been in no way affected by the steady northward march of trade. As a result, it has undergone none of the recent changes which have practically wiped out many similar neighborhoods farther downtown. Evidence of the probability that it will continue to remain a residential district may be found in the movement which has already started to replace the small dwellings with apartment houses. A demand for small suites of two, three, four and five rooms, with all up-to-date improvements, is already manifest, and builders are realizing that this demand may be advantageously met by the erection of multi-family structures such as Patrick McMorrow is building in West 123d street.

125TH STREET, LOOKING WEST FROM LENOX AVENUE.

Splendid Transit.

"There are numerous reasons why this class of building is desirable and inevitable, the principal ones being, of course, the exceptional transit facilities and the topographical position which make it ideal for such purposes. The streets are all paved with asphalt, and all the municipal improvements are installed.

"Of course 125th street is the principal street in the northern end of Manhattan. Its growth has been steady and uninterrupted, and it has not received any of the opposition which some of the lower crosstown streets have encountered by reason of shifting trade and business centers. The street is steadily maintaining its prestige and returning to owners a good increment on their investment. Two and a half years ago I bought for my company 12,000 square feet in 125th street, which was then renting for about $21,000. As the old leases ran out we spent some money in improving the property, with a result that we are now getting $31,000, and the entire building is rented. This instance of enhanced income is characteristic of many other stores in the immediate neighborhood.

"Just as strong as the renting situation is the firmness of values. I believe 125th street has held its own in the last few years as good as, if not better than, any other similar street in the city. In 1886 lots between Seventh and Eighth avenues were offered for sale at $8,000 apiece. The prospective buyer postponed the closing of the deal for three hours. During that interval the lots were sold to the present owner, who has since refused over $300,000 for the property.

Changes in Values.

"The site of the present Alhambra Theatre and Nauss Building, on the west side of Seventh avenue, from 125th to 126th streets, was formerly a flower garden covering about fourteen lots. It was sold in 1904 for a reported price of $750,000. As another example of remarkable increase in land values, the northeast corner of Lenox avenue and 125th street may be cited. The property was owned about thirty years ago by a police officer named Wilkins, who leased it to a Mr. McKeon for 21 years, with a privilege to purchase during the term for $250,000. Every one, including McKeon, who kept the road house there, thought that the price was ridiculous, since Lenox avenue was in its very early stages of development.

"During rapid transit construction the street was in a torn-up condition, and the heirs of McKeon sold the lease with the privilege to purchase. The property was later bought by the New York Operating Co. for about $365,000, and is today held at close to $500,000. The plot, 74.11 x 85.11, with the buildings, was leased some time ago for 21 years, with a privilege of two renewals, to Harry Levey, the cleanser, for $23,000 a year net for the first 21 years. Mr. Levey later sold his lease for $25,000. The present lessee has since refused $60,000 for his interest."

Two New Deals.

Owners of realty in 125th street realize the value of their holdings and when improvements are made the future is seriously considered. It must be one extreme or the other, a taxpayer to care for immediate charges or a substantial improvement. The lease by the Higgins estate, reported in another column of the current issue of the Record & Guide, is a notable example. The estate leased its property between Seventh and Eighth avenues for a term of 200 years, for improvement with a theatre. The property extends through to 124th street and contains more than 20,000 square feet of ground area.

Just east of Fifth avenue another notable improvement is under advisement, though no details have as yet been announced. The property, known as 13 to 15 East 125th street, extending to 6 to 14 East 126th street, was acquired last April. Henry J. Hemmens, of 50 Wall street, is the owner. Mr. Hemmens is a director in the Edison Company and started the report that the company would improve the site.

SHOULD MILL CONSTRUCTION BE PERMITTED?

Building Code Editor Asked to Make a Place For It in New York City Construction Work — Suggestions Regarding Fireproof Trim.

SUGGESTIONS to provide in the new building code for mill construction, and to give it certain preferences over the ordinary joist construction, have been received by the editor of the code, Rudolph P. Miller, from several sources. There is some question, however, whether this form of construction is likely to find service in New York City in competition with steel frame or reinforced concrete. On the other hand, if it is suitable construction and has any superiority over other non-fireproof construction, should it not be given recognition? Authorities in other cities are taking an interest in Mr. Miller's work and sending criticisms and suggestions.

One critic writes:

"We suggest that the non-fireproof construction be divided to include a non-fireproof construction known as slow-burning or mill construction and defined as follows: Slow-burning or mill construction—shall apply to all buildings and structures with exterior walls of stone, brick, concrete or other approved masonry; with wooden posts, if used, having a sectional area of not less than ninety square inches; joists and girders having sectional area of not less than sixty-three square inches; roofs not less than two and five-eighths thick in a single layer; floors not less than three and one-half inches thick in not more than two layers, the lower one of which shall not be less than two and five-eighths inches thick; there shall be no concealed or enclosed spaces in connection with wood construction; all metallic parts, if any, are to be fireproofed as required for fireproof buildings.

What It Is Suitable For.

"Slow-burning or mill construction buildings come in Class E and we suggest that Section 11 of the proposed code read as follows: 'Class E—Factories, Lofts, Markets, Office Buildings, Printing Houses, Restaurants, Stables, Stores, Warehouses and Workships: Buildings of this class shall be of fireproof construction when over 40 feet in height, except that buildings of the slow-burning or mill construction type may be built 75 feet in height if not used for factory or workship purposes. The first floor of slow-burning or mill construction buildings shall be of fireproof construction except when the entire building is equipped with automatic sprinklers. If under 40 feet in height, the first floor of every building of this class shall be of fireproof construction. No wood shall be used in fireproof factories.'

"We appreciate the fact that the building laws of New York City have never included the use of this type of construction. Every other large city has recognized this type of construction for factory and warehouse purposes. Economy in cost of erection and safety from fire damage has made this a very popular type of construction. It has further advantages in being flexible to the extent that floors or posts can be readily reinforced or remodeled to suit changing conditions of occupancy incident to the life of a city building and the use of this type of construction fosters the industrial and commercial growth of any community.

"In St. Louis the Cupples Station properties comprise 40 buildings five and six stories high with three million square feet of floor surface and valued at six million dollars. The total fire damage to buildings, since 1889, when the first buildings were erected, is $2,500. No type of construction can show a better record. These buildings are used as warehouses, wholesale grocery and hardware being the principal occupancy. In St. Louis there is about one hundred and twenty-five acres of floor surface devoted to the manufacture of shoes and of mill construction.

"In Chicago, a tract known as the Central Manufacturing District has been building up during the past few years and in which there is three million six hundred thousand square feet of mill construction floor surface. During the past two years one million six hundred thousand square feet of such floor surface has been erected which in area is five times that of other forms of construction erected in this same district. There is no district in this country which is being more rapidly or better improved than this property.

Insurance Rates.

"The Associated Factory Mutual Fire Insurance companies cover only sprinkled risks, and the total of their insurance aggregate twenty-six hundred million dollars, and ninety per cent. of the buildings so covered are of this type of construction. The rate for this type is the same as for a fireproof building.

It is a well known fact that in unsprinkled risks the damage to contents by fire is greater and accomplished more quickly in a fireproof building of concrete construction than in one of mill construction, the former acting as an open-hearth or reverberatory furnace. The fact that a building is supposedly fireproof does not guarantee the safety of the combustible contents or the human occupants, and such a building has no advantages over the mill construction building provided the means of egress and protection to stair and elevator shafts are equal—in both cases there should be no open communication between floors. The mill constructed building offers no increased conflagration hazard provided the exterior openings are properly protected as ordinary prudence would demand.

"We realize that there is not the development in this style of construction in New York that obtains in other large centers, and it is probably due to the fact that the building laws have never recognized its merits. We believe that it has such economic and structural qualities as to justify its recognition in New York.

"Your proposed law permits the erection of Class D buildings, comprising dwellings, tenement houses, club houses and all residence buildings not specified in Class C, to a height of six stories or not to exceed seventy-five feet in height of non-fireproof construction. Thus you would house women and children in six-story non-fireproof buildings and restrict the storage or manufacture and sale of merchandise to a threestory non-fireproof building with both having the first floor firenroof construction. All of which would indicate that a greater protection was intended for goods and chattels than for human beings."

Other suggestions that have been received are:

Interior Doors.

"Interior doors and trim for use at stairways, elevators and utility shafts in all fireproof buildings shall be constructed either entirely of metal or with wood cores covered on all exposed surfaces with metal, or the equivalent of either of these types, as approved by the official or officials whose approval is required by any law or ordinance.

"Interior doors and trim for use in corridors, partitions and for purposes other than stairways, elevators and utility shafts, in all fireproof buildings, may be veneered upon white pine cores first covered on both sides with incombustible material placed in fixed contact thereto, or protected against ignition in any manner the equivalent thereof, as approved by the official or officials whose approval is required by any law or ordinance.

Interior Finish.

"When the height of a fireproof building exceeds 12 stories or more than one hundred and fifty feet, all outside window frames and sash shall be of metal, or wood covered with metal; inside trim on outside windows, except those in stairways and elevator shafts and all other interior trim apart from that of doors, may be hardwood, backed up by fireproofing material and set tight against the plaster. Corridor and communicating partition sash may be made in the manner herein described for corridor and partition doors and trim. Where wired glass is used in the sashes of doors and partitions other than metal it shall be held in place by metal angle bars covered by hardwood moldings."

A Criticism from Wisconsin.

Building Inspector Williams, of the Industrial Commission of Wisconsin, writes:

"I note that tenement houses (Section 11), more than six stories high, must be fireproof. We have, for some years, required such buildings more than four stories high to be fireproof. I suppose, however, that this is simply a case of going as far as you can.

"Section 19, paragraph 3, requires that no part of any floor shall be more than 100 feet distant from an exit. A corresponding provision in our code adds 'measuring along public passageways and aisles.'

"In Section 25, page 40, hotels and tenement houses are exempted from the requirement for fireproof windows on exposed sides. This exemption is in line with other building codes, but it certainly does not seem logical and I would be glad to know why you adopted it. The common condition of a row of tenement houses with adjoining lot line courts certainly constitutes a serious fire hazard, as exemplified in the fire of which I recently received a report in 134th street, New York."

The Fire Limits.

The ordinance fixing the new fire limits as introduced by the Building Committee at the meeting of the Board of Aldermen on Tuesday, June 23, follows the lines given in the Record and Guide on June 20, with the exception that at the request of Borough President Connolly, the fire limits in Queens were changed to leave out the section at the northerly end of Long Island City, and at the request of Borough President Mathewson, a strip one hundred feet on each side of Westchester avenue from the Bronx River to Pelham Bay Park added. At a hearing held yesterday no objection was made to the ordinance.

Sprinkler Orders.

"As it has been made quite clear that the cost of sprinkler equipments does not fall as a hardship upon owners, but can be recouped from decreased fire insurance rates, and that even the initial outlay need not be incurred, there is no earthly excuse why all firms requiring them should not install these equipments," says Commissioner Adamson. "One thing is certain; I intend to exert my utmost endeavor to see that sprinkler orders are complied with from now on."

ADVISORY COUNCIL.

Plans for the Summer—Time to Put Premises in Order.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests was held at the office of the council on Wednesday afternoon. The selection of representatives to the council from the Bronx and Brooklyn was considered and the names of the men to be appointed will be announced in the near future.

It was arranged that the Board of Counsel and the Advisory Staff of Experts should organize during the summer months so as to undertake the legal and technical work which will be referred to them from time to time.

It was deemed expedient to form a publication committee, which will direct whatever publicity work the council shall be required to undertake. It is believed that in this manner matters which should be brought to the attention of property owners and in which they are vitally interested will receive proper consideration. This publicity committee will also act in an advisory capacity relative to all matters which the council shall consider.

The council still feels that it will be advisable to make borings in the proposed site for a new court house, and its neighborhood to determine the nature of the subsoil and its suitability for the foundation of so great a structure.

Co-operation.

The council commends the Real Estate Board for the excellent work that it is doing upon the recodification of the Labor Law. It is also co-operating with the Retail Dry Goods Association the Merchants' Association in this particular respect; with the Wholesale Dry Goods Association upon the reasonable regulation of loading platforms and the establishment of the "Down-town Hotel"; with the Chamber of Commerce and Board of Trade and Transportation and the Maritime Association of New York upon terminal facilities, and port development with the Manufacturers' Association in developing a "free port" and iron and steel manufacturing in New York; with the United Real Estate Owners' Associa in their investigation of condemnation proceedings to acquire 56 acres of land, fronting on the Sound at Astoria, generally known as the East River Park Grove; and the various taxpayers' organizations in the particular work in which they may be interested.

The following matters the council believes it would be wise to consider immediately and seek the advice upon them from its Board of Counsel and Advisory Staff of Experts:—Workmen's Compensation Law, the Secured Debt Law, the Inheritance Tax, the Mayor's Market Commission, in addition to the various matters now upon its calendar.

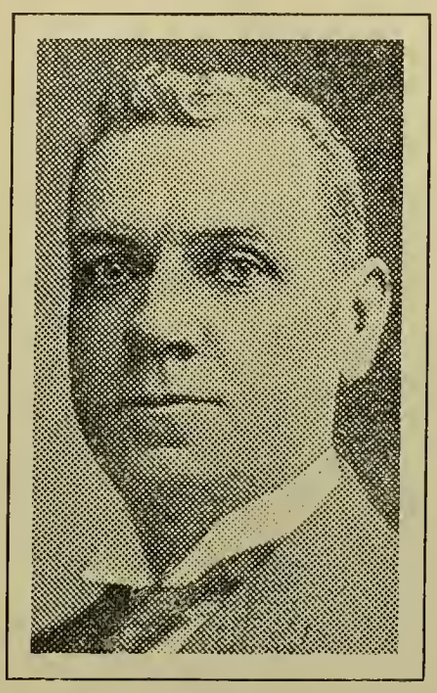
Timely Advice.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That it is important to call to the attention of owners of private houses who wish to sell or rent during the months of July, August and September the fact that their property would sell much better and could be disposed of to better advantage if put in good condition during these months, as is the case with apartment houses.

Resolved, That the monthly meetings of the council be suspended during the months of July and August, and that the Executive Committee be authorized to act for the council until the monthly meeting of the council in September.

Studying City's Problems.



At the instigation of Mayor Mitchel and City Chamberlain Henry Bruere, Profs. Milton E. Loomis and William Lankie of New York University and Leonard Blakey of Dickinson College have begun a study of the municipal government. They are to be assisted by the political science students of New York University in an effort to solve problems that confront the city administration. Prof. Loomis has taken desk room in the Commissioner of Accounts' office.

WILLIAM H. SMITH.

The very unusual manifestations of regret on the part of the general public evoked by the death of William H. Smith, of Brooklyn, are not only very honorable to his memory, but also reflect honor upon the real estate profession as a whole. When a man of any vocation by an eminently useful career earns wide repute and high esteem, that vocation or calling is honored through him. The local papers have sufficiently outlined the career of the deceased, who was widely known as a real estate auctioneer. They have spoken of his boyhood at Hempstead and of his coming to Brooklyn at the age of fifteen and finding a position in the auction rooms of the late Thomas A. Kerrigan in Willoughby street. As this office was the headquarters of a noted leader in local politics, Boss McLaughlin, a great many public men came there, and through this connection Mr. Smith, while yet only a boy, became widely and favorably known.

At the death of Mr. Kerrigan in 1902 Mr. Smith succeeded to his business, which included, by reason of his political connection, a large number of sheriff's foreclosure sales. For the past five years Mr. Smith's business has been at 189 Montague street, and during this time he handled the sale of many important pieces of real estate.

It is often within the opportunity of

THE LATE WILLIAM H. SMITH,
Prominent in the Brooklyn R. E. Board.

a real estate man, and especially of an auctioneer, to be an instrument in the upbuilding of a city. He advises and assists in developing one tract of vacant land after another, so that it becomes improved with dwellings and business buildings, and thus he contributes to the wellbeing and fortunes of the people and to the valuation of the city. It was virtually a public work in which Mr. Smith was engaged, and so well conducted as to win the commendation of everyone. He was an authority on real estate values, practice and law, and his counsel was sought in many municipal and private business matters.

A special meeting of the Brooklyn Board of Brokers has adopted resolution of condolence. The members of the board attended the funeral in a body. At the time the board was being formed, Mr. Smith was one of the prime movers in the plan to organize an association of real estate men in the borough, who would stand for only the highest principles in real estate transactions. He was one of the committee which drafted the constitution of the board, and at its first meeting he was elected one of the board of directors. He served on various important committees, representing the organization at civic conferences, and three years ago he was elected treasurer of the board to succeed Thomas Hovenden, who had held the position from the time the board was organized.

Thomas Hovenden, secretary and treasurer of the Chauncey Real Estate Co., said:

"Mr. Smith was a painstaking, reliable auctioneer; a man that had the confidence of all who came in contact with him; a man who stood in the unique position of having practically every competitor a friend. I doubt that he had an enemy. He was considered to be one of the best auctioneers that ever stood on an auction block in New York City. His manner was ever pleasant, and offensive to none. Thoughts of him must and will linger long in the memory of all who knew him. I looked on him as a personal friend and consider his death a severe loss."

David Porter said: "In the death of William H. Smith, the real estate business has sustained a severe loss, and I have lost a personal friend. His office adjoined mine for many years. I saw him very frequently and when I state that he was a man of sterling character, I state what everybody knows who came in contact with him. His word was as good as his bond; he would not know how to do a mean thing, and his ever-present courtesy and upright dealings with everyone made him hosts of friends. Personally, I feel his loss very much—his place will be hard to fill."

Remsen Johnson, of the firm of Jere Johnson, Jr., Company, said that he had been associated with Mr. Smith in the auction market for the past fifteen years, and during all that time he had found him to possess the keenest sense of honor in dealing with his clients. "His death will mean a great loss to the realty interests of this borough," remarked Mr. Johnson.

William G. Morrisey said William H. Smith was one of the most valuable members of the Brooklyn Board of Real Estate Brokers, and one of the best posted men on real estate values in the city.

The funeral was held Friday morning at 10 o'clock from the Church of St. Gregory. The interment was in Calvary Cemetery. Mr. Smith is survived by a widow, Mary A. Smith, and five daughters.

RATE WAR AVOIDED.

Agreement Between Plate Glass Companies Disposes of Disputed Questions —Adjustment on December 1.

At a meeting of the Plate Glass Underwriters' Association, held at the office of the Fidelity & Casualty Company last Wednesday, the rate situation was finally disposed of and the anticipated war averted. Every company writing plate glass insurance in Greater New York became a member of the organization.

The State Insurance Department agreed to the suspending of the date of filing the rates from May 28 to December 1, 1914, and the association is to collate statistical data covering a period of six years' experience and the rate is to be determined by districts therefrom.

In the meantime the companies will be permitted to renew their business at the expiring rates, therefore there will be no disturbance of the present rates until December 1 next. The commission question also came up for discussion and it was decided that the brokerage rate will be 25 per cent. as heretofore.

A Free Port Campaign.

The Merchants' Association has formally declared in favor of the establishment of a "Free Port" in the Port of New York and has requested its Committee on Foreign Trade to prepare methods and plans for bringing about the realization of the project.

This association will seek the co-operation of other commercial organizations in the "Free Port" campaign as well as that of the appropriate city, state and federal authorities.

Always darkest just before the dawn.

Certain inspection departments, State and municipal, would never be missed.

Samuel Gompers is a very influential member in the State Factory Investigating Commission. His solicitude for factory workers has been evidenced in the preparation of the numerous labor bills which have emanated from the commission.

The career of the Industrial Board is not likely to be a long one, if the electorate of the State continues in its present mind. A department of State government which assumed to inspect and regulate buildings already over-regulated by the local authorities was fated to become very unpopular.

The pig iron situation, considered by many as the best barometer of the status of general business, has experienced a decided change for the better recently Always in the past when the pig iron trade has been markedly feeble there has followed a rapid transition to high activity.

New York State has one-tenth of the population of the United States and one-quarter of the total of all the State debts, though in the year 1893 the New York State debt had fallen to only $123,000. The explanation is that the present debt was incurred for the construction of the Barge Canal, for good roads and for the purchase of the Palisades and Adirondack parks and other State reservations, all good investments from which the people will derive a direct benefit.

The Turning of the Tide.

Unless we are very much mistaken the tide has turned and a slow but sure recovery may now be expected in general business. The root of the trouble has, undoubtedly, been an indisposition on the part of promoters and investors to undertake new enterprises and to put more money into the development of enterprises. But this disposition to hoard money rather than to invest it has not had the usual effect of making loanable capital very cheap in this country, because the international financial situation was unwholesome. The enormous destruction of capital which has taken place in Mexico and as a consequence of the Balkan war had to be made good and for this and other reasons the international money markets have been suffering from a strain. They have been making unusual demands upon the American money market, and have been able to satisfy their demands, because the credit balances of American bankers in Europe have been depleted. Hence, a restoration of confidence on the part of American investors would not at the present time lead to a very considerable increase in the financing of new enterprises.

The business of the whole world has been somewhat over-extended and has not as yet paid the price of its excessive expansion. No sudden or substantial renewal of prosperity is to be expected either as a result of the domestic or as a result of the foreign situation. But the foundations have been laid for a gradual recovery, and such a recovery has already begun. Throughout the whole period of business depression the producers of commodities which enter into immediate consumption, have been able to keep a fairly remunerative business, because the power of consumption of the great mass of the population has not been seriously affected. There was an unusually large amount of unemployment, but there was no wide-spread or drastic liquidation of labor. The danger that any such liquidation would have to take place now seems to be over. Business has begun to expand in certain parts of the country. The movement of freigh in the middle and far West is heavier than it was at the same time last year. The plethoric wheat crop will supply the railroads with an unusually large tonnage, which will be hauled to the seaboard for export, and it will increase the farmer's power of consumption. The new currency system will soon be in working order and will undoubtedly contribute to the easier and more economical financing of American business. In the meantime Congress will have adjourned and the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission respecting an increase of railway rates will have been announced. The decision of the commission in respect to the rate increase will, in all probability, be neither depressing nor encouraging. The railroads are likely to get something, but not as much as they want. The effect of the decision will probably be disappointing, but not sufficiently disappointing to justify much selling of stocks. The railroads will find themselves enough better off partly as a consequence of their own economies to make it easier for them to raise money. In a similar way the action of Congress in respect to trust legislation will not prove to be harmful and the subject will be forgotten soon after adjournment. By the time fall comes a moderate but substantial business revival will pervade the country. Such a revival will not have any immediate reaction on local real estate and building, but if it continues throughout the winter it should prepare the way for a larger amount of activity in real estate next spring.

The Herald Square Section.

The sale of the block front on the west side of Broadway, between 35th and 36th streets, which was consummated during the present week, is one of the largest transactions of the real estate year, and indicates an encouraging faith in Manhattan real estate values on the part of certain investors. The property in question has been on the market for a long time, and in several instances deals have been near completion, but for one reason or another have fallen through at the last moment. It is pretty well understood that a twelve-story store and office building is to be erected on the site, the architect and general contractor having been selected. This block front is one of the few large parcels left available for improvement in this section of Manhattan, and while the new building construction will not be commenced until after May 1, 1915, when the existing leases expire, still all the financial arrangements have been completed, and the material contracts will be awarded in anticipation of the commencement of the actual work. The property is in one of the busiest sections of the city. The blocks immediately to the south are already occupied by large retail establishments, and many important plots in the adjacent side streets are similarly tenanted. The neighborhood of Greeley and Herald squares should remain permanently available to a high-class retail trade. It will have transit facilities second to no other part of the city. At this point there will be express stations on both the Broadway and Seventh avenue subways, and for the present it will remain the terminal point of the New Jersey tunnel service. It is only separated by a couple of blocks from the Long Island Railroad station. The improvement of this property will have a decided tendency to maintain the permanent character established some years ago in this mid-town district.

For these and other reasons it seems natural to expect a tendency on the part of the retail trade to occupy the district between Greeley square and the Pennsylvania station on the south, and Broadway and 42d street on the north. The stores, which can afford a heavier rent, can find locations on Broadway, because this part of Broadway contains several practically unimproved block fronts. The stores, which cannot afford such a heavy rent will find equally available locations for their purposes in Seventh avenue. It looked at one time as if this district would continue to be more available for hotels and places of amusement than for retail stores; and the decision of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera Company not to move will make the blocks immediately south of 42d street desirable for theatres and restaurants, but the rest of it seems marked as the best site for new department stores. It looks more and more as if the stores which still remain in the lower Sixth avenue section will have to move, and it is difficult to see where they can move to except somewhere in the neighborhood north of the Pennsylvania station and Greeley square. Such a movement might, of course, be prevented in case the property owners take advantage of the beginning of the tendency to advance their prices too high, but if property owners are reasonable in their demands retail trade may be expected to occupy the vacant places in this whole section.

What Should Be Done.

The State Factory Commission is engaged in what is officially termed "recodifying" the labor laws of this State, but actually in making a complete revision. At the same time the Mayor and his cabinet are making a study of the problems presented in this city by the overlapping jurisdictions of municipal departments, together with the chaotic conditions, the annoyance to owners and tenants and the discouragement of real estate holding resulting therefrom. The duty of the State is to withdraw from all assumption of responsibility for the personal and direct inspection and supervision of premises and the regulation of construction in this city as something quite beyond its province, and the duty of the city administration is to reduce the great number of inquisitorial inspections to a reasonable minimum, which may be done by amalgamating inspection departments.

It is agreed on every hand that these are the right things to do in this crisis. Why should the city have a building code, a sanitary code, or a fire prevention code if it is to be nullified by a State labor code containing laws controlling all the things already controlled by the city departments? When the responsible people of this city and of this State have had an opportunity to consider the extent to which the Legislature has under the promptings of secret agencies overborne local authorities and imposed upon local interests they are not likely to preserve their respect for State laws and lawmakers. The laws in question were, no doubt, enacted hurriedly, at least without due consideration, by the majority of legislators, but with no intention to deprive men and women of their savings or inheritance invested in real estate. They may have been passed with the idea that they would benefit working people and at the same time make more jobs for political friends, but with no thought of the heavy expense laid upon real estate or of the duplication of official duties. Whatever the motive for the legislation, or however thoughtless it was, the course for the administration at Albany to pursue now is plainly in the reverse direction, and in the future it should be the policy to give very serious consideration to bills proclaiming themselves to be intended for the entire State, but in reality particularly aimed at New York City, which already has more laws and regulations than it can well bear up under. The city of course submits to the supremacy of the State, but it maintains that the principle of home rule should be respected.

Stated Considerations.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

I read with great interest in your issue of June 13th, the excerpt from the "Report of the Committee on Taxation," delivered June 4th, at Auburn, and must take exception to part of it, namely, the resolution adopted unanimously, viz.:

"Resolved, That the true consideration in every deed, mortgage or lease should be made known to the assessor before such deed, mortgage or lease is entitled to be recorded, and that the law should be amended to require such information."

Now why should such a law be necessary if the assessors who are supposed to know their business really do know their business? I know several assessors personally who have sufficient knowledge not to require the advantage of any such proposed law.

Does any real estate expert have to be told what a parcel of property was sold for to arrive at its true value? No, he has to dig it up from his own experience and knowledge of values, and existing conditions. Now if the right men are employed as assessors, it would be unnecessary to think of such a law.

In the event of such a law, it would be the easiest thing in the world for dishonest people to frame prices in deeds to suit themselves, and if the "committee has faith that the intelligence and discretion of the assessors will lead them to ignore the exceptional cases, and give due weight to the evidence furnished by the actual considerations for transfers," why the necessity for a law? If the assessors know the real estate business and have intelligence, they should know the true value of every piece of property they assess.

The trouble is and has been for many years that there is entirely too much theory, and too little knowledge of values displayed by some of the heads of the Tax Department. If we had a few real estate experts as Tax Commissioners, men capable of directing and checking up the assessors there would be no need for such a law, but the facts are, in this city at least. that the Tax Board seems to be an easy berth for lawyers, politicians, and gentlemen with pulls.

We have more than enough laws now that are detrimental to real estate, and it is about time for those interested in real estate to sit up and take notice, and try to prevent such proposed laws going into effect. OSCAR L. FOLEY.

The Advisory Council and the Plague of Inspections.

Inasmuch as the Advisory Council of Real Estate interests has given much attention to the work of the New York State Factory Investigating Commission, it was thought best by the council to be represented at the hearings before the commission at City Hall this week by the Real Estate Board, through Mr. McGuire, its president, so as to avoid duplication of work.

In giving notice of this intention in a letter to Counselor Elkus of the commission on Monday, Hon. Cyrus C. Miller, chairman of the executive committee of the Advisory Council, took occasion to express his personal views on the best method by which property owners could be relieved of the expense and annoyance caused by the multiplicity of inspections and orders by the various departments having to do with real estate. The letter follows:

"I think that the State Labor Bureau should not undertake to exercise direct jurisdiction over New York City proper, but that such jurisdiction should be left to the control of the city departments now in existence. I do not go so far as to claim that the home rule bill should be involved to give New York City full power to regulate buildings as it thought best, and possibly not uniformly with the rest of the State. I think that uniform laws should be adopted and enforced, and that the enforcement within New York City should be left to local authorities.

"In the enforcement of the law there should be a sharp distinction between old and new buildings. Buildings in the course of construction should be made to comply with all rules, but when buildings have been erected according to the then law, they should be permitted to remain without change, unless such changes are absolutely necessary. It should not be sufficient that such changes be desirable. Among the local authorities in New York the inspections and duplication of work are excessive. The functions now performed by these authorities could be exercised better by one, or, at most, two bureaus.

"I favor the use of the Building Department as the nucleus for larger powers. This is because the Building Department is already in existence in all the boroughs and has on file all the plans of buildings, or alterations. If it be thought necessary to retain the functions of the Fire Department, the Tenement House Department, the Fire Prevention Bureau and others, they could have bureaus in the Building Department, and one set of inspectors, or at most, two could make all the inspections necessary for building. They could make reports on blanks prepared for the purpose, giving all the facts necessary for the work now done by the various bureaus. These blanks could be examined and analyzed and any orders based on them could be issued from a single department.

"It is quite likely that some technical inspectors would be required to do technical inspection, but they could be added to the force just as well as not. The present chaotic, troublesome and uneconomic lack of system is having very bad effects on real estate in this city. Yours very truly,

"CYRUS C. MILLER."

Simpler Building Inspection.

(New York Globe.)

The whole situation only furnishes another illustration of the lack of centralization which so often militates against the efficient administration of public business. It not only means unnecessary confusion but a waste of money as well. As Mr. Miller says: "Every responsible architect in New York has one inspector to do all his inspecting, and he gets results." The city certainly then should be able to do likewise. If the inauguration of such a system meant more instead of fewer political jobs to pass around it doubtless would have been put into effect long ago.

The Building Laws and the Architect.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

A consolidation of the present Bureau of Buildings, Tenement House Department, Bureau of Fire Prevention, Department of Labor and portions of the departments which issue permits for vaults, water for building purposes, ornamental projections and putting building materials on the street, would go a long way toward lessening the confusion and expense caused by the duplication which is now going on.

This is not a matter merely of annoyance in having many inspectors call, nor merely the question of uncertainty as to whether a building is free of violations when those which have been placed by one department have been finally removed.

The Labor Law under certain conditions requires the installation of sprinklers, demands the installation of fire alarms and the use of fire drills and prohibits smoking, but in none of these cases does it enforce the orders which it issues but leaves this to the Bureau of Fire Prevention to enforce.

According to the Labor Law, the Commissioner of Labor can call upon the local Superintendent of Buildings to examine the plans and see whether they conform to the Labor Laws. Why then, if these plans can be examined by the Bureau of Buildings at the request of the Labor Commissioner, should not all plans be examined directly by the Superintendent of Buildings and save the expense, annoyance and delay.

We have had instances where plans were examined by the Superintendent of Buildings at the request of the Department of Labor, but it was necessary to go back to the Department of Labor for final approval as the interpretation of the law by the two departments was not similar.

While discussing these different departments, I do not believe it out of place to call attention to the manner in which the Bureau of Fire Prevention handles the work submitted to it for approval. This Department has no written regulations and, as far as we have been able to ascertain, no rules upon which to base any contemplated action. In a theatre under construction in this city the plans submitted to the Bureau of Fire Prevention showed several fire lines.

These were changed at the request of the department and the plans approved accordingly. When the work was installed the inspector objected to the location of the lines and he was upheld by the higher officials and a change in their location was necessitated thereby. You can easily see what a chaotic condition can be created in such a case.

In another case, plans for a 16-story loft building were submitted to the Bureau of Fire Prevention for the approval of fire lines. These plans indicated the use of a pressure reducing valve similar to that which had been in use throughout the city for sometime previous. Objection was made to the use of this valve and a request made that we install an additional tank midway between the street and the top of the building. Appeal was taken to the Board of Standards and their decision was finally handed down after the building was completed and occupied.

The Building Code and the Tenement House Law require the action of the respective commissioners within a reasonable time, but the Fire Prevention Law apparently gives absolutely no protection to those compelled to seek approval by the Bureau of Fire Prevention.

Finally, if these departments were consolidated and a rational enforcement of the law were had under a system similar to the present management of the Bureau of Buildings time would be saved in the approval of plans, investors' carrying charges would be decreased, uncertainty now checking building operations would be removed, and above all, the city would be saved considerable yearly expense.

THE WEEK'S REAL ESTATE NEWS

Brokerage Sales, Auctions, Foreclosure Suits, Building Loans, etc., Together With Brief Personal Items.

Many Notable Sales and Leases.

$6,000,000 MIDTOWN DEAL.

Block Front in Broadway, at Herald Square, Sold to Operators for Improvement.

Contracts of sale were signed this week for the purchase of the block front in the west side of Broadway, between 35th and 36th streets, owned by Charles E. Johnson. The builders, William Everdell, Jr., and Henry Barnum, propose to improve the site with a new twelve-story office and store building, from designs by Clinton & Russell, of 32 Nassau street, architects, the general contract having been awarded to the Thompson-Starrett Company, of 49 Wall street. The operation, it is said, will involve about $6,000,000.

The property is one of the most important in the Herald Square section, having a frontage of 211.6 feet on Broadway, 207 feet in 35th street, 81.6 feet in 36th street, with irregular west lines and containing about 28,500 square feet. No information could be obtained as to the identity of the prospective tenants. William A. White & Sons and F. & G. Pflom were the brokers in the sale.

Several deals have been reported involving this property during the last few years, but none of them were consummated. Marshall Field & Co., of Chicago, were at one time the reported purchasers of the plot and about four years ago another sale was announced, this time to a syndicate, headed by Lee Shubert. It was reported that a hotel would be erected on the site. An option was afterwards given to another syndicate, but difficulty was experienced in financing the large operation and negotiations were dropped.

The property is assessed by the city, for taxation purposes, at $2,135,000. It has been in the family of the sellers for upwards of sixty years. No information as to the purchase price in the present deal could be obtained, though the property was held at a figure considerably in excess of the assessed valuation.

The block front is the largest single parcel in the Herald Square section ready for improvement. For some time past tenants in the old buildings have been able to obtain only yearly leases and these expire on May 1, 1915, at which time the projected building operation will be commenced. At the northwest corner of Broadway and 35th street is the historic Herald Square Theatre. This structure was built about 1883 and was opened as an aquarium by C. W. Coup. Shortly afterwards it was converted into a playhouse and christened the Park Theatre. It was equipped with the furnishings of the old Booth Theatre, located at the southeast corner of Sixth avenue and 23d street. Hyde & Behman were the first lessees and farces were produced. Subsequently the house was utilized for vaudeville purposes. The late Edward H. Harrigan took over the theatre when his playhouse at Broadway and 8th street was demolished by fire and soon after the house was known as the Herald Square Theatre. Lee & Sam Shubert leased the property for a term of years and it was in this theatre that they first got their foothold and became independent producers. Lew Fields was the next lessee and two years ago the property passed to the control of Marcus Loew, who used the structure for the display of motion pictures.

Really Taxpayers.

The balance of the property is occupied by old buildings, the stores being the principle sources of income. In fact, the entire investment has been looked upon as a taxpayer for the last few years. In some of the buildings the fronts were boarded up and the space used for display advertising, it being realized that more income could be obtained by this means rather than by leasing the upper floors for business purposes.

This is the second large operation to be undertaken in the Herald Square section during the last year, the other being the improvement of the Hobart Estate plot at the northeast corner of Broadway and 37th street, through to 38th street, with a modern building designed for light manufacturing. All of the upper portion of the structure was leased for terms of years before the completion of the building, and only a few stores remain untenanted.

About a week ago Messrs. Barnum and Everdell were announced to be the buyers of the northwest corner of Madison avenue and 44th street, which will be improved with a ten-story building, from plans by Clinton & Russell. The property measures 85x120 and, as recently announced in the Record & Guide, will be occupied by Brooks Brothers, men's clothiers, for the last thirty years situated at the southeast corner of Broadway and 22d street.

Other important operations Barnum & Everdell have been connected with are the Longacre Building, occupying Astor leasehold, at the northeast corner of Broadway and 42d street, the Underwriters' Building, on Dutch Reformed Church leasehold, at 123 to 133 William street, in the insurance district, and the Schneider-Anderson Building, a twelve-story structure, at 16 and 18 West 46th street.

THREE RECENT AUCTIONS.

Properties in Brooklyn and at Edgemere Sold to Highest Bidder—Fair Prices Obtained.

Last Saturday the estate of Thomas L. Johnson sold at public auction, through Joseph P. Day, 108 lots in the Fort Hamilton section of Brooklyn, realizing a total of $166,825, or an average of about $1,544 a lot. Several of the parcels were located on the Shore road and the prices obtained for these properties ranged from $2,000 to $4,400 a lot. On Third avenue, from $925 to $2,250 was paid for lots, while $700 was the minimum paid for a lot in 96th street.

Probably 800 people attended the sale, which was held under a tent. Albert Jaret, a builder, was the principle buyer. He purchased seventeen lots, among which were several choice corners. His purchases aggregated $35,925. Among the other buyers were Theodore Schneider, J. F. Frost, J. P. Miller, James T. O'Neill, A. Jaret, E. C. Shortmeyer, C. D. Mawer and Lee Mergentine.

Edgemere Lots Auctioned.

Five cottages and 108 lots, the property of the Lancaster Sea Beach Improvement Company, were sold at auction by Bryan L. Kennelly last Saturday. The property is located at Edgemere, L. I., and a total of $58,830 was realized for the lots and $35,575 for the cottages. Of the total offering 76 lots remained unsold. The average price obtained for the property disposed of was $540 a lot. The highest price for a single lot was $700. Three lots, two of which are located in Neptune avenue and one in Glenwood avenue, went at this price, the former having been bought by Harry Aery and the latter by N. Nigro.

L. Higgins bought a thirteen room house on Surf avenue for $10,000; an eight room house on Beach avenue went to W. D. Maroney, for $6,500; a cottage on Beach avenue to Joseph H. Bemis for $6,400; an Ocean avenue cottage for $6,400 to W. F. Fairbanks, and W. Ingram bought another cottage on this avenue, for $6,275.

Among the lots buyers were the following: Andrew Mulry, B. J. Glacken, Anthony Nigro, T. E. Sheehan, William B. Maroney, Charles Dunn, Abraham Robinson, Annie E. Donnellan, P. H. List, S. C. Bergen, Terence Kiernan, S. Armstrong and William Dinegan.

Sale at Mapleton Park.

Joseph P. Day sold at public auction last Saturday fifteen dwellings in the Mapleton Park section of Brooklyn. Thirteen of the houses were bought by a syndicate, represented by a Dr. Crane, of Waterbury, Conn. The property sold included Nos. 1848, 1858 and 1862 63d street; Nos. 1825 to 1857 63d street and Nos. 1852 and 1854 63d street. The total amount realized was $44,825.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

Important sales and leases closed during the week and the decision of the trustees of Columbia University to remove certain restrictions on some of the leasehold properties were the influencing factors in the real estate market this week. In addition there was a fair amount of small sales at private treaty and an average number of leases closed. The most important sale was that affecting the block front in the west side of Broadway, between 35th and 36th streets, which passed out of an ownership extending over a long period of years, to a firm of operators who will improve the site with a building probably twelve stories high. The deal involves approximately $6,000,000.

On the upper west side a building company acquired a large plot adjoining property already in their possession and the combined sites will be improved with two thirteen-story apartment houses. The entire operation, including the land and buildings will involve almost $3,000,000. In the Park avenue section another firm of operators and builders sold an apartment hotel and the new owners immediately leased the property for a long term of years at an aggregate rental reported to be almost $1,000,000. The parcel was held at $650,000. In Harlem a 200-year lease is under negotiation on property owned by the Higgins estate, the annual rental for the first twenty-one years being about $50,000. About $1,600,000 is involved in the entire transaction.

After missionary work, extending over a period of about two years, Bryan L. Kennelly, it is announced that the trustees of Columbia University have about decided to permit business concerns to occupy the structures located within the bounds of the Columbia leasehold, bounded by the north side of 47th street, the south side of 51st street, west from Fifth avenue to within 100 feet of Sixth avenue. Leaseholders will receive official notice to this effect within a few days. Mr. Kennelly stated this week that fully seventy-five per cent. of the leaseholders favor the entry of business within the restricted zone.

No radical changes will be made until some of the existing leases expire and then new leases for twenty-one years, with renewals, will be entered into, providing for new construction which will not be deemed a nuisance. In the interim leaseholders will be permitted to utilize their properties for light business, such as dressmaking and millinery but permission to install store fronts or fire escapes on the fronts of buildings will be withheld, except by special permission.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 27, as against 20 last week and 24 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 12, as compared with 7 last week and 13 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 15, as compared with 13 last week and 11 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 145, as against 187 last week, 10 having stated considerations totaling $383,381. Mortgages recorded this week number 80, involving $2,379,418, as against 91 last week, aggregating $3,144,022.

From the Bronx 14 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 13 last week and 11 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $1,602,050, compared with $569,628 last week, making a total since January 1 of $22,032,575. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $1,311,647, and the total from January 1, 1913, to June 21, 1913, was $33,376,098.

Large Downtown Exchange.

Charles F. Noyes Company closed an interesting exchange, which involved about $350,000. The St. John's Park Realty Company, James H. Cruikshank and William D. Kilpatrick, sold to the Colonial Real Estate Association, George P. Slade, president, and Alfred R. Kirkus, secretary, the new 8-story fireproof loft building at 155 to 159 Perry street, on a plot 66 x 100. In part payment the sellers took 24 and 26 White street and in addition 25 Walker street, two 6-story structures, connected by bridges and containing about 6,630 square feet of ground area. The buildings are leased to J. W. McCann & Company and Schwab & Company, subject to a net rental of $10,600 a year, less taxes and insurance. These buildings figured in the transaction at $140,000. They were rebuilt about 4 months ago from designs by Richard Berger. The Perry street building is leased to the J. R. Watkins Medical Company for 20 years, at an aggregate rental of about $200,000. Dixon & Holmes, attorneys, represented the Colonial Company and Bowers & Sands the St. John's Park Realty Company.

$1,600,000 Sales and Lease.

Bing & Bing sold to the Swetland Realty Company, through the A. H. Ivins Company, the twelve-story apartment hotel, on plot 74.6x100.5, at 46 to 50 East 58th street. The building was erected by the sellers on property acquired by them last March. Robert T. Lyons designed the structure and estimated the cost at $400,000. The purchasing company has leased the property, through the same brokerage firm, to the newly formed No. 50 East Fifty-eighth Street Company, for 21 years, at a reported net annual rental of $50,000. The entire transaction is said to involve about $1,600,000.

$3,000,000 Apartment Operations.

The Paterno Construction Company, Dr. Charles V. Paterno, president, purchased from Mayer & Mayer, Inc., through Slawson & Hobbs, the northeast corner of West End avenue and 84th street, a plot 102.2x133. The purchasing company acquired about ten days ago the adjoining plot from the Waterman Realty Company, David W. Too much stress cannot be laid upon the subject of installing heating systems, of any kind or make, properly in the situation upon which they are to perform their duties.

No system ever brought forth, or that ever will be invented, will in itself make up any lack of capacity in boiler, piping or radiating surfaces, or poor workmanship in erection.

We Guarantee Our Work.

We design complete heating plants, furnish working plans and specifications and co-operate with owners, contractors, and architects solely to insure the perfect operation of our product.

New York City's Best Buildings Are Burning Bituminous Coal

They are saving thousands of dollars every year from their coal bills by burning soft coal smokelessly in Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boilers.

Government reports of the heat values of various grades of Anthracite and Bituminous coals prove that dollar for dollar Bituminous Coal is a better buy than Anthracite. For instance; the cheapest Anthracite that can be burned in a regular straight draft boiler is a pea size costing about $4.75 per ton and containing 12,000 heat units per pound or a No. 1 Buckwheat costing about $3.50 and containing 11,500 heat units per pound. While the run of mine Bituminous costs only $3.75 per ton and contains more than 14,000 heat units per pound.

The sale, at which about 1,000 people attended, was held on Tuesday at 14 Vesey street, and was conducted by Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies. A total of $220,750 was obtained, or an average of about $1,120 a lot. The highest price paid for a single lot was $8,150, being the northwest corner of Broadway and 262nd street. Madeleine Sullivan was the buyer, and she also bought the adjoining lot for $4,500. George E. Brown bought a little "watch-charm" lot for $200, the smallest price of the sale, and he also took the two adjoining lots for $500 each. Details of the sales, including names of buyers, prices and locations of lots, will be found in another column of this issue.

On Thursday four parcels belonging to the Hennessy estate were offered at auction by Mr. Day, and in each instance less than the assessed valuation was obtained. The properties included the Bradley Building, at 220 Fourth avenue, a nine-story structure, 42 x 78.7, at the southwest corner of 18th street, which was bought by Dr. Ramson J. Parker for $170,000. The city assessed the parcel at $285,000. Another property in Fourth avenue was the five-story loft building at 213, located 80 feet north of 17th street 25.6 x 115, together with an undivided quarter interest to a ten-foot vacant strip abutting in 17th street. Max Marx bought the property for $1,03,000. It is assessed at $125,000 and is under lease to one tenant for six years at a rental ranging from $5,500 to $8,000 a year, with a renewal privilege for ten years at the last named rental. Max Marx also bought 1849 Broadway, a two-story building, 28.10 x 139.10, for $100,000. It is assessed at $130,000. The property is leased for two years at a net rental of $7,500; also with a renewal privilege for eleven years at $9,500 a year. Charles Gulden purchased the five four-story dwellings at the southeast corner of Madison avenue and 78th street, 82.2 x 100 x irregular, for $191,000. The property is assessed at $252,000.

"Triumphantly Complete"

That's the way a recent English visitor to New York describes the Woolworth Building in the LONDON DAILY MAIL

And he's right—absolutely right! Everything that goes to make a modern business building complete is provided in this great structure. It is

Piped for Gas Throughout

Every one of its half hundred or so floors has ample gas facilities for any purpose—heating, lighting, cooking or for power.

It's a mistake not to install gas pipes when you build. Putting them in after the building is up is costly and wasteful!

Why not let us send an engineer to talk the matter over with you? Drop a line to our Gas Appliance Dept., General Office, No. 130 E. Fifteenth St., or phone STUYVESANT 4901.

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

MANUFACTURING LOFTS AS AN INVESTMENT

By CHARLES F. NOYES, President Charles F. Noyes Co.

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager For The American Real Estate Co.

A FIELD of building activity that has, until recently, been neglected is the construction of modern loft buildings. During the last few years, however, modern loft buildings suitable for heavy manufacturing, printers, lithographers, publishers and other manufacturing lines, have been constructed in various parts of the city, and in each section the buildings have been erected to meet the demands of a particular line of business for which the neighborhood was suited. These structures have been uniformly successful, and are proving to be most satisfactory investments for the owners.

Ten years ago there were probably not over a half dozen modern manufacturing buildings leasing large floor space to tenants. Even the few buildings that were then constructed offered the tenants floors with a carrying capacity of only 125 to 150 pounds to the square foot; elevators 5 x 6; and very few had modern power plants enabling the tenant to get day and night power service.

For a number of reasons which have subsequently been overcome, builders did not find it easy to finance these large operations and but comparatively few investors cared to construct such buildings. This has led a number of prominent firms to erect their own buildings with a view to occupying space and subleasing that portion not required. Each building was quickly rented at satisfactory figures, and as the demand was demonstrated other similar structures were erected.

New Field Opened.

One of the first buildings to be erected by a tenant owner was the ten-story Schieren Building, covering a plot of 10,000 square feet at 30-38 Ferry street. The success of this building encouraged Charles A. Schieren to construct the ten-story Chapel Court Building adjoining in Cliff street, and subsequently he increased his real estate holdings by purchasing the J. E. Linde Paper Co. Building in Beekman street. This operation was followed by the construction of the eleven-story McGraw Building, 231-249 West 39th street; the Iron Age Building, occupying the block front on 11th avenue from 36th to 37th streets, and the Monahan Express Building, 216-222 West 18th street.

After the start was made, the construction of this type was commenced throughout the city, and some of the newer buildings are as follows: Scribner Building, 313-319 West 43rd street; the Pictorial Review Building, 222-228 West 39th street; the Art Color Building, 211-219 West 38th street; the Graphic Arts Building, in 25th street; the enlarged Rhinelander Building, at William, Duane and Rose streets, and the Marmac Building in West 37th street. More recently: the H. S. & V. Building, at 26th street and Ninth avenue, and the McKeon Building, 424-438 West 33rd street, were erected. All of the buildings referred to will average not less than 100 x 100 feet in size and twelve stories in height, and each building represents an average investment of from $500,000 to $700,000.

Structures of this type are now going up very rapidly, and among the most recent are the twelve-story Bradstreet Building, at the northwest corner of Lafayette and Howard streets, just completed, and probably the best type of modern loft building in lower New York; the twelve-story Inverness Building, at the southeast corner of

CHARLES F. NOYES.

Lafayette and Howard streets, and the Aberdeen Building at 150-156 Lafayette street.

Notable Operations.

The crowning triumph, however, in the construction of this type of building is the Hill Building, at the northwest corner of 36th street and Tenth avenue, a twelve-story building covering a plot of 17,500 square feet from plans of Goldwin Starrett, and the Hallenbeck-Hungerford Building, a sixteen-story structure now in course of construction in Lafayette street, from Franklin to White streets.

The Hill Building is costing about $1,200,000 to construct, and the Hallenbeck-Hungerford Building about $2,000,000. These structures represent the very last word in modern construction. The latter named structure is the only sixteen-story building of its type in New York and is being erected by the Hungerford Brass & Copper Co. and Harry C. Hallenbeck from plans of William E. Austin, and the builder is the George A. Fuller Company. The carrying capacity is 300 pounds to the square foot, the elevators are extra large and powerful; and in addition there are lowerators, paper chutes, etc.

Most buildings of this type have been successful and profitable. The reason that a very few buildings have not been profitable—and the percentage is less in this type of building than in any other class—is because the owners did not in the beginning take into their confidence practical real estate men and obtain architects thoroughly familiar with this particular type of building. A real estate office specializing in the renting of buildings of this character, and there are comparatively few offices in New York that have—understands better than anyone else the requirements of the tenants. In planning the steel work wide spans are essential; high ceilings are necessary; heavy carrying capacity essential; and the elevator arrangement, power conditions and lighting conditions, must be carefully studied. No owner can possibly have as much information as a broker who has actively worked for hundreds of manufacturing tenants, and no architect is as useful as the one who has erected several similar buildings. Let the experienced architect and real estate man work together, and the best results are accomplished at the lowest price.

An Essential Feature.

It is also essential that the owner secures the services of a mechanical engineer to solve certain mechanical problems that always develop in buildings of this character. Such matters as vibration, heating, power plants or power connections must be carefully studied out, and there are one or two experts who specialize entirely in this work. One of the most prominent engineers is Walter S. Timmis, who for twenty years has specialized in the handling of printers' and publishers' requirements and who is employed by the tenant as well as by the owner.

From the investment view point, the reason these heavy manufacturing buildings are proving to be such desirable investment properties is because there is less changing of tenants in this type than in any other, and experience has shown that the financial responsibility of the tenants in these buildings is far above the average.

Manufacturing tenants must invest more heavily in machinery and fixtures than those in other lines of business, and it is more difficult for them to move. For this reason, when a concern of this type moves into one of these modern buildings, it figures that the move is for life, and it is not looking around for new quarters every three, five or ten years. Then again, tenants in buildings of this type do not call upon the landlord for repairs or improvements, and the only expense that the landlord has to meet are taxes, insurance on the building (and the insurance rate is very low), the operation of the elevators, and the power used for operating the elevators and steam heat. Usually the power costs the owner practically nothing, as there is enough profit in selling power to tenants to make up the comparatively small cost of the power he requires for elevator service.

These buildings, being the most rigid and of the heaviest type of fireproof construction, if properly constructed, are built for all time. If such buildings are well located, preferably on corner plots, the income is certain, the depreciation small, and for a permanent investment yielding from 7 per cent. to 9 per cent. on a substantial equity there is probably no better type of investment property on Manhattan Island.

An Improved Hydromaze.

Constant inhalation of sewer gases carried into buildings through drainage pipes is responsible for many of the infectious and contagious diseases that affect communities. Science for years has tried to find a means of eliminating this danger and it seems that such a device has at last been perfected. It is known as Hyde's improved hydromaze and is an appliance by which an unbreakable seal is formed in every water trap to which it may be attached. It is especially adaptable to sewer inlets to buildings. Practically all traps are imperfect. The company is making a demonstration of this device at 27 Cedar Street. Evaporation cannot destroy the seal in these traps.

NATURE AND COST OF WINDOW GLASS

Defects and Merits to Look For—Difference Between American and Foreign Made Glass—Points About Quality and Strength.

NOTHING adds more to the attractive appearance of a building than a fine window glass kept clean and bright. It is the purpose of this article to inform building managers concerning the nature and costs of window glass.

Hand-blown glass is better than the machine-drawn; it is tougher and better able to withstand the expansion and contraction of heat and cold. Tank-made glass is better than that melted in pots, as it is made with a salt-cake base, and is not liable to fade in course of time as pot-melted glass is. Dipped glass is glass that has been dipped in hot water and acid hot from the lehr, thus removing all sulphur stains. Natural glass makes the best glass, as it does not carry an excess of carbon, as coal does. There is no danger of the glass being burnt or having small particles of coal adhering to it.

Thicknesses and Grades.

American window glass comes in two thicknesses and in several grades of quality designated by the letters A B C, etc. American "single" averages one-tenth inch and weighs about twenty ounces to the square foot; it is safe to use against ordinary wind pressure in sizes up to 28 by 34 inches. Double strength glass is about one-seventh inch thick and weighs about twenty-six ounces. This quality or strength is procurable in sizes whose sum makes 120 inches; that is to say, 60 by 60 inches, 40 by 80 inches, or anything within these limits. It is not safe to use double-thick glass above 40 by 44 inches in situations where there is at times great wind pressure nor in movable sash. This should be remembered when you wish to save on the cost of plate glass and use double-thick window glass, using such only in protected situations and where the glass is stationary.

The dealer usually carries in stock about 75 per cent. B quality and 25 per cent. A quality. Also about the same proportions in single and double strength glass. The ordinary building specifications fall within these limits.

The difference in cost between A and B quality throughout the lists will average about 10 per cent. for ordinary sizes in single thicknesses, with more in the larger sizes and for double thickness. It is allowable for B quality to contain some defects, as "cords" or "strings," small blisters resulting either from melting or poor workmanship, small burnt patches caused by gas flame of the flattening oven adhering to the sheet. But such defects should not be too evident, nor should the glass pass if it contains stone, surface cords, furnace scratches, pipe blisters, or is improperly flattened; nor if, as occasionally happens, small broken bits of glass become attached to the surface. Such defects are not easy of removal, they look bad and may injure the window cleaner.

For use in warehouses and cheap buildings, etc., B quality is usually specified, remembering that the smaller the size the less the price; but the cost of the sash is more for small panes, of course.

The ordinary A glass is the best quality above B grade, as very little selecting is done above A grade. If AA is ordered the dealer will usually open a few boxes of A and pick out the best panes he can find, and these will be your AA purchase. There should be no cords allowed in the A quality unless it be the occasional small "blib" caused by the melting, or the very fine dust blisters, nor any panes that are wavy enough to distort the vision.

For the best window glass of American make select that which is tank-made, hand-blown, natural gas and dipped brand, whether single or double strength glass.

Next to American glass in quality comes the Belgian, more commonly called French, which usually runs about 25 per cent. better than corresponding American grades. But it is lighter in weight, single being usually one-tenth inch thick and weighing seventeen ounces to the square foot, the double about one-eighth inch thick and weighing about twenty-one ounces. In the small sizes, up to 10 by 15 inches, the Belgian or so-called French glass usually sells at about the same price as the corresponding American glass, and the difference in price is not very great up to 16 by 24 inches. Above this size freight charges, breakage and the tariff make a difference of four or five cents a square foot.

Plate Glass.

In plate glass the American is most commonly specified. What is known as "silvering" quality is a better grade, while the very best is the French "silvering," this being the acme of perfection in plate glass making. It is as near perfection as can commercially be made. It is almost silver-white in color, while the American plate is rather greenish, as one may see by looking at the glass edgewise. French plate may be had in any size or thickness for special purposes, the usual thickness being about one-quarter inch, the weight three and a half pounds per square foot. The only defects to be found in any plate glass are bubbles and now and then a gray spot, showing imperfect polishing. If these defects exist in any considerable quantity then the glass should be rejected by the buyer.

Common window glass is made from silica, soda and lime. Crown glass is a form of window glass of better quality, it being produced by a different manipulation of the blow pipe. It has greater luster and beauty, but as only very small panes can be cut from it, it is superseded by the more common form of glass. Plate glass is made from sand, soda, lime, arsenic and charcoal. It is rolled on a table, it is ground and polished, and exceeding care taken with it to make it a perfectly flawless sheet of glass, and the process is laborious and expensive. —A. A. Kelly in the Painters' Magazine.

On the Depreciation of Buildings.

Industrial buildings are planned for certain specific purposes. The organization of the plant is first worked out, the departments arranged most economically, then the walls and roof put over the whole.

Under proper conditions, buildings will last for hundreds of years, but with factory buildings the conditions are such that it is not expected to have a building last much beyond a certain limited time, owing to the change in methods. It is noticeable, however, that the buildings for manufacturing purposes of recent years are more substantially built than they were 50 years ago.

In looking over the records of existing textile industries, buildings in use which are over 50 years old are not very numerous; there is a larger number of those 40 years old, and a rapidly increasing number in comparison as the age diminishes. The old buildings are wholly unsuited for modern practice. In fact, many buildings built 25 years ago are not suitable for a proper arrangement of modern machinery.

Henry K. Powell of Boston gave it as his opinion in an address before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers that with better built machinery and stronger and better made buildings it is possible that the depreciation will not be so rapid as it has been in the past. To a very large extent depreciation is due more to rapid advance in the mechanical arts than to age and wear. The proper maintenance of a plant can retard the depreciation due to age and wear very materially. Depreciation due to advance in the arts is one of the essential factors to be considered in the use of reinforced concrete buildings, as this type of building is not so readily adapted to be modified or changed over to meet new conditions as is the regular mill construction type. It may be, however, that radical changes are not so likely to come in the future as they have been in the past, but this seems a short-sighted view.

In depreciating factory buildings, a rate of about 2 per cent. a year does not seem excessive, compared with the useful life of the older type of building, while about 1 per cent a year may be large enough to allow for the depreciation of modern buildings.

Keeping in Touch.

One of the secrets of a successful business in handling real estate loans is the keeping in touch with the investing public. The loan broker who is satisfied to maintain an established clientele of customers and does not seek to enlarge his field, finds that eventually he must face a proposition of waking up and going after new business, says a writer in Bonds and Mortgages. While it is true that investors in real estate loans are usually those who wish to continue such form of investment for many years and have no desire to negotiate their securities, yet naturally changes occur, and when a mortgage is paid off it is not always that the money is replaced through the same agent.

So the loan broker is under the necessity not only of keeping his regular customers heartily in touch with his business and its offerings, but he must endeavor to reach those who have not had experience in this sort of security. Some must be reached through personal solicitation, but usually it is printer's ink which counts, and loan brokers who have been most successful through a period of years have been those who have never ceased to present their securities through financial journals and other means of attracting the attention of investors.

New generations come, and each must have education if it is to take the place of that which has passed away. Estates are handed down from one generation to another, and new ideas are developed regarding advantages in investing, so that this education must be continuous. Keeping in touch with the investment field is the only policy that will make a broker permanently successful.

The Edison Company's Cinder Catcher.

Not a little interest has been manifested by the public in the new cinder-catching device now being installed on the boilers of the Edison Company's Waterside generating stations. By means of this invention, it is promised that the "smoke nuisance" can be abolished. With the cinders removed, the chimneys discharge into the air entirely inoffensive vapors.

With the installation of this invention, gases leaving the fire-bed are carried through a flue and driven against a movable damper which deflects them toward the bottom of a smoke chamber from which they are carried by the tall stacks. The bottom of the smoke chamber is filled with water, which flows into it in an unbroken sheet down the face of the damper. The gases pass through the narrow opening which leads to the smoke chamber at a velocity of fifty feet per second. This precipitates the cinders and dust into the water, while in addition to this some of the cinders and dust are caught on the damper as they strike the water flowing over it.

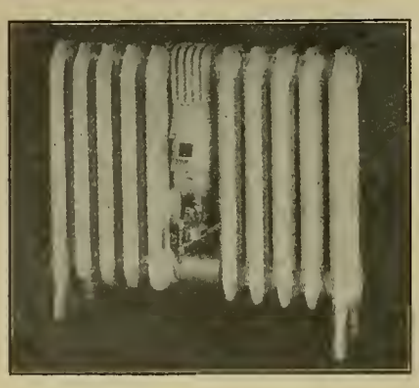
Heating Buildings by Gas.

INNOVATIONS in heating systems have just been made public. The improvements involve the use of gas as a heating fuel in lieu of electricity, steam or hot air. The system includes entire operation by gas, except the use of an electric motor for drawing off the burned gases from radiators.



The system as installed in an office building is shown in the accompanying cut, published through the courtesy of Gas Age and the following key explains the heating system as installed in the case cited:

M represents the motor and fan, for drawing off the burnt gases from the radiators. P—exhaust port or flue, where the burnt gases are exhausted out of the room or building. E—Exhaust pipe, through which the burnt gases are drawn from the radiators. G—Gas pipe. T—Thermostat, for controlling the temperature of the room. R—Rector radiators, through the coils of which are drawn the burnt gases from the burnt box in the center. D—Drip pipe, for draining off the water condensed from the burnt gases, condensed because the burned gases are reduced by the radiation to room temperature before being exhausted out of the radiator, thus showing the high radiating efficiency of the system.

The heart of the Rector System of Heating is the principle by which gas is burned in a partial vacuum. The advantage of this is said to be threefold: It insures better combustion of gas; removes the waste products of combustion, and introduces fresh air into the room. Thus at one stroke gas is brought to a high efficiency and at the same time two of the most vital objections to gas for heating purposes are removed.

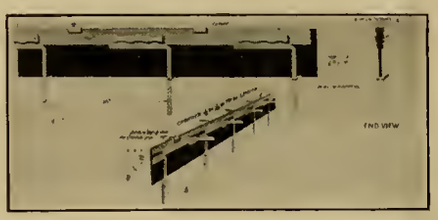
The Rector System of heating by gas, just like any other system of heating on a large scale, is a unit. It consists of as many radiators as may be needed, distributed in as many rooms as desired, all connected together by an exhaust pipe in much the same way as a single gravity steam system is connected. But here the resemblance ends; for in the Rector system, unlike any other, each radiator is an independent and self-sustaining unit.

Each radiator is equipped with a Rector burner in an air-tight combustion chamber which, as may be seen in cut, is located between the sections of the radiator. Gas is burned in each radiator according to the individual needs of each room; and the vacuum to operate all of the radiators is secured by means of a small fan which is located in some out of the way place, usually in the cellar.

Gas enters the radiator, by means of the supply pipe in the rear. After passing through the inlet valve, which is automatically controlled and which is designed to take care of any variation in pressure, the gas goes to the burner located in the combustion chamber. Here the gas burns in a vacuum; and it is here that the three functions, briefly mentioned, are performed. By the application of the vacuum, it is stated, the molecules of the gas are torn apart so as to give a complete mixture with the air which is sucked in through the Bunsen. This insures complete combustion, resulting in the hottest flame known to science—the violet flame.



With the burning of the gas comes the usual breakdown into carbon dioxide, carbonic acid, minute traces of sulphur dioxide, sulphuretted hydrogen and water. In fact for every 1,000 cubic feet of gas consumed there is invariably deposited a considerable amount of water. It has always been one of the knotty problems of gas heating to get rid of these products of combustion without losing a good proportion of the heat of combustion up the chimney. In fact the conservatism of the heat of combustion is one of the vexing problems of all systems of heating; and in the case of coal particularly, it is a notorious fact that considerably over 60 per cent. of the heat of combustion is lost up the chimney. An ideal system would be one in which the refuse gases were discharged up the flue at atmospheric temperature.

In the Rector system no combustion products are discharged into the air of the room or house. Instead, the hot refuse gases are sucked through the loops of the radiator, by means of the vacuum, in much the same way that steam or hot water travels through a radiator, imparting their heat to the radiator, and are then conducted by the exhaust pipe, which is usually installed out of sight, to the outside atmosphere. And it is a remarkable fact, that the temperature of the exhaust gases discharged at the flue approximates closely that of the atmosphere. In other words practically 100 per cent. of the heating value of the gas is radiated into the room through the medium of the radiating coils or sections before the refuse gases are exhausted out of the room.

A New Joint Construction Plate.

A NEW type of joint construction plate that is said to protect concrete edges from spalling has been invented by Albert Moyer, of 200 Fifth avenue, an associate member of the American Society of Civil Engineers. The joint plate is made of open hearth soft steel which wears down at the same ratio as the concrete, forming a perfect protection for concrete edges.

No installation device or machine is required. The legs are bent down and the side tongues bent outward by means of a piece of short pipe, this operation being done on the job. They are then wired together and clamped with tar paper in between. The legs are driven in the sub-base of the wood so that the top of the plate will be at a level with the top of the finished concrete, made certain by using a duplicate of the template which will be used in crowning the concrete. The template is merely set in the side frames and the plate hammered down until the bottom of the template rests accurately on the top of the plate.

Smoke Prevention by Steam Jets.

OBSERVATIONS recorded by the late Lord Armstrong, proved that steam issuing from an orifice in a boiler is electro positively charged. Use of this principle for the dispersion of smoke has been the subject of experiments by G. B. Burnside, of the University of Glasgow, Scotland. In the course of this work aqueous vapor was projected from nozzles placed in the center of the chimney. The steam, in its passage through the nozzles, was electrified by friction and also partially condensed. In this way a cloud of aqueous vapor, electrically charged, was obtained in the chimney. The particles of aqueous vapor acted as a center of attraction, which fell down the chimney by gravity. In an experiment with a large school chimney, 220 pounds of soot were collected in one month.

Quick Pipe Repairing.

WHEN a pipe develops a leak in a building prompt action is required. A few minutes lost may result in a great deal of property damage. It is called the rapid tap plug and is a device for repairing small holes in cast or wrought iron pipes, tanks and fittings. The device consists of a nut at the head of a sharp pointed spindle made of tempered steel, which has machined threads with a milled slot giving it a cutting edge. If a leak occurs an emergency repair may be affected by driving the point into the hole and then with a wrench screwing the nut down tight upon the pipe, thus effectually closing the hole. They are manufactured by the Wolverine Brass Works, of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

TWO NEW WEST SIDE LOFT PROJECTS

Structure Being Erected in 37th Street Involving About $300,000—Similar Improvement in 38th Street to Cost $200,000.

IN West 37th and 38th streets, the heart of the city's new midtown loft building center, two new structures have recently been started. The blocks between 30th to 40th streets, Madison and Seventh avenues, are being improved with a number of high-class loft buildings and the buildings are being tenanted by concerns doing a light manufacturing business, as well as those only in need of wareroom and showroom space. They are attracting tenants who desire to be near the new shopping district, although not necessarily in it.

The Alan Realty Company, A. E. Lefcourt president, is erecting a modern twelve-story loft building with stores in West 37th street, from plans by George and Edward Blum, architects, 505 Fifth avenue; Theodore G. Bloomberg, electrical engineer. The building is being erected at 134 to 142, covering a plot 93x100 feet. Granite, Indiana limestone and brick are the materials being used, and the building will be fireproof in every sense of the word. The building will have two separate stair wells, and in addition a smokeproof fire tower will be provided. All window frames and sash, door and trim will be kalamein or of hollow steel construction. A sprinkler equipment and other fire-fighting and preventative devices will be installed for safeguarding the lives of tenants and employees and protection of property from fire hazard.

Geo. and Edward Blum, Architects.
134-142 WEST 37TH STREET.

Four electric elevators will be installed, two passenger cars, with a lifting capacity of 2,500 pounds each, and two combination freight and passenger cars, each with a lifting capacity of 4,000 pounds. Entrance hall and corridors will be wainscoted in rich marbles and corridor floors will be of marble.

The owners have charge of building operations and are letting the work in separate contracts. J. E. Dutton, of 42 East 23d street, is supplying the granite, and Edward F. Roach, 60 West 90th street, is doing the mason work. The Hinkle Iron Company, 543 West 26th street, has the contract to supply and erect the structural steel and ornamental iron. Elevators, including the electric sidewalk lift, has been awarded to the Otis Elevator Company, of 26th street and 11th avenue, and the installation of all electric work has been awarded to Van Wagoner-Linn Construction Company, 1133 Broadway. The building will cost more than $300,000.

Another Operation.

At 57 to 61 West 38th street, the Antler Realty Company, Inc., Joseph D. Goldberg, president, is building the foundation for a twelve-story loft building which will also include stores on the first floor. This project is being erected from plans and specifications prepared by Rouse and Goldstone, architects, of 40 West 42d street. The building will cover a plot 55 x 88 feet and will be somewhat similar in layout and general equipment to the one under construction in 37th street, although it will cover a smaller plot. It will cost about $200,000 to erect.

Brick, limestone and terra cotta are the materials being employed in the construction and the building will have all the modern appliances for the protection of life and property from fire as required by the provisions of the present law. Elevator equipment will consist of three cars, two passenger and one freight, and one electric sidewalk lift.

The building is being erected by the owners under the supervision of the architects, who are awarding separate contracts for the various branches of the work. The contract for the structural steel has been awarded to the Passaic Steel Company, of 30 Church street. This is practically the only contract that has been let at the present time, the owners taking estimates on other sub-contracts.

TRY TO BETTER CONDITIONS.

Campaign Started to Educate Dwellers in Tenements to Improve Health.

Tenement House Commissioner John J. Murphy last Monday opened the city's new campaign for social work, carrying out Mayor Mitchel's policy with regard to the socializing of city departments. This was in the issuance of an educational pamphlet containing the things that people who live in tenement houses need to know for their own protection, safety and health. New York is the first city to take up work of this kind.

Ultimately a copy of this pamphlet will be placed in the hands of every tenement house dweller in the Greater Rouse & Goldstone, Architects.

City. At the first, however, its distribution is to be limited to one or two districts of the city where the need in the summer months is greatest; that is, the districts where there is a congested population. Several districts on the lower East Side have been chosen, another on the upper East Side, and several on the west side.

A woman inspector has been detailed by the Commissioner to undertake this work. Block by block, house by house, from door to door she will go, visiting each family and leaving a pamphlet with the mother of the family, taking time enough to sit down with her and explain why the pamphlet has been issued and how it will help her and her family.

The first edition has been printed only in English, but later on it is expected that editions will be printed in Yiddish, Italian and German.

The pamphlet has been prepared jointly by the Tenement House Committee of the Charity Organization Society and by the officials of the Tenement House Department and is issued in their joint names.

Before the year is out it is expected that more than one million of these pamphlets will be distributed by the Tenement House inspectors. An interesting thing about this movement is that it is one which will be welcomed by the landlord and the tenant alike.

While it is intended primarily to benefit the tenant, it at the same time benefits the landlord, and every progressive and intelligent landlord will welcome this work on the part of the Tenement House Department, for it means that tenants will learn not only their rights but their duties, and it should help the landlord greatly in keeping his house clean and in repair.

Civic Associations, Visiting Nurses, Settlement Houses, Neighborhood Associations, Little Mothers' Leagues and other public-spirited organizations, are all to be asked to combine in this movement.

The next step in bettering housing conditions is plain. The dirty neighbor, the irresponsible tenant, the careless match thrower, the fire-escape obstructor, the indifferent janitor, we have always with us. No department can make inspections frequently enough to restrain them. Tenants must be taught their responsibility.

Irvin Hotel for Women.

Jackson, Rosencrans & Waterbury, architects, 1328 Broadway, have been retained by the building committee of the "Irvin Hotel for Women," Wm. M. Baldwin, 17 Battery place, chairman, to prepare plans and specifications for the new hotel to be erected at 308 to 312 West 30th street. The building will be twelve stories in height, built of brick, limestone and terra-cotta and will cover a plot 66 by 100 feet. A large assembly hall will be included in the project and the building will have many features of a modern Y. W. C. A. structure. The hotel will be designed for women guests exclusively, as was announced recently in the Record and Guide. The building will cost about $250,000 to erect, exclusive of furnishings.

New Automobile Plant.

Fountain & Choate, 110 East 23d street, have received the general contract for the erection of a factory building for the manufacture of automobiles. The building will be located in South Fulton street south of 8th street, Mt. Vernon, and will be owned by the Ward Motor Vehicle Co., Concord avenue and 143d street, New York City. The plans and specifications were prepared by C. B. Comstock, architect, 110 West 40th street. The building will be one story in height and cover a plot 152 by 300 feet. Brick and reinforced concrete are the materials to be used in construction, and the cost will be in the neighborhood of $200,000.

Another Brooklyn Factory.

Frederick Gretsch Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of musical instruments, 110 South 4th street, Brooklyn, has retained William Higginson, architect, 21 Park Row, to prepare plans for a new factory building. The structure will be located at the northwest corner of South 5th and Berry streets and will cover a plot 75 by 120 feet. It will be built of reinforced concrete, seven stories in height and is estimated to cost nearly $200,000.

A Delayed Improvement.

Through the efforts of Commissioner Robert C. Wood of the Public Service Commission, an arrangement has been made with the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. to make certain changes in the station at 149th street and Third avenue, to relieve the congestion at that point. The commission has requested the company to widen the easterly platform and erect a stairway from this platform; also to erect an additional stairway from the present mezzanine floor. The company has notified the commission that it will proceed immediately to make the desired changes.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

ALL INTERESTS LAYING GREAT EXPECTATIONS ON EARLY DECISION IN FREIGHT RATE INVESTIGATION BY I. C. C.

Prices Generally Considered to be at Lowest Possible Level—Trade Steadying

PROMISE of an early and favorable decision in the railroad freight rate investigation did much to inspire continued confidence in the building material market this week. In consequence there was more rigidity shown in price quotations in stable commodities for future delivery. The volume of current business being taken is still below expectations, but trade is unquestionably steadying, despite the Claflin crash.

Portland cement is perhaps the most uncertain of materials, so far as fixed level of quotations is concerned, although even in this department the trend is toward more uniform prices. Pig iron continues to show some activity, but the general character of the consuming market is best illustrated by the policy of procrastination being followed in the award of the 60,000-odd tons of segments that will go into the East river tunnel.

Equipment companies are the most active iron buyers at present. These interests profess to have fairly definite data, indicating a decided improvement in the demand for building equipment in the fall and winter and they are taking advantage of the present low prices to stock for future requirements.

Low mill stocks of lumber, coupled with an improved demand for building grades in the suburbs of the city, have helped to make prices a little closer to list. Steel as a building commodity continues to be spotty on demand, with prices depressed by competition. Agents say, however, that they have felt the effect of more active plan filings in the recent past and work is going on the boards for figuring more freely.

Common brick at $5.60 to $5.87½ a thousand in the New York wholesale market is not as strong as distributors would like to see it at that level. Sand is moderately firm at fifty cents a cubic yard in large quantities alongside of dock and gravel is without price change, but in heavy demand. Crushed stone prices are steady in the face of heavy demand. Pipe and other commodities entering into building construction show a slight improvement in buying, but prices are still low and probably will continue to be so. Roofing material is in a weak market. Linseed oil and petroleum are steady, the former at 54 and 55 cents, city, while the latter continues to hold at $1.75 per barrel. Refined products are being cut in some parts of New Jersey owing to competition, especially in gasolene. Paints and varnish are without change.

Specifiers are slowly arriving at a better understanding of the unsettled condition of the wholesale building material market. Prices seem to be at extreme bottom. Some lines may go lower, but only at a greater sacrifice of profits. The tendency is to encourage buying even at the quotations now ruling until the pendulum of business begins to swing the other way. When that occurs, and there are many who believe that September is the appointed time, the low mill stocks will necessitate an immediate and decisive readjustment of prices which will be gauged by the improvement in demand. Contracts calling for fall deliveries are being made at only a slight advance over current quotations, but last quarter business is being guardedly signed.

This attitude is directly traceable to the recent optimistic utterances of men of large affairs citing the favorable outlook for prosperity crops, save possibly that of cotton; the decrease in the number of idle freight cars from 242,802 on May 15 to 232,334 on June 15, the hope almost universally entertained that the Interstate Commerce Commission will look with favor upon the railroads' application for permission to make a higher freight rate, the Supreme Court's decision in the long and short haul rate making case and the continued steady tone in the pig iron market. Current optimism is not based upon sentiment only, as it was at the first of the year, but rather upon clearly defined fundamentals of prosperity that seem to be shaping themselves for early realization.

LUMBER.

Long-Leaf Yellow Pine Steady—Hemlock on $24.50 Basis—N. C. Pine Quiet.

HEMLOCK continues without feature of interest. The larger shippers have continued to quote on a basis of $24.50 for Pennsylvania boards, but sales are very slight at that figure, by reason of the fact that consumption is small on the one hand, while the West Virginia shippers are sending quite a volume of their hemlock into the market at prices approximating $21.50 to $22. The leading Pennsylvania shippers have accumulated a fair stock, so that when the buyers get ready to take hold there will be a good supply of dry lumber from which to make shipments, according to a well known authority on market conditions.

North Carolina pine shows no improvement, and at the present range of prices, and the very sharp competition in the open market, there is said to be a little profit in the North Carolina pine trade, either for the manufacturer or for the wholesaler. Competition is very keen for such business as comes to the surface, and profits have been whittled down almost to the vanishing point.

Long-leaf yellow pine has developed no new life within the month, and the price list has developed no gain. In heavy timber there is very little doing at any of the yards, or in the way of contracts for large cargoes, while the trade in flooring, ceiling and partition is being so evenly divided between North Carolina pine, long-leaf yellow pine and Arkansas short-leaf, which latter is gaining ground here rapidly, that there is little opportunity to establish or maintain prices on a basis that shall be remunerative.

White pine is running so largely to small lots and mixed car orders that there is little satisfaction or encouragement in the line of business now being booked, or in the outlook for the immediate future. Stocks at the eastern distributing yards are in no sense excessive in any of the grades, but the buyer refuses to place round lot orders and the total volume of stock sold is far below normal for this season of the year.

The hardwoods are somewhat more buoyant and active than one month ago, though there is yet plenty of room for improvement. Reports from all of the hardwood centers in the south and west tell practically the same stories. There are no heavy accumulations at any point. The general condition of the market is perhaps reflected in the attitude of the officials of the National Hardwood Lumber Dealers' Association in their announced purpose to hold their annual meeting next week at Buffalo without attempting to make any change in the rules governing the inspection of hardwoods. There are no quotable changes in the market.

TO TAG LATH BUNDLES.

State Introduces New Regulation—Two Standard Sizes.

NEW YORK State has recently issued orders to the effect that all bundles of lath distributed here shall be tagged indicating whether the bundle contains 50 or 100 pieces. The order emanates from the State Sealer of Weights and Measures, who requires that all lath when delivered to the cousumer shall have the tag attached. This is in line with a demand previously made for a full-count bundle of shingles. The duty of tagging the bundles of lath rests upon the one who sells them to the ultimate consumer. That meaus the retail dealer. Arrangements may be made with most shippers for attaching the tag to each bundle to cover this point; but, of course, this will mean an added cost of 5 to 10 cents per thousand prices. Lath are seldom counted at the mill when they are being put up in bundles, but the lath crew is supposed to make up each bundle to the regulation size, and they are supposed to run over as often as under the figure. This particular regulation just issued stipulates that there may be a reasonable variation from the stated number in one bundle, provided there is an excess of equal amount in another bundle.

BRICK.

Registered Unloading Movement Breaks Season's Records.

UNLOADING of Hudson River common brick this week exceeded the volume recorded in any week so far this season by more than a quarter of a million, according to compilations made by the Greater New York Brick Company on consignments made to that house. Independent movements, if added, would bring the approximate total of Hudson River brick discharged in excess of 12,000,000, which reflects, perhaps, more clearly than any other single item could, the tendency toward improvement in the general building situation. Raritan River brick is also moving more freely into the New Jersey suburbs and into Brooklyn. Prices are unchanged in the wholesale market and cannnt be considered strong except on certain special grades.

Official transactions for Hudson River brick covering the week ending Thursday, June 25, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

MISCELLANEOUS.

Glass Weak—Pipe Dull—More Subway Work.

SPECIFICATIONS for plate and window g[lass] have not shown any great improvem[ent]. Prices are without change. Quality A is a l[it]tle steadier in price on jobbing business. Dealers have not shown sufficient confidence in the outlook to stock heavily.

Pipe, following the recent cut in quotations, has developed a little more activity. Wire mesh reinforcement is moderately active, with prices firmly held. Bar reinforcement reflects factory extension throughout the district, but general building orders continue to be light. Lime is without change in a quiet market. Roofing material is weak. Paint consumption has been light, but waterproofing interest say that they have had a remarkably active [se]ason so far, doubtless due to the progress of s[ub]way construction work.

Levering & Garrigues have been awarded the contract for 1,800 tons of structural steel for the Underhill loft building on West 38th street. The Hinkle Iron Works will fabricate 2,5[00] tons of structural steel for the Astor apa[rt]ments. The Public Service Commission of New Jersey announced this week that plans were ready for figuring 7,000 tons of structural steel for the Public Service Commission building. Richardson & Boynton have ordered 4,000 tons of foundry grades of pig iron for several eastern Pennsylvania furnaces.

Inquiries are now before the furnace masters calling for about 125,000 tons of foundry and steel making iron, which indicates a slight improvement in building requirements for the eastern territory.
